1 This town had been allotted to the tribe of Simeon; but it seems to have remained in the hands of the Philistines till made over to David by Achish.

2 Heb., 'days and four months.' Some of the ancient versions render this, 'four months;' omitting the 'year.' This is not improbable. David acquired many new adherents about this time: see 1 Chron. xii. 1—18.

3 In this proceeding David seems to have had in view his future advancement to the kingdom; clearing all the southern district of remaining hostile tribes.

4 This word was used by old English writers in the sense of inroad, and was synonymous with the Scottish term raid.

5 David's answer, though true in word, was false in fact, because designed to mislead.

6 Rather, 'And this was his custom all the time he dwelt in the country of the Philistines.' It is not a continuation of what David said to Achish, but a statement of the historian.

7 David's false step in going to Achish now brought him into serious difficulty; so that if God had not interfered on his behalf, he must either have fought against his own sovereign and people, or have made an ungrateful return to the Philistine king, who placed implicit confidence in him, offering to make him commander of his body-guard

—a post often given to a foreign dependent. David's ambiguous answer seems to show his perplexity.

8 This had probably been done in Saul's better days, under the guidance of Samuel, according to the Divine command in Lev. xx. 27, and Deut. xviii. 10, 11. It seems to be mentioned here as showing Saul's wickedness and desperation in having recourse to such a person (ver. 7).

9 The Philistines encamped on the hill called, in later times, 'Little Hermon,' on the north side of the deep valley which runs down from the plain of Jezreel to Bethshan and the Jordan; whilst Saul's army occupied the hills of Gilboa, on the south of the valley. The battle was fought on nearly the same ground on which Gideon had defeated the Midianites (Judg. vii.), and a little east of the scene of Sisera's defeat by Barak (Judg. iv., v.), and of Josiah's by Pharaoh-necho (2 Kings xxiii. 29, 30). The neighbourhood of the plain of Jezreel (or Esdraelon) has always been, even down to our own times, the great battle-field of Palestine; and is so referred to in Rev. xvi. 16, under the name 'Armageddon.'

10 Literally, 'a woman mistress of Ob;' i. e. powerful in divination. It is evident, from this narrative, that such persons pretended to have intercourse with the dead.

11 Endor was about four miles south of Mount Tabor, and not far from Shunem and Nain.

- 11 shall no punishment happen to thee for this thing. Then said the woman, Whom shall I bring up unto thee? And he said, Bring me up Samuel.
- 12 And when the woman saw Samuel, she cried with a loud voice: and the woman
- 13 spake to Saul, saying, Why hast thou deceived me? for thou art Saul. And the king said unto her, Be not afraid: for what sawest thou? And the woman said
- 14 unto Saul, I saw ^s gods¹ ascending out of the earth. And he said unto her, What form is he of? And she said, An old man cometh up; and he is covered with ^h a mantle. And Saul perceived that it was Samuel,² and he stooped with his face to the ground, and bowed himself.
- 15 And Samuel said to Saul, Why hast thou disquieted me, to bring me up? And Saul answered, ⁱ I am sore distressed; for the Philistines make war against me, and ^k God is departed from me, and ^l answereth me no more, neither by prophets, nor by dreams: therefore I have called thee, that thou mayest make known unto me what I shall do. Then said Samuel, ^m Wherefore then dost thou ask of me, seeing the LORD is departed from thee, and is become thine enemy?³ And the LORD hath done to him [or, ⁿ for himself], ^o as he spake by me: for the LORD hath rent the kingdom out of thine hand, and given it to thy neighbour, even
- 18 to David: ^p because thou obeyedst not the voice of the LORD, nor executedst his fierce wrath upon Amalek, therefore hath the LORD done this thing unto thee this day. Moreover ^q the LORD will also deliver Israel with thee into the hand of the Philistines: and ^r to-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me:⁴ the LORD also shall deliver the host of Israel into the hand of the Philistines.
- 20 Then Saul fell straightway all along on the earth, and was sore afraid, because of the words of Samuel: and there was no strength in him; for he had eaten no
- 21 bread all the day, nor all the night. And the woman came unto Saul, and saw that he was sore troubled, and said unto him, Behold, thine handmaid hath obeyed thy voice, and I have ^s put my life in my hand, and have hearkened unto
- 22 thy words which thou spakest unto me. Now therefore, I pray thee, hearken thou also unto the voice of thine handmaid, and let me set a morsel of bread before thee; and eat, that thou mayest have strength, when thou goest on thy
- 23 way. But he refused, and said, I will not eat. But his servants, together with the woman, compelled him; and he hearkened unto their voice. So he arose from
- 24 the earth, and sat upon the bed. And the woman had a fat calf in the house; and she hasted, and killed it, and took flour, and kneaded it, and did bake
- 25 unleavened bread thereof; and she brought it before Saul, and before his servants; and they did eat. Then they rose up, and went away that night.

David is sent back by the Philistine princes; pursues the plunderers of Ziklag, and recovers the captives and the spoil.

- 29 NOW 'the Philistines gathered together all their armies 'to Aphek:⁵ and the
- 2 Israelites pitched by a fountain which is in Jezreel. And the lords of the Philistines passed on by hundreds, and by thousands: but David and his men
- 3 passed on in the rereward ^x with Achish. Then said the princes of the Philistines, What do these Hebrews here? And Achish said unto the princes of the Philistines, Is not this David, the servant of Saul the king of Israel, which hath been with me ^y these days, or these years, and I have ^z found no fault in him since he fell
- 4 unto me unto this day? And the princes of the Philistines were wroth with him; and the princes of the Philistines said unto him, ^a Make this fellow return, that he may go again to his place which thou hast appointed him, and let him not go down with us to battle, lest ^b in the battle he be an adversary to us: for where-with should he reconcile himself unto his master? should it not be with the heads

² Heb., 'Samuel he,' or 'himself.' The clear and decided language of the passage forbids us to suppose that all this was a mere imposture practised by the woman, with or without demoniacal aid; and the teachings of Scripture respecting the limited power of Satan do not agree with the notion that Samuel was actually called up by such agency. We must therefore regard this as a Divine interposition, unexpected by both parties; either producing miraculously an impression upon the senses of Saul and of the woman—which is not impossible; or causing the real presence of Samuel—which, when a miracle is admitted, presents no greater difficulties, agrees more naturally with the language (for there is no intimation that the whole was a vision), and is analogous to the resuscitation of which we read elsewhere. See Matt. xxvii. 52, 53, etc. Thus Saul was strongly rebuked for his new crime; whilst, like Pharaoh, he received a last solemn warning on the eve of his destruction. It should be observed that the answer of Samuel was fulfilled to the letter; and was anything but such as the woman would have been likely to give.

³ The Sept. has, 'and is with thy neighbour,' or 'rival,' which agrees with ver. 17, and with ch. xv. 28.

⁴ That is, 'thou shalt be dead like me,' or 'shalt be in the unseen world.'

⁵ Not the Aphek in Judah, but in Issachar, in or near the plain of Jezreel.

- 6 Then Achish¹ called David, and said unto him, Surely, as the LORD liveth, thou hast been upright, and ^dthy going out and thy coming in with me in the host is good in my sight: for ^eI have not found evil in thee since the day of thy coming unto me unto this day: nevertheless the lords favour thee not. Wherefore now return, and go in peace, that thou displease not the lords of the Philistines.
- 8 And David said unto Achish, ^fBut what have I done? and what hast thou found in thy servant so long as I have been with thee unto this day, that I may not go fight against the enemies of my lord the king? And Achish answered and said to David, I know that thou art good in my sight, ^gas an angel of God: notwithstanding ^hthe princes of the Philistines² have said, He shall not go up with us to the battle. Wherefore now rise up early in the morning with thy master's servants that are come with thee: and as soon as ye be up early in the morning, and have light, depart.³
- 11 So David and his men rose up early to depart in the morning, to return into the land of the Philistines. ⁱAnd the Philistines went up to Jezreel.
- 30 And it came to pass, when David and his men were come to Ziklag⁴ on the third day, that the ^kAmalekites had invaded the south,⁵ and Ziklag, and smitten Ziklag, and burned it with fire; and had taken the women captives, that were therein: they slew not⁶ any, either great or small, but carried them away, and went on their way. So David and his men came to the city, and, behold, it was burned with fire; and their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, were taken captives. Then David and the people that were with him lifted up their voice and wept, until they had no more power to weep. And David's 'two wives were taken captives, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite. And David was greatly distressed; ^mfor the people spake of stoning him, because the soul of all the people was grieved, every man for his sons and for his daughters: ⁿbut David encouraged himself in the LORD⁷ his God.
- 7 ^oAnd David said to Abiathar the priest, Ahimelech's son, I pray thee, bring me hither the ephod. And Abiathar brought thither the ephod to David. ^pAnd David inquired at the LORD, saying, Shall I pursue after this troop? shall I overtake them? And he answered him, Pursue: for thou shalt surely overtake ^qthem, and without fail recover all. So David went, he and the six hundred men that were with him, and came to the brook Besor,⁸ where those that were left behind stayed. But David pursued, he and four hundred men: ^rfor two hundred abode behind, which were so faint that they could not go over the brook Besor.
- 11 And they found an Egyptian in the field, and brought him to David, ^sand gave him bread, and he did eat; and they made him drink water; and they gave him a piece of a cake of figs, and two clusters of raisins: and ^twhen he had eaten, his spirit came again to him: for he had eaten no bread, nor drunk any water, three days⁹ and three nights. And David said unto him, To whom belongest thou? and whence art thou? And he said, I am a young man of Egypt, servant to an Amalekite; and my master left me, because three days ago I fell sick.
- 14 We made an invasion upon the south of 'the Cherethites, and upon the coast which belongeth to Judah, and upon the south of 'Caleb; and we burned Ziklag with fire. And David said to him, Canst thou bring me down to this company? And he said, Swear unto me by God, that thou wilt neither kill me, ^unor deliver me into the hands of my master, and I will bring thee down to this company.
- 16 And when he had brought him down, behold, they were spread abroad upon all the earth, ^veating and drinking, and dancing,¹⁰ because of all the great spoil that they had taken out of the land of the Philistines, and out of the land of Judah.

¹ The generous confidence of this noble-minded king, and especially his appeal to Jehovah, are worthy of particular notice.

² That is, the chiefs of the other Philistine cities; for Achish was lord of Gath only, though he seems to have been commander-in-chief of the army.

⁴ David's force received an important increase at this time; and a greater number soon afterwards joined him: see 1 Chron. xii. 20—22.

⁵ The strength of the country having been drawn towards Jezreel, the Amalekites took the opportunity of invading the defenceless south.

⁶ They spared them not from considerations of humanity, but to use them as slaves. All the males capable of bearing arms were absent.

⁷ He called to mind the perfections and providence of God, and his promises to himself; and doubtless urged these considerations upon his followers.

⁸ Besor is supposed to be the winter-torrent called Wady-Gaza. It may be translated 'Valley Besor;' as in Eastern countries the same word is used for 'valley' and 'brook,' because most of the valleys have brooks running through them in the winter season. See Numb. xiii. 23, and note.

⁹ That is, the whole of one day, and part of two others. Before the Babylonish captivity, hours are not mentioned in the Bible; though often met with in the book of Daniel. Hence it appears that the Israelites did not divide the day into hours; and the total absence of this word is a mark of the high antiquity of these records.

¹⁰ Supposing David and his men to be far away with the Philistine army.

17 And David smote them from the twilight even unto the evening of the next day :
and there escaped not a man of them, save four hundred young men, which rode 18 upon camels, and fled. And David recovered all that the Amalekites had carried 19 away : and David rescued his two wives. And there was nothing lacking to them, neither small nor great, neither sons nor daughters, neither spoil, nor any 20 thing that they had taken to them : ^z David recovered all. And David took all the flocks and the herds, which they drave before those other cattle, and said,
This is David's spoil.

21 And David came to the ^a two hundred men which were so faint that they could they went forth to meet David, and to meet the people that were with him : and 22 when David came near to the people, he ^b saluted them. Then answered all the wicked men and men ^c of Belial, of those that went with David, and said, Because they went not with us, we will not give them ought of the spoil that we have recovered, save to every man his wife and his children, that they may lead them 23 away, and depart. Then said David, Ye shall not do so, ^d my brethren, with Defeat of the Israelites by the Philistines ; and death of Saul and his sons.

31 NOW ^p the Philistines fought against Israel : and the men of Israel fled from 2 before the Philistines, and fell down slain in mount ^q Gilboa. And the Philistines

¹ This was a different law from that in Numb. xxxi. 27 : that related to the whole people, this to the soldiers only.

² This enumeration shows that the partisans and friends of David were by no means inconsiderable ; and, though most numerous in Judah, were not confined to that tribe.

³ In 1 Chron. x. 10, it is said that 'they fastened his head in the temple of Dagon.'

⁴ This was a common practice among the ancients on such occasions.

THE SECOND BOOK OF SAMUEL,

OTHERWISE CALLED

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE KINGS.

THIS book is wholly occupied with the history of the reign of David, embracing a period of forty years. It commences with his accession to the sovereignty of Judah, and exhibits his growing strength, until his authority is established over all Israel. It relates the capture of Jerusalem, which he constituted the capital of his kingdom, both for civil and sacred purposes; his subjugation of the whole of the promised land, and of the adjacent nations, on the east and south, which had so greatly molested the Israelites; thus extending his sway to the utmost boundaries of the land promised to Abraham; and his zealous and successful efforts to promote the prosperity of his people, to provide for the worship of God, and to effect the reformation of religion. In connection with these events are impartially recorded his grievous aberrations from the path of duty, and the painful chastisements, both domestic and public, with which he was visited in consequence.

In the history of David begins the fulfilment of Jacob's prediction respecting the pre-eminence of the tribe of Judah (Gen. xlix. 8). The elevation of the shepherd of Bethlehem to the throne is followed by the greatness of his family and of the tribe; and the men of Judah appear as the foremost on all important occasions. This accomplishment of the first part of the ancient prophecies respecting the favoured tribe, could not but engage the attention of pious Israelites to other portions which remained yet to be fulfilled, respecting Him to whom the 'gathering of the people' was to be.

The contents of this book may be arranged under two general divisions:—

I. THE TRIUMPHS OF DAVID; comprising David's lamentation over Saul and Jonathan (ch. i.); his election as king, first over Judah, and then over all Israel (ii.—iv.); his capture of Jerusalem, and victories over the Philistines (v.); the bringing up of the ark to Jerusalem (vi.); his desire to build a temple, God's covenant of mercy with him, and his prayer and thanksgiving (vii.); the subjugation of the Philistines, Moabites, Syrians, Ammonites, etc. (viii.—x.)

II. THE TROUBLES OF DAVID, with their cause; his repentance, and subsequent history; including David's sin in respect to Uriah, and Nathan's reproof (xi., xii.); Amnon's sin, and murder by Absalom (xiii.); Absalom's rebellion, ending in his defeat and death (xiv.—xix.); rebellion of Sheba, and its suppression (xx.); avengement of the Gibeonites (xxi. 1—14); battles with the Philistines (xxi. 15—22); David's psalm of thanksgiving, and last words (xxii., xxiii. 1—7); his chief military officers (xxiii. 8—39); his offence in numbering the people, with its punishment; his prayer and sacrifice (xxiv.)

Tidings of Saul's death brought to David; his lamentation for Saul and Jonathan.

- 1 NOW it came to pass after the death of Saul, when David was returned from 2 the slaughter of the Amalekites, and David had abode two days in Ziklag;
3 it came even to pass on the third day, that, behold, ^aa man came out of the 4 camp from Saul ^cwith his clothes rent, and earth upon his head: and so it was,
5 when he came to David, that he fell to the earth, and did obeisance. And David 6 said unto him, From whence comest thou? And he said unto him, Out of the 7 camp of Israel am I escaped. And David said unto him, How went the matter?
8 I pray thee, tell me. And he answered, That the people are fled from the battle, 9 and many of the people also are fallen and dead; and Saul and Jonathan his son 10 are dead also.
11 And David said unto the young man that told him, How knowest thou that 12 Saul and Jonathan his son be dead? And the young man that told him said, ¹As
I happened by chance upon ^amount Gilboa, behold, ^cSaul leaned upon his spear; and, lo, the chariots and horsemen followed hard after him. And when he looked behind him, he saw me, and called unto me. And I answered, Here am I. And he said unto me, Who art thou? And I answered him, I am an Amalekite. He said unto me again, Stand, I pray thee, upon me, and slay me; for anguish is come upon me, because my life is yet whole in me. So I stood upon him, and ^fslew him, because I was sure that he could not live after that he was fallen: and I took the crown ²that was upon his head, and the bracelet ³that was on his arm, and have brought them hither unto my lord.
Then David took hold on his clothes, and ^grent them; and likewise all the men that were with him: and they mourned, and wept, and ^hfasted until even, for Saul, and for Jonathan his son, and for the people of the LORD, and for the house of Israel; because they were fallen by the sword.

1 This Amalekite probably followed the camp in order to plunder the slain after the battle (1 Sam. xxxi. 8); and finding the body and crown of Saul, was induced, by the hope of winning David's favour, to declare falsely that he had given the fatal wound.

2 It is most likely that this 'crown' was a cap surmounted with a broad fillet of gold, intended to serve also as a helmet.

3 In the East, bracelets or armlets, when worn by men, are generally royal insignia.

13 And David said unto the young man that told him, Whence art thou? And 14 he answered, I am the son of a stranger, an Amalekite. And David said unto him, ⁱHow wast thou not ^kafraid to ^lstretch forth thine hand to destroy the 15 LORD's anointed? And ^mDavid called one of the young men, and said, Go near, 16 and fall upon him. And he smote him that he died. And David said unto him, ⁿThy blood be upon thy head; for ^othy mouth hath testified against thee, saying,
 I have slain the LORD's anointed.

17 And David lamented with this lamentation over Saul and over Jonathan his 18 son: (^palso he bade them teach the children of Judah the use of the bow: ¹behold, it is written ^qin the book of Jasher.)²

19 ^rThe beauty³ of Israel is slain upon thy high places:
^sHow are the mighty fallen!

20 ^tTell it not in Gath,—publish it not in the streets of Askelon;
 Lest ^uthe daughters⁴ of the Philistines rejoice,
 Lest the daughters of ^xthe uncircumcised triumph

21 Ye ^ymountains of Gilboa, ^zlet there be no dew,
 Neither let there be rain, upon you, nor fields of offerings:
 For there the shield of the mighty is vilely cast away,
 The shield of Saul as though he had not been ^aanointed with oil.⁵

22 From the blood of the slain,—from the fat of the mighty, ^bThe bow of Jonathan turned not back,
 And the sword of Saul returned not empty.

23 Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives,
 And in their death they were not divided:
 They were ^cswifter than eagles,—they were ^dstronger than lions.

24 Ye daughters of Israel, weep over Saul,
 Who clothed you in scarlet,⁶ with other delights,
 Who put on ornaments of gold upon your apparel.

25 ^eHow are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle!
 O Jonathan, thou wast slain in thine high places.

26 I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan:
 Very pleasant hast thou been unto me:
^fThy love to me was wonderful,—passing the love of women.

27 ^gHow are the mighty fallen,—and the weapons of war perished!

*David reigns over Judah, and Ish-bosheth over Israel; battle at Gibeon between

2 AND it came to pass after this, that David ^hinquired⁷ of the LORD, saying,
 Shall I go up into any of the cities of Judah? And the LORD said unto him, Go up. And David said, Whither shall I go up? And he said, Unto ⁱHebron.
 2 So David went up thither, and his ^ktwo wives also, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess,
 3 and Abigail Nabal's wife the Carmelite. And ^lhis men that were with him did David bring up, every man with his household: and they dwelt in the cities of 1 The words 'the use of' are not in the original; and

 'The Bow' appears, from the context, to be the title of the following elegy; derived, perhaps, according to Oriental custom, either from the occurrence of the word 'bow' in ver. 22, or from the facts related in 1 Sam. xxxi. 3.
 Comp. Hos. i. 5.

2 See note on Josh. x. 13.

3 The Hebrew word translated 'beauty' signifies also an antelope, or gazelle—an animal greatly admired for its gracefulness and agility. It is repeatedly referred to as a model of that swiftness of foot which was so valuable an acquirement in a warrior. See ver. 23; ch. ii. 18; 1 Chron.
 xii. 8. This passage may therefore be translated, 'Gazelle of Israel! slain upon thine own mountains!' and probably refers exclusively to Jonathan: see ver. 25.

4 Alluding to the triumphal songs which were sung by the women. See 1 Sam. xviii. 7.

5 These words may also be rendered, 'The shield of the mighty ones is polluted (i. e. with dust and blood), the shield of Saul is not anointed with oil.' See Isa. xxi. 5.

 This would then be a poetic intimation that Saul, in the hurry of despair, had neglected the usual preparations for the battle.

6 This may allude either to a general increase of wealth through the country during the reign of Saul, or, more probably, to booty taken in war. See Judg. v. 28—30.

7 David does not take a single step towards the attainment of the promised kingdom without Divine direction; inquiring first whether he should await an invitation to fill the vacant throne, and then how far he should go in attracting to himself the notice of the people. Hebron, whither God directed him to proceed, was peculiarly fitted for his purpose, on account of its patriarchal associations, its Levitical sacredness, and its central position in the tribe of Judah.

8 Jabesh-gilead was one of the largest towns on the east of the Jordan; and it was therefore important to secure its adherence to David's cause.

said unto them, ^o Blessed be ye of the LORD, that ye have showed this kindness 6 unto your lord, even unto Saul, and have buried him. And now ^p the LORD show kindness and truth unto you: and ^q I also will requite you this kindness, because 7 ye have done this thing. Therefore now let your hands be strengthened, and be ye valiant: for your master Saul is dead, and also the house of Judah have anointed me king over them.

8 But ^r Abner the son of Ner, captain of Saul's host, took ^s Ish-bosheth the son 9 of Saul, and brought him over to Mahanaim; and made him king over Gilead, and over the Ashurites, and over Jezreel, and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin, 10 and over all Israel. Ish-bosheth Saul's son was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and reigned two years.¹ But the house of Judah followed 11 David. And ^t the time that David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah was seven years and six months.

12 And Abner the son of Ner, and the servants of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, 13 went out from Mahanaim to ^u Gibeon.² And Joab³ the son of Zeruiah, and the servants of David, went out, and met together by ^x the pool of Gibeon: and they sat down, the one on the one side of the pool, and the other on the other side of 14 the pool.⁴ And Abner said to Joab, Let the young men now arise, and ^y play 15 before us.⁵ And Joab said, Let them arise. Then there arose and went over by number twelve of Benjamin, which pertained to Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, and 16 twelve of the servants of David. And they caught every one his fellow by the head, and thrust his sword in his fellow's side; so they fell down together:
wherefore that place was called Helkath-hazzurim [i. e. the field of strong men], 17 which is in Gibeon. And there was a very sore battle that day; and Abner was beaten, and the men of Israel, before the servants of David.

18 And there were ^z three sons of Zeruiah there, Joab, and Abishai, and Asahel:
19 and Asahel was ^a as light of foot ^b as a wild roe. And Asahel pursued after Abner; and in going he turned not to the right hand nor to the left from following 20 Abner. Then Abner looked behind him, and said, Art thou Asahel? And he 21 answered, I am. And Abner said to him, Turn thee aside to thy right hand or to thy left, and lay thee hold on one of the young men, and take thee his armour⁶ 22 [or, spoil^c]. But Asahel would not turn aside from following of him. And Abner said again to Asahel, Turn thee aside from following me: wherefore should I smite thee to the ground? how then should I hold up my face to Joab 23 thy brother? Howbeit he refused to turn aside: wherefore Abner with the hinder end⁷ of the spear smote him ^d under the fifth rib,⁸ that the spear came out behind him; and he fell down there, and died in the same place: and it came to pass, that as many as came to the place where Asahel fell down and died stood 24 still. Joab also and Abishai pursued after Abner: and the sun went down when they were come to the hill of Ammah, that lieth before Giah by the way of the wilderness of Gibeon.

25 And the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together after Abner, and 26 became one troop, and stood on the top of an hill. Then Abner called to Joab, and said, Shall ^e the sword devour for ever? knowest thou not that it will be bitterness in the latter end? how long shall it be then, ere thou bid the people 27 return from following their brethren? And Joab said, As God liveth, unless ^f thou hadst spoken,⁹ surely then in the morning the people had gone up every one 28 from following his brother. So Joab blew a trumpet, and all the people stood still, and pursued after Israel no more, neither fought they any more.

29 And Abner and his men walked all that night through the plain, and passed 30 over Jordan, and went through all Bithron, and they came to Mahanaim. And Joab returned from following Abner: and when he had gathered all the people 31 together, there lacked of David's servants nineteen men and Asahel. But the servants of David had smitten of Benjamin, and of Abner's men, so that three

1 Some have inferred, from ch. iii. 1, that Ish-bosheth reigned longer than two years; but others think that there were considerable intervals before and after his short reign, during which the national affairs were in an unsettled state.

2 As Gibeon was near the frontier of Judah, Abner's movement was naturally regarded by David as aggressive.

3 This distinguished commander of David's forces was son of David's sister Zeruiah. Hence he and his brothers, Abishai and Asahel, are designated by their mother's rather than their father's name.

4 The men on both sides were probably unwilling to fight, feeling that they were fellow-countrymen; and

David's men had, it is likely, received instructions to act entirely on the defensive, in accordance with his wise policy: see ver. 27.

5 This challenge to a trial of strength seems to have been designed by Abner to bring on a general engagement.

6 Ancient warriors valued highly, as a trophy, the armour of an enemy slain by their own hand.

7 The lower end had a spike, which was used for fixing the spear in the ground (1 Sam. xxvi. 7).

8 Rather, 'in the abdomen.' Asahel's swiftness, upon which he presumed so much, hastened his death.

9 Joab throws the blame of the battle on Abner, whose proposal (see vers. 13, 14) had led to the slaughter.

32 hundred and threescore men died. And they took up Asabel, and buried him in the sepulchre of his father, which was in Beth-lehem. And Joab and his men went all night, and they came to Hebron at break of day.

David's growing power, and his family; Abner comes over to him, but is killed by Joab.

3 NOW there was long war between the house of Saul and the house of David: but David waxed stronger and stronger, and the house of Saul waxed weaker and weaker. And ^e unto David were sons born in Hebron: and his firstborn was Amnon,^h of Ahinoam the Jezreelitess; and his second, ⁱ Chileab, of ^k Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite; and the third, Absalom the son of Maacah the daughter of Talmai king ^l of Geshur; and the fourth, ^m Adonijah the son of Haggith; and the fifth, Shephatiah the son of Abital; and the sixth, Ithream, by Eglah David's wife. These were born to David in Hebron.

6 And it came to pass, while there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, that Abner made himself strong¹ for the house of Saul. And Saul had a concubine, whose name was ⁿ Rizpah, the daughter of Aiah: and Ish-bosheth said to Abner, Wherefore hast thou ^o gone in unto my father's concubine?² Then was Abner very wroth for the words of Ish-bosheth, and said, Am I ^p a dog's head, which against Judah do show kindness this day unto the house of Saul thy father, to his brethren, and to his friends, and have not delivered thee into the hand of David, and thou chargest me to-day with a fault concerning this woman? ^q So do God to Abner, and more also, except, ^r as the LORD hath sworn to David, even so I do to him; to translate the kingdom from the house of Saul, and to set up the throne of David over Israel and over Judah, ^s from Dan even to Beer-sheba. And he could not answer Abner a word again, because ^t he feared him.

12 And Abner sent messengers to David on his behalf, saying, Whose is the land? saying also, Make thy league with me, and, behold, my hand shall be with thee, to bring about all Israel unto thee. And he said, Well; I will make a league with thee: but one thing I require of thee, that is, ^u Thou shalt not see my face, except thou first bring ^v Michal Saul's daughter,³ when thou comest to see my face. And David sent messengers to Ish-bosheth Saul's son, saying, Deliver me my wife Michal, which I espoused to me ^w for an hundred foreskins of the Philistines. And Ish-bosheth sent, and took her from her husband, even from ^x Phaltiel the son of Laish. And her husband went with her along weeping behind her to ^y Bahurim. Then said Abner unto him, Go, return. And he returned.

17 And Abner had communication with the elders of Israel, saying, Ye sought for David in times past to be king over you: now then do it: ^b for the LORD hath spoken of David, saying, By the hand of my servant David I will save my people Israel out of the hand of the Philistines, and out of the hand of all their enemies. 19 And Abner also spake in the ears of ^c Benjamin:⁴ and Abner went also to speak in the ears of David in Hebron all that seemed good to Israel, and that seemed good to the whole house of Benjamin. So Abner came to David to Hebron, and twenty men with him. And David made Abner and the men that were with him a feast. And Abner said unto David, I will arise and go, and ^d will gather all Israel unto my lord the king, that they may make a league with thee, and that thou mayest ^e reign over all that thine heart desireth. And David sent Abner away; and he went in peace.

22 And, behold, the servants of David and Joab came from pursuing a troop,⁵ and brought in a great spoil with them: but Abner was not with David in Hebron; for he had sent him away, and he was gone in peace. When Joab and all the host that was with him were come, they told Joab, saying, Abner the son of Ner came to the king, and he hath sent him away, and he is gone in peace. Then Joab came to the king, and said, What hast thou done? behold, Abner came unto thee; why is it that thou hast sent him away, and he is quite gone? Thou knowest Abner the son of Ner, that he came to deceive thee, and to know ^f thy going out and thy coming in, and to know all that thou doest.

26 And when Joab was come out from David, he sent messengers after Abner, which brought him again from the well of Sirah: but David knew it not. And

² According to the usages of the East, the wives and concubines of a deceased sovereign became the property of his successor; so that the act imputed to Abner might be interpreted as a design upon the crown.

³ Michal had not been legally divorced, but forcibly separated from her husband, as Phaltiel might have known. David probably demanded her restoration now partly on political grounds; hereby reminding the people of his connection with Saul's family.

⁴ Saul having been of this tribe, the Benjamites were specially devoted to his family.

⁵ Probably a troop of border-marauders, who had taken advantage of the civil discords of the country.

when Abner was returned to Hebron, Joab ^g took him aside in the gate to speak with him quietly [or, peaceably], and smote him ¹ there ^h under the fifth rib, that he died, for the blood of ⁱ Asahel his brother.

28 And afterward when David heard it, he said, I and my kingdom are guiltless
29 before the LORD for ever from the blood of Abner the son of Ner: ^k let it rest on the head of Joab, and on all his father's house; and let there not fail from the house of Joab one ^l that hath an issue, or that is ^m a leper, or that leaneth on a staff, or that falleth on the sword, or that lacketh bread. So Joab and Abishai his brother slew Abner, because he had slain their brother ⁿ Asahel at Gibeon in the battle.

31 And David said to Joab, and to all the people that were with him, ^o Rend your clothes, and ^p gird you with sackcloth, and mourn before Abner. And king David himself followed the bier. And they buried Abner in Hebron: and the king lifted up his voice, and wept at the grave of Abner; and all the people wept. And the king lamented over Abner, and said, Died Abner as a ^q fool ² dieth?

34 ^r Thy hands were not bound, ³—nor thy feet put into fetters:
As a man falleth before wicked men,—so fellest thou.

35 And all the people wept again over him. And when all the people came ^s to cause David to eat meat while it was yet day, David sware, saying, 'So do God to me, and more also, if I taste bread, or aught else, ^t till the sun be down.
36 And all the people took notice of it, and it pleased them: as whatsoever the king did pleased all the people.

37 For all the people and all Israel understood that day that it was not of the king 38 to slay Abner the son of Ner. And the king said unto his servants, Know ye not 39 that there is ^x a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel? And I am this day weak, though anointed king; and these men the sons of Zeruiah ^y be too hard for me: ^z the LORD shall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedness.

Ish-bosheth is slain; his murderers are punished by David.

4 AND when Saul's son heard that Abner was dead in Hebron, ^a his hands were 2 feeble, and all the Israelites were ^b troubled. And Saul's son had two men that were captains of bands: the name of the one was Baanah, and the name of the other Rechab, the sons of Rimmon a Beerothite, of the children of Benjamin:
3 (for ^c Beeroth ⁴ also was reckoned to Benjamin: and the Beerothites fled to ^d Gittaim, and were sojourners there until this day.)

4 And ^e Jonathan, Saul's son, had a son that was lame ⁵ of his feet. He was five years old when the tidings came of Saul and Jonathan ^f out of Jezreel, and his nurse took him up, and fled: and it came to pass, as she made haste to flee, that he fell, and became lame. And his name was ^g Mephibosheth.

5 And the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, Rechab and Baanah, went, and came about the heat of the day to the house of Ish-bosheth, who lay on a bed at noon.
6 And they came thither into the midst of the house, as though they would have fetched wheat; ⁶ and they smote him ^h under the fifth rib: and Rechab and Baanah
7 his brother escaped. For when they came into the house, he lay on his bed in his bedchamber, and they smote him, and slew him, and beheaded him, and took 8 his head, and gat them away through the ⁱ plain all night. And they brought the head of Ish-bosheth unto David to Hebron, and said to the king, Behold the head of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul thine enemy, ^j which sought thy life; and 9 ^k the LORD hath avenged my lord the king this day of Saul, and of his seed.

9 And David answered Rechab and Baanah his brother, the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, and said unto them, As the LORD liveth, ^l who hath redeemed my 10 soul out of all adversity, when ^m one told me, saying, Behold, Saul is dead, thinking to have brought good tidings, I took hold of him, and slew him in 11 Ziklag, who thought that I would have given him a reward for his tidings: how much more, ⁿ when wicked men have slain a righteous person in his own house

^m ch. 1. 2—15.

ⁿ 1 Ki. 2. 32.

1 The justice of God appears in the death of Abner, who had, from personal and ambitious motives, knowingly opposed His declared will (see ver. 9), and had at last deserted Ish-bosheth only through pique or revenge.

2 Rather, 'as a vile person,' or 'criminal.'

3 The hands and feet of malefactors were bound. By these expressions David meant that Abner had not been condemned in the regular course of justice.

4 Beeroth originally belonged to the Gibeonites; and they had been allowed to remain there after this district, at the general partition of the country, was allotted to the tribe of Benjamin. See Josh. ix. 17, 18; xviii. 25.

5 Which, according to Eastern notions, would exclude Mephibosheth from succeeding to the throne. This bodily defect probably emboldened the murderers of his uncle; for he, as the next heir, was the avenger of blood.

6 For the use of the soldiers, who were maintained at the king's charge. The Greek version is, 'Now, behold! the door-keeper of his house had been cleaning wheat; and, being drowsy, had fallen asleep. So Rechab and Baanah, the brothers, escaped notice, and went into the house,' etc.

upon his bed? shall I not therefore now ^o require his blood of your hand, and take 12 you away from the earth? And David ^p commanded his young men, and they slew them, and cut off their hands and their feet, and hanged them up over the pool in Hebron. But they took the head of Ish-bosheth, and buried it in the ^q sepulchre of Abner in Hebron.

*David is made king over all Israel; takes the fortress of Zion, and makes it his capital;
 defeats the Philistines.*

5 THEN ^r came all the tribes of Israel ¹ to David unto Hebron, and spake, saying,
 2 Behold, ^s we are thy bone and thy flesh. Also in time past, when Saul was king over us, 'thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the LORD said to thee, "Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be ^x a captain 3 over Israel. ^y So all the elders of Israel came to the king to Hebron; ^z and king
 David made a league ² with them in Hebron ^a before the LORD: and they ^b anointed 4 David king over Israel. David was ^c thirty years old when he began to reign, 5 ^d and he reigned forty years. In Hebron he reigned over Judah ^e seven years and six months: and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years over all Israel and Judah.

6 And the king and his men went ^f to Jerusalem unto ^g the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land: which spake unto David, saying, Except thou take away the blind and the lame, ³ thou shalt not come in hither: (thinking David 7 cannot come in hither: nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion: ^h the 8 same is the city of David.) And David said on that day, Whosoever getteth up to the gutter, ⁴ and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, ⁱ he shall be chief and captain. ⁵ Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house. ⁶

9 So David dwelt in the fort, and called it ^k the city of David. And David 10 built round about from ^l Millo and inward. And David went on, and grew great, and the LORD God of hosts was with him.

11 And ^m Hiram king of Tyre ⁷ sent messengers to David, and cedar trees, and 12 carpenters, and masons: ⁸ and ⁿ they built David an house. And David perceived that the LORD had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom for ^o his people Israel's sake.

13 And ^p David took him more concubines and wives out of Jerusalem, after he was come from Hebron: and there were yet sons ⁹ and daughters born to David.

14 And ^r these be the names of those that were born unto him in Jerusalem;

15 ^s Shammuah, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon, Ithar also, and ^t Elishua, 16 and Nepheg, and Japhia, and Elishama, and ^u Eliada, and Eliphalet.

17 ^v But when the Philistines heard that they had anointed David king over Israel, all the Philistines came up to seek David; and David heard ^w of it, ^x and 18 went down to the hold. The Philistines also came and spread themselves in 19 ^y the valley of Rephaim. ¹⁰ And David ^z inquired of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up to the Philistines? ¹¹ wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD said unto David, Go up: for I will doubtless deliver the Philistines into thine 20 hand. And David came to ^a Baal-perazim, and David smote them there, and said, ¹ A list of them is given in 1 Chron. xii. 23—40.

² Or, 'covenant.' The kings of Israel were not absolute monarchs (see 1 Sam. x. 25; 1 Kings xii.); but whilst subject to the Divine laws, they were also bound by conditions agreed upon between them and the people.

³ This passage (vers. 6—8) is very difficult. The words of the Jebusites appear to be a contemptuous boast that the most disabled part of the inhabitants were sufficient to repel David's assault on the fortress. The lower city had been early captured, though probably not long retained (see Judg. i. 8, 21; xix. 10); for the fort of Zion, which was the highest part, had defied all the power of Israel, and was reckoned almost impregnable.

⁵ These words are supplied from 1 Chron. xi. 6. It is probable that David made this proposal, in part to avoid giving offence to either the men of Judah or the ten tribes by his choice of a captain, and partly in the hope that thus Joab might be superseded. See ch. iii. 39.

⁶ The meaning of this sentence is uncertain. But it should probably be rendered, 'Because they said, The blind and the lame should not let him come into the house (or fort).' Of course, neither the taunts of the Jebusites nor David's hatred are to be understood as referring to any particular persons.

⁷ Tyre was a great commercial city on the sea-coast north of Palestine. Its inhabitants were not of the devoted nations, nor at enmity with the Israelites.

⁸ The Israelites appear to have made little progress, up to this time, in the constructive arts: but their Tyrian neighbours greatly excelled in all branches of commercial and manufacturing industry (see Ezek. xxvii., xxviii.); and to them a friendly intercourse with the interior was at all times of great importance: see Acts xii. 20.

⁹ David had in all eighteen sons; his daughters are not named (except Tamar), as they were not concerned in state affairs, nor were their names entered in the national records.

¹⁰ Or, 'valley of the giants;' south-west of Jerusalem.

¹¹ David's frequent inquiries of the Lord present a striking contrast to the conduct of his predecessor, who commonly acted solely under the impulse of his own will, and feeling, and judgment; and the success of their respective enterprises was as remarkably different.

The LORD hath broken forth upon mine enemies before me, as the breach of waters. Therefore he called the name of that place Baal-perazim [i. e. The plain of breaches]. And there they left their images,¹ and David and his men^b burned them.

22 ^c And the Philistines came up yet again, and spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim. And when ^d David inquired of the LORD, he said, Thou shalt not go up; but fetch a compass behind them, and come upon them over against the mulberry trees.² And let it be, when thou ^e hearest the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees, that then thou shalt bestir thyself: for then ^f shall the LORD go out before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines. And David did so, as the LORD had commanded him; and smote the Philistines from ^g Geba until thou come to ^h Gazer.

David brings up the ark to Jerusalem.

6 AGAIN, David gathered together all the chosen men of Israel, thirty thousand.

2 And ⁱ David arose, and went with all the people that were with him from ^k Baale³ of Judah, to bring up from thence the ark of God, whose name is called by the name of the LORD of hosts [or, at which the name, even the name of the LORD of hosts, was called upon], ^l that dwelleth between the cherubim.

3 And they set the ark of God ^m upon a new cart,⁴ and brought it out of the house of Abinadab that was in ⁿ Gibeah: and Uzzah and Ahio, the sons of 4 Abinadab, drove the new cart. And they brought it out of ^o the house of Abinadab which was at Gibeah, accompanying the ark of God: and Ahio went before the 5 ark. And David and all the house of Israel played before the LORD on all manner of *instruments made of fir*⁵ wood, even on harps, and on psalteries, and on timbrels, and on cornets, and on cymbals.

6 And when they came to ^p Nachon's threshingfloor, Uzzah ^q put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it; for the oxen shook it [or, stumbled].

7 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzzah; and ^r God smote him there for *his error*⁶ [or, rashness]; and there he died by the ark of God.

8 And David was displeased, because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzzah: and he called the name of the place Perez-uzzah [i. e. The breach of Uzzah] to this day.

9 And ^s David was afraid of the LORD that day, and said, How shall the ark of 10 the LORD come to me? So David would not remove the ark of the LORD unto him into the city of David: but David carried it aside into the house of Obed- 11 edom ^t the Gittite.⁷ ^u And the ark of the LORD continued in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months: and the LORD ^x blessed⁸ Obed-edom, and all his household.

12 And it was told king David, saying, The LORD hath blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God. ^y So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom into 13 the city of David with gladness. And it was so, that when ^z they that bare the 14 ark of the LORD had gone six paces, he sacrificed ^a oxen and fatlings. And David ^b danced⁹ before the LORD with all his might; and David was girded 15 ^c with a linen ephod. ^d So David and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the LORD with shouting, and with ^e the sound of the trumpet.

1 Probably the small tutelary gods which the soldiers carried with them as protectors in battle.

2 It is most likely that these were poplars or willows, which are common in Palestine.

3 None of the ancient versions give this as a proper name: the Septuagint, Vulgate, and Syriac rendering it, 'the chief men of Judah;' as in Judg. ix. 23, etc., 'the men of Shechem;' and in 1 Sam. xxiii. 11, 12, 'the men of Keilah.' If, however, it be the name of a place, we must either suppose an error in a letter, and read 'to' instead of 'from,' in accordance with 1 Chron. xiii. 6, or regard 1 Chron. xiii. 1—6 as speaking of David's going to Kirjath-jearim; whilst this verse begins with his starting from that town to the house of Abinadab on the hill, at a short distance.

4 This mode of conveying the ark was forbidden by the law, which strictly enjoined that it should be carried by its staves on the shoulders of the Levites: see Numb. iv. 15.

5 Rather, 'cypress.' The Septuagint, instead of 'instruments made of fir wood,' has, 'with all their might and with songs;' and this agrees with 1 Chron. xiii. 8;

but it is by no means certain that this is to be preferred to the text.

6 Uzzah, as a Levite, ought to have remembered that he was forbidden to touch anything but the staves by which the ark was carried. The neglect of express Divine directions is sinful, and therefore dangerous.

7 Obed-edom was a Levite of the family of Kohath, to whom the care of the ark was by law entrusted; and is called a 'Gittite,' from the Levitical town of Gath-rimmon (Josh. xx. 24, 25; 1 Chron. vi. 69). See also 1 Chron. xv. 24.

8 Evidently with some outward and immediate tokens of Divine favour (see ver. 12), which were perpetuated to his children: see 1 Chron. xxvi. 5—8. The ark is a guest by which none who welcome it shall lose.

9 In the simpler states of society men are accustomed to give more vigorous expression to their feelings than we commonly do. There was ample cause for David's holy exultation in having the ark, which was both the symbol of Jehovah's presence and the centre of attraction to the pious, lodged in the metropolis, and in having the public worship of God fully restored.

daughter looked through a window, and saw king David leaping and dancing before the LORD; and she despised him in her heart.¹

- 17 And ^athey brought in the ark of the LORD, and set it in ^bhis place, in the midst of the tabernacle² that David had pitched for it: and David ^coffered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the LORD. And as soon as David had made an end of offering burnt offerings and peace offerings, ^dhe blessed the people in the name of the LORD of hosts. ^eAnd he dealt among all the people, even among the whole multitude of Israel, as well to the women as men, to every one a cake of bread, and a good piece³ of flesh, and a flagon⁴ of wine. So all the people departed every one to his house.
- 20 ^fThen David returned to bless his household. And Michal the daughter of Saul came out to meet David, and said, How glorious was the king of Israel to-day, who ^guncovered himself⁵ to-day in the eyes of the handmaids of his servants, as one of the ^hvain fellows shamelessly [or, openly] uncovereth himself!
- 21 And David said unto Michal, It was ⁱbefore the LORD, ^jwhich chose me before thy father, and before all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the LORD, over Israel: therefore will I ^kplay before the LORD. And I will yet be more vile than thus, and will be base in mine own sight: and of the maidservants
- 23 which thou hast spoken of, of them shall I be had in honour. Therefore Michal the daughter of Saul had no child ^lunto the day of her death.

David's desire to build a temple for Jehovah; God's message to him by Nathan; his thanksgiving and prayer.

- 7 AND it came to pass, ^awhen the king sat in his house, and the LORD ^bhad given him rest round about from all his enemies; that the king said unto Nathan the prophet, See now, I dwell in ^can house of cedar, ^dbut the ark of God dwelleth within ^ecurtains.⁶ And Nathan said to the king, Go, do all that is ^fin thine heart; for the LORD is with thee.
- 4 And it came to pass ^gthat night, that the word of the LORD came unto Nathan, saying, Go and tell my servant David, Thus saith the LORD, ^hShalt thou build me an house for me to dwell in? Whereas I have not dwelt in any house ⁱsince the time that I brought up the children of Israel out of Egypt, even to this day, but have walked in ^ja tent and in a tabernacle. In all the places wherein I have ^kwalked with all the children of Israel spake I a word with ^lany of the tribes⁷ of Israel, whom I commanded ^mto feed my people Israel, saying, Why build ye not me an house of cedar? Now therefore so shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ⁿI took thee from the sheepcote, from following the sheep, to be ^oruler over my people, over Israel: and ^pI was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, ^qand have cut off all thine enemies out of thy sight, and have made thee ^ra great name, like unto the name of the great
- 10 men that are in the earth. Moreover I will⁸ appoint a place for my people Israel, and will ^splant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; ^tneither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, ^uas before-time, and as ^vsince the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel; and have ^wcaused thee to rest from all thine enemies. Also the LORD telleth thee ^xthat he will make thee an house. And ^ywhen thy days be fulfilled, and thou ^zshalt sleep with thy fathers, ^{aa}I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish⁹ his kingdom. ^{ab}He shall

² Psa. lxxviii. is supposed to have been composed for this occasion. The tabernacle made in the wilderness, with the altar, was now at Gibeon (1 Chron. xxi. 29): but David prepared another tent, probably similar to that of Moses, near his own residence on Mount Zion, for the reception of the ark. See Psa. lxxviii. 67, 68. From 1 Chron. vi. 31—48; xvi. 4—6, 37—42, it appears that David made a new arrangement for Divine worship in connection with this tabernacle, so as not to interfere with the functions of the priests and the sacrifices at the altar; Asaph and other Levites being appointed to conduct this additional service, which consisted chiefly in prayer and praise to God. After the building of the temple, both tabernacles were superseded.

³ Rather, 'a measure;' probably a cup of wine.

⁴ The word here rendered 'flagon' means a kind of cake, prepared from dried grapes, or made with honey.

⁵ David had only divested himself of his royal robes; still wearing his dress of fine linen and an ephod.

⁹ This passage (vers. 12—17) comprises the following promises:—1. A son as successor, who should build the house of God. 2. A line of descendants through him, who were to possess the throne of Israel conditionally upon their obedience to the Divine law; with an assurance that even should they violate that condition, and so forfeit the throne, though subjected to chastisement, the family should not be utterly rejected, as that of Saul had been. And, lastly, that out of them should arise a glorious King, in whom the kingdom of David should be established for ever. See ch. xxiii. 3—5; Isa. lv. 3; Jer. xxxiii. 15, 26; Acts ii. 30; xiii. 34; Heb. i. 5.

 17 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan

 18 Then went king David in, and sat¹ before the LORD, and he said, ⁱ Who am I, hast confirmed to thyself thy people Israel to be a people unto thee for ever:

 25 ^z and thou, LORD, art become their God. And now, O Lord God, the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, establish it 26 for ever, and do as thou hast said. And let thy name be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God over Israel: and let the house of thy 27 servant David be established before thee. For thou, O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, hast revealed to thy servant, saying, ^a I will build thee an house: there-28 fore hath thy servant found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee. And now, O Lord God, thou art that God,⁴ and ^b thy words be true, and thou hast promised this goodness unto thy servant: therefore now let it please thee to bless 29 the house of thy servant, that it may continue for ever before thee: for thou, O Lord God, hast spoken it: and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be

8 AND ^d after this it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them: and David took ^e Metheg-ammah⁵ out of the hand of the Philistines.
 2 And ^f he smote Moab, and measured⁶ them with a line, casting them down to the ground; even with two lines measured he to put to death, and with one full line to keep alive. And so the Moabites ^g became David's servants, and ^h brought gifts.
 3 David smote also ⁱ Hadadezer, the son of Rehob, king of ^k Zobah, as he went to 4 recover ^l his border⁷ at the river Euphrates. And David took from him a thousand ^m chariots, and seven hundred⁸ horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen:
 and David ⁿ houghed⁹ all the chariot horses, but reserved of them for an hundred 5 chariots. ^o And when the Syrians of Damascus came to succour Hadadezer king 6 of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men. Then David put garrisons in Syria of Damascus: and the Syrians ^p became servants to David, and brought gifts. ^q And the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.
 7 And David took ^r the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadadezer, and Hadadezer, king David took exceeding much brass.

¹ Some suppose this to mean 'continued;' but sitting on the heels is still a posture of reverence in the East.

² Literally, 'And this the law of the man!' Some expositors take this to refer to the unexpected condescension of God to his servant; whilst others regard it as an allusion to the Divine plan respecting the Messiah.

³ Rather, 'for them.'

⁴ Rather, 'thou art the [only] God.'

⁵ This may be translated, 'the bridle of the metropolis;' a proverbial expression, explained by 1 Chron. xviii. 1 as meaning, 'Gath and her towns.'

⁶ In this may be seen the beneficial results of the Hebrew war-laws (see note on Deut. xx. 1); the restrictive tendencies of which operated beyond the letter of the law (Deut. xx. 13), so as to lead David to preserve the lives of many of his male captives. It is uncertain whether one-third only, or, as the Sept. and Vulgate render, one-half were saved. See Josephus, Antiq. vii. 5.

⁷ Or, 'to establish his frontier.' See 1 Sam. xiv. 47.

⁸ 1 Chron. xviii. 4 has seven thousand, which is probably the correct reading. See general note in p. 516.

⁹ Agreeably to the precept in Deut. xvii. 16, and a special command to Joshua (Josh. xi. 6). Horses appear not to have been used by the Hebrews in agriculture.

10 Hadadezer, then Toi sent ^x Joram his son unto king David, to salute him, and to bless him, because he had fought against Hadadezer, and smitten him: for Hadadezer had wars with Toi. And Joram brought with him vessels of silver, 11 and vessels of gold, and vessels of brass: which also king David ^y did dedicate unto the Lord, with the silver and gold that he had dedicated of all nations 12 which he subdued; of Syria, and of Moab, and of the children of Ammon, and of the Philistines, and of Amalek, and of the spoil of Hadadezer, son of Rehob, king of Zobah.

13 And David gat him ^z a name when he returned from smiting of the Syrians¹ in 14 ^a the Valley of Salt, ^b being eighteen thousand men. And he put garrisons in Edom; throughout all Edom put he garrisons, and ^c all they of Edom became David's servants. ^d And the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went.

15 And David reigned over all Israel; and David executed judgment and justice 16 unto all his people. ^e And Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host; and ^f Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud was recorder² [or, remembrancer; or, writer of 17 chronicles]; and ^g Zadok the son of Ahitub, and Ahimelech,³ the son of Abiathar, 18 were the priests; and Seraiah was the scribe [or, secretary]; ^h and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over both the ⁱ Cherethites and the Pelethites;⁴ and David's sons were chief rulers [or, princes^k].

David's kindness to Jonathan's son.

9 AND David said, Is there yet any that is left of the house of Saul, that I 2 may ^l show him kindness for Jonathan's sake? And there was of the house of Saul a servant whose name was ^m Ziba. And when they had called him unto David, the king said unto him, Art thou Ziba? And he said, Thy servant is he.

3 And the king said, *Is there not yet any of the house of Saul,*⁵ that I may show ⁿ the kindness of God unto him? And Ziba said unto the king, Jonathan hath yet 4 a son, which is ^o lame on his feet. And the king said unto him, Where is he? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he is in the house of ^p Machir, the son of 5 Ammiel, in Lo-debar. Then king David sent, and fetched him out of the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel, from Lo-debar.

6 Now when ^q Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, was come unto David, he fell on his face, and did reverence. And David said, Mephibosheth. 7 And he answered, Behold thy servant! And David said unto him, Fear not: ^r for I will surely show thee kindness for Jonathan thy father's sake, and will restore thee all the land of Saul thy father; and thou shalt eat bread at my table 8 continually. And he bowed himself, and said, What is thy servant, that thou shouldest look upon such ^s a dead dog as I am?

9 Then the king called to Ziba, Saul's servant, and said unto him, 'I have given 10 *unto thy master's son all that pertained to Saul and to all his house. Thou therefore, and thy sons, and thy servants, shall till the land for him, and thou shalt bring in the fruits, that thy master's son may have food*⁶ to eat: but Mephibosheth thy master's son ^t shall eat bread alway at my table. Now Ziba had 11 *fifteen sons and twenty servants. Then said Ziba unto the king, According to all that my lord the king hath commanded his servant, so shall thy servant do. ¹ The Syrians appear to have been allied, as they were afterwards under Rezin (2 Kings xvi. 6), with the Edomites, mentioned in the next verse and in 1 Chron. xviii. 12. The brief records of this chapter seem to show that neighbouring hostile states, alarmed by David's growing power, formed a great confederacy against him; the Syrians attacking him on the north, whilst a body of the allies attempted a diversion through Edom and the Valley of Salt on the south. Hence the severe measures against the latter mentioned in 1 Kings xi. 15—21, by which all danger from that quarter was removed. These wars resulted in the accomplishment of the predictions in Gen. xv. 18, and xxvii. 40, by the subjugation of the Edomites, who continued tributaries to the kings of Judah till the time of Jehoram (2 Kings viii. 20, 22; 2 Chron. xxi. 8); and by the extension of David's dominions from Egypt to the Euphrates.

² The 'recorder' kept the chronicles of events and of the government; and so brought together the materials out of which histories might be constructed. The 'scribe,' or secretary (ver. 18), was probably engaged in the correspondence and daily business of the government.

³ These names are obviously transposed: the passage ought to be read, 'Abiathar the son of Ahimelech.' It is probable that Zadok had been appointed high priest when the family of Ahimelech were slain and Abiathar had fled; and that Abiathar, having attended David and been consulted by him during his wanderings, was allowed to share the office with Zadok, whose name always stands first. See 1 Sam. xxii. 9, 11, 12, 20.

⁴ The Cherethites and Pelethites formed David's body-guard; but whether these terms are proper names or appellatives is uncertain. The Targum has 'archers and slingers.' Gesenius thinks that they denote 'headsman and couriers.' It is likely that they were foreign mercenaries, or hired troops.

⁵ It is not surprising that David knew nothing of Mephibosheth, who was born after he was driven from Saul's court (see ch. iv. 4), and had been brought up in obscurity on the east of Jordan (see ver. 4).

Insult of the king of Ammon ; defeat of the Ammonites and Syrians.

10 AND it came to pass after this, that the ^b king of the children of Ammon died, ² and Hanun his son reigned in his stead. Then said David, I will show kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash, ^c as his father showed kindness unto me. And David sent to comfort him, by the hand of his servants, for his father. And ³ David's servants came into the land of the children of Ammon. And the princes of the children of Ammon said unto Hanun their lord, Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee, to search the city, and to spy it out, and to ⁴ overthrow it? Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and ^d shaved off the one half of their beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, ^e even to their ⁵ buttocks, and sent them away. When they told it unto David, he sent to meet them, because the men were greatly ashamed : ¹ and the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

6 And when the children of Ammon saw that they ^f stank ² before David, the children of Ammon sent and hired ³ ^g the Syrians of Beth-rehob, and the Syrians of Zoba, twenty thousand footmen, and of king Maacah ⁴ a thousand men, and of ⁷ Ish-tob [or, the men of Tob ^h] twelve thousand men. And when David heard of ⁸ it, he sent Joab, and all the host of ⁱ the mighty men. And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array at the entering in of the gate : ⁵ and ^k the Syrians of Zoba, and of Rehob, and Ish-tob, and Maacah, were by ⁹ themselves in the field. When Joab saw that the front of the battle was against him before and behind, he chose of all the choice men of Israel, and put them in ¹⁰ array against the Syrians : and the rest of the people he delivered into the hand of Abishai his brother, that he might put them in array against the children of ¹¹ Ammon. And he said, 'If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me : but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will come ¹² and help thee. ^m Be of good courage, and let us ⁿ play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God : and ^o the LORD do that which seemeth him good.

13 And Joab drew nigh, and the people that were with him, unto the battle ¹⁴ against the Syrians : and they fled before him. And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they also before Abishai, and entered into the city. So Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem.

15 And when the Syrians saw that they were smitten before Israel, they gathered ¹⁶ themselves together. And Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond ^p the river, and they came to Helam ; and ^q Shobach the captain of ¹⁷ the host of Hadarezer went before them. And when it was told David, he gathered all Israel together, and passed over Jordan, and came to Helam. And ¹⁸ the Syrians set themselves in array against David, and fought with him. And the Syrians fled before Israel ; and David slew the men of seven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand ^r horsemen, and smote Shobach the captain of ¹⁹ their host, who died there. And when all the kings that were servants to Hadarezer saw that they were smitten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and ^s served them. So the Syrians feared to help the children of Ammon any more.

David commits adultery with Bathsheba, and causes Uriah to be slain.

11 AND it came to pass, after the year was expired [at the return of the year ^t], at the time ⁶ when kings go forth to battle, that ^u David sent Joab, and his servants with him, and all Israel ; and they destroyed the children of Ammon, and besieged Rabbah. But David tarried still at Jerusalem. ⁷

1 The Orientals have always attached great importance to the beard ; and deem it a mark of extreme disgrace to be deprived of it. Hence David considerably instructed his ambassadors to remain for a time at the first town they reached on the west of Jordan.

2 A Hebraism, meaning that they had made themselves odious.

3 This is the first certain example on record of that mercenary warfare of which we afterwards find so much both in sacred and in profane history.

4 Rather, 'king of Maacah ;' which lay on the north-east frontier of Israel. This new confederacy only had the effect of securing the glorious results of the former war. On the numbers here given, see 1 Chron. xix. 18 ; and the note in page 516.

6 That is, in the spring.

7 David was now at the height of his glory. Worldly success had probably, in some degree, blinded his eyes and deadened his feelings ; whilst the luxuries with which wealth had surrounded him fostered the growth of selfishness and sensuality. There are few dangers so great as those connected with uninterrupted prosperity. The following narrative, and others of a similar nature (Gen. xii. 12—20 ; Numb. xii. ; Matt. xxvi. 69—75), afford an important confirmation of the veracity of the sacred historians.

8 As in warm climates the early morning hours are the most favourable for exertion, the Orientals rise very early, and repose during the heat of the day.

walked upon the roof of the king's house; and from the roof he ^xsaw a woman
 3 washing herself; and the woman was ^yvery beautiful to look upon. And David ^zsent and inquired after the woman. And one said, Is not this ^aBath-sheba, the 4 daughter of ^bEliam, the wife ^cof Uriah the Hittite? And David sent messengers, and took her; and she came in unto him, and ^dhe lay with her; for she was ^epurified from her uncleanness: and [or, and when she had purified herself from 5 her uncleanness] she returned unto her house. And the woman conceived, and 6 sent and told David, and said, I am with child. And David sent to Joab, saying, Send me Uriah the Hittite. And Joab sent Uriah to David.

7 And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him how Joab did,
 8 and how the people did, and how the war prospered. And David said to Uriah, ^fGo down to thy house, and ^gwash thy feet. And Uriah departed out of the 9 king's house, and there followed him ^ha mess of meat from the king. ⁱBut Uriah slept at the door of the king's house with all the servants of his lord, and went 10 not down to his house. And when they had told David, saying, Uriah went not down unto his house, David said unto Uriah, Camest thou not from thy journey?
 11 why then didst thou not go down unto thine house? And Uriah said unto David, ^kThe ark,^l and Israel, and Judah, abide in tents; and ^mmy lord Joab, and the servants of my lord, are encamped in the open fields; shall I then go into mine house, to eat and to drink, and to lie with my wife? as thou livest, and as thy 12 soul liveth, I will not do this thing. And David said to Uriah, Tarry here to-day also, and to-morrow I will let thee depart. So Uriah abode in Jerusalem that 13 day, and the morrow. And when David had called him, he did eat and drink before him; and he made him ⁿdrunk: and at even he went out to lie on his bed ^owith the servants of his lord, but went not down to his house.

14 And it came to pass in the morning, that David ^pwrote a letter to Joab, and 15 sent it by the hand of Uriah. And he wrote in the letter, saying, Set ye Uriah in the forefront of the hottest battle, and retire ye from him, that he may ^qbe smitten, and die.

16 And it came to pass, when Joab observed the city, that he assigned Uriah unto 17 a place where he knew that valiant men were. And the men of the city went out, and fought with Joab: and there fell some of the people of the servants of David; and Uriah the Hittite died also.

18, 19 Then Joab sent and told David all the things concerning the war; and charged the messenger, saying, When thou hast made an end of telling the matters of the 20 war unto the king, and if so be that the king's wrath arise, and he say unto thee, Wherefore approached ye so nigh unto the city when ye did fight? knew ye not 21 that they would shoot from the wall? Who smote ^rAbimelech the son of ^sJerubbesheth? did not a woman cast a piece of a millstone upon him from the wall, that he died in Thebez? why went ye nigh the wall? then say thou, Thy servant
 Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

22 So the messenger went, and came and showed David all that Joab had sent him 23 for. And the messenger said unto David, Surely the men prevailed against us, and came out unto us into the field, and we were upon them even unto the enter-24 ing of the gate. And the shooters shot from off the wall upon thy servants; and ^t*some* of the king's servants be dead, and thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead 25 also. Then David said unto the messenger, Thus shalt thou say unto Joab, Let not this thing displease thee, for the sword devoureth one as well as another:^u ^vmake thy battle more strong against the city, and overthrow it: and encourage thou him.

26 And when the wife of Uriah heard that Uriah her husband was dead, she 27 mourned for her husband. And when the mourning was past, David sent and fetched her to his house, and she ^wbecame his wife, and bare him a son.

2 To what vain and miserable shifts does sin lead those who indulge in it!

3 Thus far David's crime seemed successful. Every obstacle was removed; and if conscience were not silenced, its voice was proudly disregarded. See Psa. xxxii. 3, 4. But now the Divine Judge appears to condemn and sentence; and though the deep penitence of the criminal procures forgiveness, such severe chastisement is denounced as shall effectually humble him, and vindicate that holy name which he has dishonoured. Henceforward his history is clouded with sorrow. The seeds of lust, treachery, and murder, which he had sown, spring up in his own household; and he must reap the fatal harvest. From this time, he appears to feel himself an humbled man, his influence and authority weakened, the buoyancy of his spirit gone, and his very trust in God less assured and gladsome than before.

4 David's state of mind was probably such as would have rejected a direct charge of criminality with proud

2 were two men in one city; the one rich, and the other poor. The rich man had 3 exceeding many flocks and herds: but the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up: and it grew up together with him, and with his children; it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own 4 cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter. And there came a traveller unto the rich man, and he spared to take of his own flock and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him; but took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.

5 And David's anger was greatly kindled against the man; and he said to Nathan, 6 As the LORD liveth, the man that hath done this thing shall surely die: and he shall restore the lamb ²fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity.

7 And Nathan said to David, Thou art the man. Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I ^aanointed thee king over Israel, ^band I delivered thee out of the hand 8 of Saul; ^cand I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too 9 little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things. ^dWherefore hast thou ^edespised the commandment of the LORD, ^fto do evil in his sight?
^gthou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to 10 be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon. Now therefore ^hthe sword ¹shall never depart from thine house. Because thou hast 11 despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife; thus saith the LORD, Behold, ⁱI will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house, and I will ^ktake thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbour, ² 12 and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun. For thou didst it secretly:
^lbut I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun.

13 ^mAnd David said unto Nathan, ⁿI have sinned against the LORD. ³ And Nathan said unto David, the LORD also hath ^oput away thy sin; ⁴^pthou shalt not die.
14 Howbeit, because by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the LORD ^qto blaspheme, the child also that is born unto thee shall surely die.
15 And Nathan departed unto his house.

And the LORD struck the child that Uriah's wife bare unto David, and it was 16 very sick. David therefore ^rbesought God for the child; and David fasted, and 17 went in, and ^slay all night upon the earth. And the elders of his house arose, and went to him, to raise him up from the earth: but he would not, neither did 18 he eat bread with them. And it came to pass on the seventh day, that the child died. And the servants of David feared to tell him that the child was dead: for they said, Behold, while the child was yet alive, we spake unto him, and he would not hearken unto our voice: how will he then vex himself, if we tell him 19 that the child is dead? But when David saw that his servants whispered, David perceived that the child was dead: therefore David said unto his servants, Is the 20 child dead? And they said, He is dead. Then ^tDavid arose from the earth, and washed, and ^uanointed himself, and changed his apparel, and came into the house of the LORD, and ^vworshipped: then he came to his own house; and when he 21 required, they set bread before him, and he did eat. Then said his servants unto him, What thing is this that thou hast done? thou didst fast and weep for the child, while it was alive; but when the child was dead, thou didst rise and eat 22 bread. And he said, While the child was yet alive, I fasted and wept: ^yfor I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live?
23 But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? can I bring him back again? ^zI shall go to him, but ^ahe shall not return to me.

24 And David comforted Bath-sheba his wife, and went in unto her, and lay with her: and ^bshe bare a son, and ^che called his name Solomon. And the LORD loved disdain; but the form of this message allowed his sense of justice, and of what was due between man and man, to operate without any selfish bias. This parable, however, apposite and beautiful as it is, touches only a small part of David's complicated offence; leaving unnoticed the sensuality, the selfishness, the treachery, and ingratitude of his conduct. Thus the sentence he pronounced (ver. 6) fell with redoubled force upon himself.

1 During his lifetime, two of his sons were slain, and Adonijah soon after his decease.

2 Or, 'rival.' See ch. xvi. 22.

3 We learn David's feelings upon this occasion from Psa. li.; which shows that, while deeply affected by his own awful guilt, and by the righteous displeasure of God, he did not sink into despair, but still looked to the Divine mercy, which we find in Psa. xxxii. happily restoring him to peace, and animating him to renewed efforts after holiness. He had doubtless not been without disquietude and remorse on account of these sins; but, till now, he had not 'sorrowed to repentance.' See 2 Cor. vii. 9, 10.

4 A figurative expression to denote the forgiveness of sin—'thou shalt not die;' though, according to the Divine laws in Gen. ix. 6, and Lev. xx. 10, he had doubly deserved death. 'Many,' says Augustine, 'are disposed to fall like David; but not; like David, to rise again. The fall of David has been recorded, that those who have not fallen may be kept from falling; and that those who have fallen may rise again.'

Siege and capture of Rabbah, and subjugation of the Ammonites.

26 AND ^d Joab fought against ^e Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and took the 27 royal city. And Joab sent messengers to David, and said, I have fought against 28 Rabbah, and have taken the city of waters. Now therefore gather the rest of the 29 people together, and encamp against the city, and take it: lest I take the city, 30 and it be called after my name. And David gathered all the people together, 31 and went to Rabbah, and fought against it, and took it. ^f And he took their king's crown from off his head, the weight² whereof was a talent of gold with the precious stones: and it was set on David's head. And he brought forth the spoil of the city in great abundance. And he brought forth the people that were therein, and put them under³ saws, and under harrows of iron, and under axes of iron, and made them pass through the brickkiln: and thus did he unto all the cities of the children of Ammon. So David and all the people returned unto Jerusalem.

Amnon's violence to his sister; Absalom causes Amnon to be murdered.

13 AND it came to pass after this,⁴ ^g that Absalom the son of David had a fair
2 sister, whose name was ^h Tamar; and Amnon the son of David loved her. And Amnon was so vexed, that he fell sick for his sister Tamar; for she was a virgin;
3 and Amnon thought it hard⁵ for him to do any thing to her. But Amnon had a friend, whose name was Jonadab, ⁱ the son of Shimeah David's brother: and 4 Jonadab was a very subtil man. And he said unto him, ^k Why art thou, being the king's son, lean from day to day? wilt thou not tell me? And Amnon said 5 unto him, I love Tamar, my brother Absalom's sister. And Jonadab said unto him, Lay thee down on thy bed, and make thyself sick: and when thy father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee, let my sister Tamar come, and give me meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her 6 hand. So Amnon lay down, and made himself sick: and when the king was come to see him, Amnon said unto the king, I pray thee, let Tamar my sister come, and ^l make me a couple of cakes in my sight, that I may eat at her hand.
7 Then David sent home to Tamar, saying, Go now to thy brother Amnon's 8 house, and dress him meat. So Tamar went to her brother Amnon's house; and he was laid down. And she took flour, and kneaded it, and made cakes in his 9 sight, and did bake the cakes. And she took a pan, and poured them out before him; but he refused to eat. And Amnon said, ^m Have out all men from me.
10 And they went out every man from him. And Amnon said unto Tamar, Bring the meat into the chamber, that I may eat of thine hand. And Tamar took the cakes which she had made, and brought them into the chamber to Amnon her 11 brother. And when she had brought them unto him to eat, he ⁿ took hold of her, 12 and said unto her, Come lie with me, my sister. And she answered him, Nay, my brother, do not force me [humble me]; for ^p no such thing ought to be done 13 in Israel: do not thou this ^q folly. And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? and as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore, I 14 pray thee, speak unto the king; ^r for he will not withhold me from thee. Howbeit he would not hearken unto her voice: but, being stronger than she, ^s forced her, and lay with her.
15 Then Amnon hated her exceedingly; so that the hatred wherewith he hated her was greater than the love wherewith he had loved her. And Amnon said 16 unto her, Arise, begone. And she said unto him, There is no cause: this evil in sending me away is greater than the other that thou didst unto me. But he 17 would not hearken unto her. Then he called his servant that ministered unto him, and said, Put now this woman out from me, and bolt the door after her.
18 And she had ^t a garment of divers colours upon her: for with such robes were the king's daughters that were virgins apparelled. Then his servant brought her out, and bolted the door after her.
19 And Tamar put ^u ashes on her head, and rent her garment of divers colours 20 that was on her, and ^v laid her hand on her head, and went on crying. And

¹ The name Solomon (i. e. 'the peaceful') was also given to this child, probably, because David regarded his birth as an assurance that he was again at peace with God.

² Some take this to mean, not weight, but value; others suppose that the crown was not worn upon the head, but suspended over it, or attached to the top of the throne.

³ Some render this word 'to;' and suppose that David put the Ammonites to the severest labours of slaves. But it is possible that their provocations and cruelties (see ch. x. 4; 1 Sam. xi. 2; Amos i. 13) led him to deviate from his usual milder practice (see note on ch. viii. 2), and to inflict tortures not uncommon in heathen countries.

⁴ The evils foretold in ch. xii. 11 now begin to appear.

⁵ Either on account of the seclusion in which young females live in Eastern countries; or because of the restraints of God's law and of his own conscience.

- Absalom her brother said unto her, Hath ^y Amnon thy brother been with thee? but hold now thy peace, my sister: he is thy brother; regard not this thing. So Tamar remained desolate in her brother Absalom's house.¹
- 21, 22 But when king David heard of all these things, he was very wroth.² And Absalom spake unto his brother Amnon ^z neither good nor bad:³ for Absalom
- 23 ^a hated Amnon, because he had forced his sister Tamar. And it came to pass after two full years, that Absalom ^b had sheepshearers in Baal-hazor, which is
- 24 beside Ephraim: and Absalom invited all the king's sons. And Absalom came to the king, and said, Behold now, thy servant hath sheepshearers; let the king,
- 25 I beseech thee, and his servants go with thy servant. And the king said to Absalom, Nay, my son, let us not all now go, lest we be chargeable unto thee.
- 26 And he pressed him: howbeit he would not go, but blessed him. Then said Absalom, If not, I pray thee, let my brother Amnon go with us. And the king
- 27 said unto him, Why should he go with thee? But Absalom pressed him, that he let Amnon and all the king's sons go with him.
- 28 Now Absalom had commanded his servants, saying, Mark ye now when Amnon's heart is merry with wine, and when I say unto you, Smite Amnon; then kill him, fear not: have not I commanded you [or, will you not, since I have com-
- 29 manded you^d]? be courageous, and be valiant. And the servants of Absalom did unto Amnon as Absalom had commanded. Then all the king's sons arose, and every man gat him up upon his mule, and fled.
- 30 And it came to pass, while they were in the way, that tidings came to David, saying, Absalom hath slain all the king's sons, and there is not one of them left.
- 31 Then the king arose, and ^e tare his garments, and ^f lay on the earth; and all his
- 32 servants stood by with their clothes rent. And ^g Jonadab, the son of Shimeah David's brother, answered and said, Let not my lord suppose that they have slain all the young men the king's sons; for Amnon only is dead: for by the appointment of Absalom this hath been determined from the day that he forced his sister
- 33 Tamar. Now therefore ^h let not my lord the king take the thing to his heart, to think that all the king's sons are dead: for Amnon only is dead. ⁱ But Absalom fled.
- 34 And the young man that kept the watch lifted up his eyes, and looked, and,
- 35 behold, there came much people by the way of the hill side behind him. And Jonadab said unto the king, Behold, the king's sons come: as thy servant said,
- 36 so it is. And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of speaking, that, behold, the king's sons came, and lifted up their voice and wept: and the king also and all his servants wept very sore.
- 37 But Absalom fled,⁴ and went to ^k Talmai, the son of ^l Ammihud, king of Geshur. And David mourned for his son every day.

Absalom, having fled to Geshur, is recalled to Jerusalem.

- 38, 39 SO Absalom fled, and went to ^m Geshur, and was there three years. And the soul of king David ⁿ longed to go forth unto Absalom: for he was ^o comforted concerning Amnon, seeing he was dead.
- 14 Now Joab the son of Zeruiah perceived that the king's heart was ^p toward
- 2 Absalom. And Joab sent to ^q Tekoah, and fetched thence a wise woman, and said unto her, I pray thee, feign thyself to be a mourner, ^r and put on now mourning apparel, and anoint not thyself with oil, but be as a woman that had a long
- 3 time mourned for the dead: and come to the king, and speak on this manner unto him. So Joab ^s put the words in her mouth.
- 4 And when the woman of Tekoah spake to the king, she ^t fell on her face to the
- 5 ground, and did obeisance, and said, ^u Help, O king. And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered,⁵ ^x I am indeed a widow woman, and
- 6 mine husband is dead. And thine handmaid had two sons, and they two strove together in the field, and there was none to part them, but the one smote the
- 7 other, and slew him. And, behold, ^y the whole family is risen against thine handmaid, and they said, Deliver him that smote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother whom he slew; and we will destroy the heir also:

1 Absalom was Tamar's full-brother, their mother being Maacah, daughter of the king of Geshur. In the East the ties of brotherhood are little felt, except by the children of the same mother; and a woman would look more to her full-brother than even to her father, as her natural protector and avenger. See Gen. xxxiv. 25.

2 The Septuagint adds, 'But he would not grieve the soul of Amnon his son, because he was his first-born.'

3 A silence indicating deep-seated revenge.

4 Absalom, having committed wilful murder, could not avail himself of one of the cities of refuge.

5 This parable was framed, like Nathan's, to fit the king's own case; which, however, it did not fairly represent. It was ingeniously contrived to satisfy David's conscience, to excite his feelings, and to afford a public reason for recalling Absalom.

- and so they shall ^aquench my coal which is left, and shall not leave to my husband neither name nor remainder upon the earth. And the king said unto the woman, Go to thine house, and I will give charge concerning thee.
- 9 And the woman of Tekoah said unto the king, My lord, O king, ^bthe iniquity be on me, and on my father's house: ^cand the king and his throne be guiltless.
- 10 And the king said, Whosoever saith ought unto thee, bring him to me, and he shall not touch thee any more. Then said she, I pray thee, let the king remember the LORD thy God, that thou wouldest not suffer ^dthe revengers of blood to destroy any more, lest they destroy my son. And he said, ^eAs the LORD liveth, there shall not one hair of thy son fall to the earth.
- 12 Then the woman said, Let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak one word unto my lord the king. And he said, Say on. And the woman said, Wherefore then hast thou thought such a thing against ^fthe people of God? ^gfor the king doth speak this thing as one which is faulty, ^hin that the king doth not fetch home again ⁱhis banished. For we ^kmust needs die, and are ^jas water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again; neither doth God respect any person: ^lyet doth he ^mdevise means [or, because God hath not taken away his life, he hath also devised means] that his banished be not expelled from him. Now therefore that I am come to speak of this thing unto my lord the king, it is because the people ⁿhave made me afraid: and thy handmaid said, I will now speak unto the king; it may be that the king will perform the request of his handmaid. For the king will hear, to deliver his handmaid out of the hand of the man that would destroy me and my son together out of the inheritance of God. Then thine handmaid said, The word of my lord the king shall now be comfortable: for ^oas an angel of God, so is my lord the king to ^pdiscern good and bad: therefore the LORD thy God will be with thee.
- 18 Then the king answered and said unto the woman, Hide not from me, I pray thee, the thing that I shall ask thee. And the woman said, Let my lord the king now speak. And the king said, Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? And the woman answered and said, As thy soul liveth, my lord the king, none can turn to the right hand or to the left from aught that my lord the king hath spoken: for thy servant Joab, he bade me, and ^qhe put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid: to fetch about this form of speech hath thy servant Joab done this thing: and my lord is wise, ^raccording to the wisdom of an angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth.
- 21 And the king said unto Joab, Behold now, I have done this thing: ^sgo therefore, bring the young man Absalom again. And Joab fell to the ground on his face, and bowed himself, and thanked the king: and Joab said, To-day thy servant knoweth that I have found grace in thy sight, my lord, O king, in that the king hath fulfilled the request of his servant. So Joab arose ^tand went to Geshur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem. And the king said, Let him turn to his own house, and let him ^unot see my face. So Absalom returned to his own house, and saw not the king's face.
- 25 But in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty: ^vfrom the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him. And when he polled his head, (for it was at every year's end ^wthat he polled it: because the hair was heavy on him, therefore he polled it;) he weighed the hair ^xof his head at two hundred shekels ^yafter the king's weight.
- 27 And ^zunto Absalom there were born three sons, and one daughter, whose name was Tamar: she was a woman of a fair countenance.
- 28 So Absalom dwelt two full years in Jerusalem, ^{aa}and saw not the king's face.
- 29 Therefore Absalom sent for Joab, to have sent him to the king; but he would not come ^{ab}to him: and when he sent again the second time, he would not come.
- 30 Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is near mine, and he hath barley there; go and set it on fire. And Absalom's servants set the field on fire.

Perhaps it means, 'And doth not God strongly desire and devise means,' etc.; referring to the cities of refuge, or to God's mercy towards David.⁴ The woman's words might be applied either to those of her own family who threatened her son's life, or to the people at large, among whom she professes to apprehend insurrection, if Absalom were not recalled.⁵ David's inclination towards his son made him willing to think that his oath to the woman obliged him to recall Absalom.⁶ Or, 'at stated times.'⁷ It was the custom, in David's time, for men to wear the hair long. See Josephus, Antiq. viii. 7.⁸ The weight of the shekel at different periods is not exactly known. The common calculation makes 200 shekels weigh 9 lbs. 4 oz. troy; but some writers, reducing the king's shekel, make them only 4 lbs. 2 oz. troy.⁹ The courtiers of David, as well as himself, were avoiding the presence of Absalom.

31 Then Joab arose, and came to Absalom unto his house, and said unto him, Where-32 fore have thy servants set my field on fire? And Absalom answered Joab, Behold,
 I sent unto thee, saying, Come hither, that I may send thee to the king, to say, Wherefore am I come from Geshur? it had been good for me to have been there still: now therefore let me see the king's face; and if there be any iniquity in 33 me, let him kill me. So Joab came to the king, and told him: and when he had called for Absalom, he came to the king, and bowed himself on his face to the ground before the king: and the king ^ukissed Absalom.

Absalom's rebellion; David's flight.

15 AND ^xit came to pass after this, that Absalom ^yprepared him chariots and 2 horses, and fifty men ^zto run before him. And Absalom rose up early,¹ and stood beside the way of the gate: and it was so, that when any man that had a controversy came to the king for judgment, then Absalom called unto him, and said,
 Of what city art thou? And he said, Thy servant is of one of the tribes of Israel.
 3 And Absalom said unto him, See, ^athy matters are good and right; but there is 4 no man deputed of the king to hear thee. Absalom said moreover, ^bOh that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come 5 unto me, and ^cI would do him justice! And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand, and took him, and kissed 6 him.² And on this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment: ^dso Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israel.
 7 And it came to pass ^eafter forty³ years, that Absalom said unto the king, I pray thee, let me go and pay my vow, which I have vowed unto the LORD, in Hebron.
 8 ^fFor thy servant ^gvowed a vow ^hwhile I abode at Geshur in Syria, saying, If the LORD shall bring me again indeed to Jerusalem, then I will serve the LORD.
 9 And the king said unto him, Go in peace. So he arose, and went to Hebron.
 10 But Absalom sent spies throughout all the tribes of Israel, saying, As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet, then ye shall say, Absalom reigneth in Hebron.
 11 And with Absalom went two hundred men out of Jerusalem, that were ⁱcalled; 12 and they went ^kin their simplicity, and they knew not anything. And Absalom sent for Ahithophel,⁴ the Gilonite, ^lDavid's counsellor, from his city, even from ^mGiloh, while he offered sacrifices. And the conspiracy was strong; for the people ⁿincreased continually with Absalom.
 13 And there came a messenger to David, saying, ^oThe hearts of the men of Israel 14 are after Absalom. And David said unto all his servants that were with him at Jerusalem, Arise, and let us ^pflee; for we shall not else escape from Absalom:
 make speed to depart, lest he overtake us suddenly, and bring evil upon us, and 15 smite the city with the edge of the sword. And the king's servants said unto the king, Behold, thy servants are ready to do whatsoever my lord the king shall appoint.
 16 And ^qthe king went forth, and all his household after him. And the king 17 left ^rten women, which were concubines, to keep the house. And the king went 18 forth, and all the people after him, and tarried in a place that was far off. And all his servants passed on beside him; ^sand all the Cherethites, and all the Pelethites,⁵ and all the Gittites, six hundred men which came after him from 19 Gath, passed on before the king. Then said the king to ^tIttai the Gittite, Wherefore goest thou also with us? return to thy place, and abide with the king:
 20 for thou art a stranger, and also an exile. Whereas thou camest but yesterday, should I this day make thee go up and down with us? seeing I go ^uwhither I may, return thou, and take back thy brethren: mercy and truth be with thee.
 21 And Ittai answered the king, and said, ^xAs the LORD liveth, and as my lord the king liveth, surely in what place my lord the king shall be, whether in death or 22 life, even there also will thy servant be. And David said to Ittai, Go and pass over. And Ittai the Gittite passed over, and all his men, and all the little ones 23 that were with him. And all the country wept with a loud voice; and all the ¹ Eastern kings and their officers rise early; and, after their devotions, proceed at once to public business.

² When ambition prompts, the proudest will appear affable, and pay abject court to the meanest.

³ It is supposed that the word 'forty' is a transcriber's error; and that, with Josephus, and the Syriac and Arabic versions, we should read four years; i. e. from the time of Absalom's return to Jerusalem.

⁴ Absalom seems to have presumed that Ahithophel would be well affected to his cause. In ch. xxiii. 34, we find that Ahithophel had a son named Eliam, who was a comrade of Uriah; and, in ch. xi. 3, that Uriah's wife's father was also called Eliam: so that Ahithophel may have been her grandfather, and as such displeased with David's conduct towards her. On the other hand, David's choice of Gilead as a place of refuge, and the attentions of Machir the son of Ammiel (one form of the name of Bathsheba's father in 1 Chron. iii. 5), seem to indicate such a connection with that family as might result from Bathsheba's present position, as the mother of the intended successor to the throne. See ch. xvii. 24, 27.

people passed over: the king also himself passed over the brook ⁹ Kidron, and all the people passed over, toward the way of the ² wilderness.

24 And lo, Zadok also, and all the Levites were with him, ^a bearing the ark of the covenant of God: and they set down the ark of God; and Abiathar went up, 25 until all the people had done passing out of the city. And the king said unto Zadok, Carry back the ark of God into the city: if I shall find favour in the eyes of the LORD, he ^b will bring me again, and show me both it, and his habitation: but if he thus say, I have no ^c delight in thee; behold, here am I, ^d let 26 him do to me as seemeth good unto him. The king said also unto Zadok the priest, Art not thou a ^e seer? ¹ return into the city in peace, and ^f your two sons 27 with you, Ahimaaz thy son, and Jonathan the son of Abiathar. See, ^g I will tarry in the plain of the wilderness, until there come word from you to certify me. 28 Zadok therefore and Abiathar carried the ark of God again to Jerusalem: and they tarried there.

30 And David went up by the ascent of mount ^h Olivet, and wept as he went up, and ⁱ had his head covered, ² and he went ^k barefoot: and all the people that was with him ^l covered every man his head, and they went up, ^m weeping as they 31 went up. And one told David, saying, ⁿ Ahithophel is among the conspirators with Absalom. And David said, ^o O LORD, I pray thee, ^p turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness.

32 And it came to pass, that when David was come to the top of the mount, where he worshipped God, behold, Hushai the ^q Archite came to meet him ^r with his 33 coat rent, and earth upon his head: unto whom David said, ³ If thou passest on 34 with me, then thou shalt be ^s a burden unto me: but if thou return to the city, and say unto Absalom, 'I will be thy servant, O king; as I have been thy father's servant hitherto, so will I now also be thy servant: ^t then mayest thou for me 35 defeat the counsel of Ahithophel. And hast thou not there with thee Zadok and Abiathar the priests? therefore it shall be, that what thing soever thou shalt hear out of the king's house, ^x thou shalt tell it to Zadok and Abiathar the priests. 36 Behold, they have there ^y with them their two sons, Ahimaaz Zadok's son, and Jonathan Abiathar's son; and by them ye shall send unto me every thing that ye 37 can hear. So Hushai ^z David's friend came into the city. ^a And Absalom came into Jerusalem.

16 And ^b when David was a little past the top of the hill, behold, ^c Ziba the servant of Mephibosheth met him, with a couple of asses saddled, and upon them two hundred loaves of bread, and an hundred bunches of raisins, and an hundred of 2 summer fruits, and a bottle of wine. And the king said unto Ziba, What meanest thou by these? And Ziba said, The asses be for the king's household to ride on; and the bread and summer fruit for the young men to eat; and the wine, ^d that 3 such as be faint in the wilderness may drink. And the king said, And ^e where is thy master's son? ^f And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he abideth at Jerusalem: for he said, To-day shall the house of Israel restore me the kingdom of 4 my father. ^g Then said the king to Ziba, Behold, thine are all that pertained unto Mephibosheth. And Ziba said, I humbly beseech thee that I may find grace in thy sight, my lord, O king.

5 And when king David came to Bahurim, behold, thence came out a man of the family of the house of Saul, whose name was ^h Shimei, the son of Gera: he 6 came forth, and cursed still as he came. And he cast stones at David, and at all the servants of king David: and all the people and all the mighty men were 7 on his right hand and on his left. And thus said Shimei when he cursed, 8 Come out, come out, thou bloody man, and thou ⁱ man of Belial: the LORD hath ^k returned upon thee all ^l the blood of the house of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned; and the LORD hath delivered the kingdom into the hand of Absalom thy son: and, behold, thou art taken in thy mischief, because thou art a bloody man.

9 Then said Abishai the son of Zeruiah unto the king, Why should this ^m dead dog ⁿ curse my lord the king? let me go over, I pray thee, and take off his head. 10 And the king said, ^o What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah? so let him curse, because ^p the LORD hath said unto him, Curse David: ^q who shall then 11 say, Wherefore hast thou done so? And David said to Abishai, and to all his servants, Behold, ^r my son, which ^s came forth of my bowels, ^t seeketh my life:

¹ David probably meant that he was a man of wisdom and piety, on whom he could rely for watching and reporting the state of things at Jerusalem; while the sacredness of his office would exempt him from personal danger.

² By wrapping it in a cloth or robe, as a sign of intense grief; a custom prevalent among ancient nations.

³ While David humbles himself before God, and seeks his aid by prayer, he at the same time, with great sagacity and self-possession, adopts measures for baffling the designs of his enemies.

how much more now may this Benjamite do it? let him alone,¹ and let him curse ;
 12 for the LORD hath bidden him. It may be that the LORD will "look on mine affliction, and that the LORD will ^zrequite me good for his cursing this day.
 13 And as David and his men went by the way, Shimei went along on the hill's side over against him, and ^ycursed as he went, and threw stones at him, and cast dust.
 14 And the king, and all the people that were with him, came weary, and refreshed themselves there.

Ahithophel's counsel is overthrown by Hushai.

15 AND ^zAbsalom, and all the people the men of Israel, came to Jerusalem, and 16 Ahithophel with them. And it came to pass, when Hushai the Archite, ^aDavid's friend, was come unto Absalom, that Hushai said unto Absalom, God save the 17 king, God save the king. And Absalom said to Hushai, Is this thy kindness to thy friend? ^bwhy wentest thou not with thy friend? And Hushai said unto 18 Absalom, Nay; but whom the LORD, and this people, and all the men of Israel, choose, his will I be, and with him will I abide. And again, ^cwhom should I 19 serve? should I not serve in the presence of his son? as I have served in thy father's presence, so will I be in thy presence.

20 Then said Absalom to Ahithophel, Give counsel among you what we shall do.
 21 And Ahithophel said unto Absalom,² Go in unto thy father's ^dconcubines, which he hath left to keep the house; and all Israel shall hear that thou ^eart abhorred
 22 of thy father: then shall ^fthe hands of all that are with thee be strong. So they spread Absalom a tent upon the top of the house; and Absalom went in unto his 23 father's concubines ^gin the sight of all Israel. And the counsel of Ahithophel, which he counselled in those days, was as if a man had inquired at the oracle of God: so was all the counsel of Ahithophel ^hboth with David and with Absalom.

17 Moreover Ahithophel said unto Absalom, Let me now choose out twelve
 2 thousand men, and I will arise and pursue after David this night: and I will come upon him while he is ⁱweary and weak handed, and will make him afraid: and all the people that are with him shall flee; and I will ^ksmite the king only:
 3 and I will bring back all the people unto thee: the man whom thou seekest is 4 as if all returned: so all the people shall be in peace. And the saying pleased
 5 Absalom well, and all the elders of Israel. Then said Absalom, Call now Hushai the Archite also, and let us hear likewise what he saith.

6 And when Hushai was come to Absalom, Absalom spake unto him, saying, Ahithophel hath spoken after this manner: shall we do after his saying? if not,
 7 speak thou. And Hushai said unto Absalom, The counsel that Ahithophel hath 8 given is not good at this time. For, said Hushai, thou knowest thy father and his men, that they be mighty men, and they be chafed in their minds, as ^l'a bear robbed of her whelps in the field: and thy father is a man of war, and will not
 9 lodge with the people. Behold, he is hid now in some pit, or in some other place: and it will come to pass, when some of them be overthrown at the first, that whosoever heareth it will say, There is a slaughter among the people that follow
 10 Absalom. And he also that is valiant, whose heart is as the heart of a lion, shall utterly ^mmelt: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is a mighty man, and they 11 which be with him are valiant men. Therefore I counsel that all Israel be generally gathered unto thee, ⁿfrom Dan even to Beer-sheba, ^oas the sand that is 12 by the sea for multitude; and that thou go to battle ^pin thine own person. So shall we come upon him in some place where he shall be found, and we will light upon him as the dew falleth on the ground: and of him, and of all the men that 13 are with him, there shall not be left so much as one. Moreover, if he be gotten into a city, then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, and we will draw it into the river, until there be not one small stone found there.

14 And Absalom and all the men of Israel said, The counsel of Hushai the Archite is better than the counsel of Ahithophel.³ For ^qthe LORD had appointed to defeat the good⁴ counsel of Ahithophel, to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Absalom.

15 ^rThen said Hushai unto Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, Thus and thus did Ahithophel counsel Absalom and the elders of Israel; and thus and thus have I 16 counselled. Now therefore send quickly, and tell David, saying, Lodge not this

² The adoption of this wicked advice would tend to decide the waverers, by showing that Absalom was prepared to go all lengths in his unnatural contest. Thus, however, Nathan's prediction (ch. xii. 11) was literally fulfilled. Psa. lv. is supposed to refer to these events.

³ Hushai's advice was likely to take with a vain man, just elated with his first success; and, if adopted, would give David time to collect his adherents.

night ^s in the plains of the wilderness, but speedily pass over; lest the king be swallowed up, and all the people that are with him.

- 17 'Now Jonathan and Ahimaaz ^u stayed by ^x En-rogel; ¹ for they might not be seen to come into the city: and a wench went and told them; and they went and told king David. Nevertheless a lad saw them, and told Absalom: but they went both of them away quickly, and came to a man's house ^y in Bahurim, which had a well ² in his court; whither they went down. And ^z the woman took and spread a covering over the well's mouth, and spread ground corn thereon; and the thing was not known. And when Absalom's servants came to the woman to the house, they said, Where is Ahimaaz and Jonathan? And ^a the woman said unto them, They be gone over the brook of water. And when they had sought and could not find them, they returned to Jerusalem. And it came to pass, after they were departed, that they came up out of the well, and went and told king David, and said unto David, ^b Arise, and pass quickly over the water: for thus hath Abithophel counselled against you. Then David arose, and all the people that were with him, and they passed over Jordan: ³ by the morning light there lacked not one of them that was not gone over Jordan.
- 23 And when Abithophel saw that his counsel was not followed, he saddled his ass, and arose, and gat him home to his house, to ^c his city, and ^d put his household in order, and ^e hanged himself, ⁴ and died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father.

Absalom pursues after David; his army is defeated, and himself slain.

- 24 THEN David came to ^f Mahanaim. And Absalom passed over Jordan, he and all the men of Israel with him. And Absalom made ^g Amasa ⁵ captain of the host instead of Joab: which Amasa was a man's son, whose name was Ithra an Israelite, ⁶ that went in to ^h Abigail the daughter of ⁱ Nahash, sister to Zeruiah Joab's mother.
- 26 So Israel and Absalom pitched in the land of Gilead.
- 27 And it came to pass, when David was come to Mahanaim, that ^k Shobi the son of Nahash of Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and ^l Machir the son of Ammiel of Lo-debar, and ^m Barzillai the Gileadite of Rogelim, brought beds, ⁷ and basins ⁸ [or, cups], and earthen vessels, and wheat, and barley, and flour, and parched corn, and beans, and lentiles, and parched pulse, and honey, and butter, and sheep, and cheese of kine, for David, and for the people that were with him, to eat: for they said, The people is hungry, and weary, and thirsty, ⁿ in the wilderness.
- 18 And David numbered the people that were with him, and set captains of ² thousands ⁹ and captains of hundreds over them. And David sent forth a third part of the people under the hand of Joab, and a third part under the hand of Abishai the son of Zeruiah, Joab's brother, ^o and a third part under the hand of Ittai the Gittite. And the king said unto the people, ^p I will surely go forth with you myself also. ^q But the people answered, Thou shalt not go forth: for if we flee away, they will not care for us; neither if half of us die, will they care for us: but now thou art worth ten thousand of us: therefore now it is better that thou succour us out of the city. ¹⁰ And the king said unto them, What seemeth you best I will do. And the king stood by the gate side, and all the people came out by hundreds and by thousands.
- 5 And the king commanded Joab and Abishai and Ittai, saying, ^r Deal gently for my sake with the young man, even with Absalom. ¹¹ ^s And all the people heard when the king gave all the captains charge concerning Absalom.
- 6 So the people went out into the field against Israel: and the battle was in the 7 'wood of Ephraim; ¹² where the people of Israel were slain before the servants of 1 En-rogel was near the junction of the valley of Hinnom with that of the Kedron.

2 There are few springs in the district round Jerusalem; and the houses are consequently provided with reservoirs for rain-water, which in hot weather are sometimes dry, and can be used as places of concealment.

3 It is thought by some that Psalms xlii. and xliii. were composed on this occasion: see notes on their titles.

4 Abithophel could not brook the disregard shown to his advice; and he probably foresaw that Absalom's vanity and folly would ruin his cause.

5 On comparing this with the parallel text in 1 Chron. ii. 16, 17, it appears that Abigail and Zeruiah were both sisters of David; and consequently Joab, Abishai, and Amasa were nephews of David and cousins of Absalom.

6 Ithra or Jether is said, in 1 Chron. ii. 17, to be an

'Ishmaelite.' Had he been an Israelite, there would have been no occasion to mention his nation.

9 This implies that David's army had received large accessions (see also ver. 4). Absalom's arts of insinuation had been practised chiefly at Jerusalem; and his influence was less in the distant districts.

10 That is, Mahanaim (ch. xvii. 27).

11 While Absalom would have only David smitten (see ch. xvii. 2—4), David would have Absalom spared.

12 This wood was evidently on the east of the Jordan, not in the territory of Ephraim; and is supposed by some to have derived its name from the slaughter of the Ephraimites mentioned in Judg. xii. This, however, is very uncertain.

David, and there was there a great slaughter that day of twenty thousand men.
 8 For the battle was there scattered over the face of all the country: and "the wood devoured more people¹ that day than the sword devoured.
 9 And Absalom met the servants of David. And Absalom rode upon a mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and * his head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth; and the mule that was under him went away. And a certain man saw it, and told Joab, and 10 said, Behold, I saw Absalom hanged in an oak. And Joab said unto the man that told him, And, behold, thou sawest him, and why didst thou not smite him there to the ground? and I would have given thee ten shekels of silver, and a 11 girdle. And the man said unto Joab, Though I should receive a thousand shekels of silver in mine hand, yet would I not put forth mine hand against the king's son: ^y for in our hearing the king charged thee and Abishai and Ittai, saying, Beware that none touch the young man Absalom. Otherwise I should have wrought falsehood against mine own life: for ^z there is no matter hid from the king, and thou thyself wouldest have set thyself against me. Then said Joab, I may not tarry thus with thee. And he took three darts in his hand, and thrust them through the heart of Absalom, while he was yet alive in the midst of the oak. And ten young men that bare Joab's armour compassed about and smote Absalom, and slew him.
 16 And Joab blew the trumpet, and the people returned from pursuing after Israel: for Joab held back the people. And they took Absalom, and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and ^a laid a very great heap of stones upon him: and all Israel fled every one to his tent.
 18 Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up for himself a pillar, which is in ^b the king's dale: for he said, ^c I have no son to keep my name in remembrance: and he called the pillar after his own name: and it is called unto this day, Absalom's place.²
 19 Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok, Let me now run, and bear the king tidings, how that the LORD hath avenged him of his enemies. And Joab said unto him, Thou shalt not bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day: but this day thou shalt bear no tidings, because the king's son is dead. Then said Joab to Cush³, Go tell the king what thou hast seen. And Cush bowed himself unto Joab, and ran. Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok yet again to Joab, But howsoever, let me, I pray thee, also run after Cush. And Joab said, Wherefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings ready [or, convenient]? But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and overran Cush.
 24 And David ^d sat between the two gates: and ^e the watchman went up to the roof over the gate unto the wall, and lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold a man running alone. And the watchman cried, and told the king. And the king said, If he be alone,⁴ there is tidings in his mouth. And he came apace, and drew near. And the watchman saw another man running: and the watchman called unto the porter, and said, Behold another man running alone. And the king said, He also bringeth tidings. And the watchman said, Methinketh the running of the foremost is like the running of Ahimaaz the son of Zadok. And the king said, He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings.
 28 And Ahimaaz called, and said unto the king, All is well [or, Peace be to thee]. And he fell down to the earth upon his face before the king, and said, Blessed be the LORD thy God, which hath delivered up the men that lifted up their hand against my lord the king. And the king said, Is the young man Absalom safe? And Ahimaaz answered, When Joab sent the king's servant, and me thy servant, I saw a great tumult, but I knew not what it was. And the king said unto him, Turn aside, and stand here. And he turned aside, and stood still. And, behold, Cush came; and Cush said, Tidings, my lord the king: for the LORD hath avenged thee this day of all them that rose up against thee. And the king said unto Cush, Is the young man Absalom safe? And Cush answered, ^f The enemies of my lord the king, and all that rise against thee to do thee hurt, be as that young man is. It must have been erected either before the birth or after the death of Absalom's sons.³ If this means, as it does elsewhere (2 Chron. xiv. 8; Jer. xiii. 23; xxxviii. 7, 10), a Cushite, or Ethiopian, we may suppose that Joab preferred employing him to carry the news of Absalom's death, as being a foreigner, and perhaps a slave, to whom the anger of the king would be of less consequence than to one in the position of Ahimaaz.

lives of thy sons and of thy daughters, and the lives of thy wives, and the lives thou hast declared this day, that thou regardest neither princes nor servants: for this day I perceive, that if Absalom had lived, and all we had died this day, then 7 it had pleased thee well. Now therefore arise, go forth, and speak comfortably

And it came to pass, when he was come to¹ Jerusalem to meet the king, that the king said unto him, ^kWherefore wentest not thou with me, Mephibosheth? And he answered, My lord, O king, my servant deceived me: for thy servant said, I will saddle me an ass, that I may ride thereon, and go to the king; because ^lthy servant is lame. And ^mhe hath slandered thy servant unto my lord the king; ⁿbut my lord the king is as an angel of God: do therefore what is good in thine eyes. 28 For all of my father's house were but dead men before my lord the king: ^oyet didst thou set thy servant among them that did eat at thine own table. ¹ There is no preposition in the original: it may be rendered, 'to meet the king at Jerusalem,' the order of events not being strictly preserved; or, perhaps, 'when he was come from Jerusalem.'

² This award of David's is variously interpreted. As in the East the produce of land is sometimes divided, and half is paid to the landlord as rent, some suppose that the former arrangement was restored; Mephibosheth owning the land, and Ziba farming it as his tenant. Others think that David divided the ownership, either because he was not satisfied with Mephibosheth's explanation, or because he wished to reward Ziba for helping him when in need.

⁴ The ten tribes, having been the first to recall the king, were probably offended because he waited till he had communicated separately with his own tribe, and they had come to escort him, and because he then at once went forward, without giving the other tribes opportunity to join: so that Judah claimed all the honour of having brought him back. The facts stated in the next chapter respecting Sheba's rebellion seem to support this view. Notwithstanding the improved organization which David had introduced into every department of the state during his reign, he had not succeeded in fusing the Hebrew people into one united nation. This division of feeling accounts for the war which immediately succeeded, and, in part also, for the subsequent division of the nation into the two monarchies of Israel (or Ephraim) and Judah.

³ Or, 'he let it fall out.' Joab thus managed, without exciting suspicion, to have his sword in his hand; having picked it up from the ground.

⁶ While David and his friends took the road to Jerusalem, Sheba went northwards through the tribes of Israel to Abel, and was there joined by the recently subdued people of Maachah and Berethah (ch. x. 6, 19). Abel of Beth-maachah is called also 'Abel,' or 'Abel-maim:' see refs.

⁷ The speech is obscure; and several words have been supplied by our translators. It should probably be rendered, 'In old time they clearly spoke (or commanded, see Matt. v. 21, 27), saying, They shall surely ask at Abel, and so conclude;' and it may be taken as claiming, on behalf of the city, an application of the merciful law in Deut. xx. 10, which Joab appears to have disregarded by commencing the siege without first inquiring whether the people of Abel would stand by Sheba or not.

Famine in Israel, and avengement of the Gibeonites.

21 THEN there was a famine in the days of David three years, year after year; and David ^c inquired of the LORD. And the LORD answered, ^d *It is for Saul, and for his bloody house, ^e because he slew the Gibeonites.*¹ And the king called the Gibeonites, and said unto them; (now the Gibeonites were not of the children of Israel, but ^f of the remnant of the Amorites; and the children of Israel had sworn unto them: and Saul sought to slay them in his zeal to the children of Israel and Judah;) wherefore David said unto the Gibeonites, What shall I do for you? and wherewith shall I make ^g the atonement, that ye may bless ^h the inheritance of the LORD? And the Gibeonites said unto him, We will have ⁱ no silver nor gold of Saul, nor of his house; neither for us shalt thou kill any man in Israel. And he said, What ye shall say, that will I do for you. And they answered the king, The man that consumed us, and that devised against us [or, cut us off] that we should be destroyed from remaining in any of the coasts of Israel, let seven men of his sons be delivered unto us, and we will hang² them up unto the LORD ^k in Gibeah of Saul, ^l whom the LORD did choose. And the king said, I will give them.

7 But the king spared Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan the son of Saul, because of ^m the LORD's oath that was between them, between David and Jonathan the son of Saul. But the king took the two sons of ⁿ Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, whom she bare unto Saul, Armoni and Mephibosheth: and the five sons of ^o Michal³ the daughter of Saul, whom she ^p brought up for Adriel the son of Barzillai the Meholathite: and he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and they hanged them in the hill ^q before the LORD: and they fell all seven together, and were put to death in the days of harvest, in the first days, in the beginning of barley harvest. And ^r Rizpah the daughter of Aiah took ^s sackcloth, and spread it for her upon the rock, ^t from the beginning of harvest until water dropped upon them out of heaven, and suffered neither ^u the birds of the air to rest on them by day, nor the beasts of the field by night.

11 And it was told David what Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, the concubine of Saul, had done. And David went and took the bones of Saul and the bones of Jonathan his son from the men of ^x Jabesh-gilead, which had stolen them from the street⁴ of Beth-shan, where the ^y Philistines had hanged them, when the Philistines had slain Saul in Gilboa: and he brought up from thence the bones of Saul and the bones of Jonathan his son; and they gathered the bones of them that were hanged. And the bones of Saul and Jonathan his son buried they in the country of Benjamin in ^z Zelah, in the sepulchre of Kish his father: and they performed all that the king commanded. And after that ^a God was intreated for the land.

Further battles with the Philistines.

15 MOREOVER the Philistines had yet war again with Israel; and David went down, and his servants with him, and fought against the Philistines. ¹ In doing this, Saul had not only shed innocent blood, but had violated a solemn national covenant: see Josh. ix. 15.

² According to the principle of blood-avengement which was universally allowed and acted upon by the Orientals, the Gibeonites had a right to make this demand, and David was not at liberty to refuse it.

³ This appears to be an error of the transcriber for Merab (see 1 Sam. xviii. 19); unless the word sister has been omitted, as our translators conjecture: see marginal reading.

⁴ Or rather, 'the square;' the open space near the city gate, above or beside which the bodies were fastened to the wall. See 1 Sam. xxxi. 10.

⁵ The Septuagint has 'Rapha:' one of the race called Rephaim.

⁶ In 1 Chron. xx. 4, it is 'Gezer.' The same place is mentioned in 2 Sam. v. 25.

- 21 and he also was born to the giant [or, Rapha]. And when he defied [or, reproached^l] Israel, Jonathan the son of ^mShimeah the brother of David slew him.
 22 ⁿThese four were born to the giant in Gath, and ^ofell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

David's song of thanksgiving.

- 22 AND David ^pspake unto the LORD the words of this song¹ in the day that the LORD had ^qdelivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul: and he said, ^rThe LORD is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer;

- 3 The God of my rock;—^sin him will I trust:

He is my 'shield, and the ^t'horn of my salvation,—my high ^utower, and my ^vrefuge, My saviour; thou savest me from violence.

- 4 I will call on the LORD, who is worthy to be praised:
 So shall I be saved from mine enemies.

- 5 When the waves [or, pangs] of death compassed me,
 The floods of ungodly men made me afraid;

- 6 The ^zsorrows of hell compassed me about;—the snares of death prevented me;

- 7 In my distress ^aI called upon the LORD,—and cried to my God:

And he did ^bhear my voice out of his temple,—and my cry did enter into his ears.

- 8 Then ^cthe earth shook and trembled;

^dThe foundations of heaven moved and shook, because he was wroth.

- 9 There went up a smoke out of his nostrils,

And ^efire out of his mouth devoured:—coals were kindled by it.

- 10 He ^fbowed the heavens also, and came down;—and ^gdarkness was under his feet.

- 11 And he rode upon a cherub, and did fly:

And he was seen ^hupon the wings of the wind.

- 12 And he made ⁱdarkness pavilions round about him,
 Dark waters, and thick clouds of the skies.

- 13 Through the brightness before him—were ^kcoals of fire kindled.

- 14 The LORD ^lthundered from heaven,—and the Most High uttered his voice.

- 15 And he sent out ^marrows, and scattered them;—lightning, and discomfited them.

- 16 And the channels of the sea appeared,

The foundations of the world were discovered,

At the ⁿrebuking of the LORD,—at the blast of the breath of his nostrils.

- 17 ^oHe sent from above, he took me;—he drew me out of many waters;

- 18 ^pHe delivered me from my strong enemy,

And from them that hated me:—for they were too strong for me.

- 19 They prevented me in the day of my calamity:—but the LORD was my stay.

- 20 ^qHe brought me forth also into a large place:

He delivered me, because he ^rdelighted in me.

- 21 ^sThe LORD rewarded me according to my righteousness:

According to the ^t'cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.

- 22 For I have ^ukept the ways of the LORD,

And have not wickedly departed from my God.

- 23 For all his ^vjudgments were before me:

And as for his statutes, I did not depart from them.

- 24 I was also ^wupright before him,—and have kept myself from mine iniquity.

- 25 Therefore ^xthe LORD hath recompensed me according to my righteousness;

According to my cleanness in his eyesight.

- 26 With ^ythe merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful,

And with the upright man thou wilt show thyself upright.

- 27 With the pure thou wilt show thyself pure;

And ^zwith the froward thou wilt show thyself unsavoury.

- 28 And the ^a'afflicted people thou wilt save:

But thine eyes are upon ^bthe haughty, that thou mayest bring them down.

- 29 For thou art my lamp, O LORD:—and the LORD will lighten my darkness.

announcing the great principle of the Divine government, illustrated in the history of David as well as of others, namely, the administration of mercy with a due regard to the claims of righteousness; iv. (29—46), a more particular exhibition of this in his personal experience; v. (46—51), a short summary, in which he prophetically anticipates the promised 'Seed'—the everlasting King of Israel. For notes, see Ps. xviii.

- 30 For by thee I have run through a troop:—by my God have I leaped over a wall.
 31 As for God, ^ehis way is perfect;—^fthe word of the LORD is tried:
 He is a buckler to all them that trust in him.
 32 For ^gwho is God, save the LORD?—and who is a rock, save our God?
 33 God is my ^hstrength and power:—and he ⁱmaketh my way ^kperfect.
 34 He maketh my feet ^l'like hinds' feet:—and ^msetteth me upon my high places.
 35 ⁿHe teacheth my hands to war;—so that a bow of steel is broken by mine arms.
 36 Thou hast also given me the shield of thy salvation:
 And thy gentleness hath made me great.
 37 Thou hast ^oenlarged my steps under me;—so that my feet did not slip.
 38 I have pursued mine enemies, and destroyed them;
 And turned not again until I had consumed them.
 39 And I have consumed them, and wounded them, that they could not arise:
 Yea, they are fallen ^punder my feet.
 40 For thou hast ^qgirded me with strength to battle:
^rThem that rose up against me hast thou subdued under me.
 41 Thou hast also given me the ^snecks of mine enemies,
 That I might destroy them that hate me.
 42 They looked, but there was none to save;
Even ^tunto the LORD, but he answered them not.
 43 Then did I beat them as small ^uas the dust of the earth:
 I did stamp them ^xas the mire of the street,—and did spread them abroad.
 44 ^yThou also hast delivered me from the strivings of my people,
 Thou hast kept me to be ^zhead of the heathen:
^aA people which I knew not shall serve me.
 45 Strangers shall submit themselves unto me:
 As soon as they hear, they shall be obedient unto me.
 46 Strangers shall fade away,—and they shall be afraid ^bout of their close places.
 47 The LORD liveth;—and blessed be my rock;
 And exalted be the God of the ^crock of my salvation.
 48 It is God that avengeth me,—and that ^dbringeth down the people under me, 49 And that bringeth me forth from mine enemies:
 Thou also hast lifted me up on high above them that rose up against me:
 Thou hast delivered me from the ^eviolent man.
 50 Therefore I will give thanks unto thee, O LORD, among ^fthe heathen,
 And I will sing praises unto thy name.
 51 ^g*He is* the tower of salvation for his king:—and sheweth mercy to his ^hanointed Unto David, and ⁱto his seed for evermore.

Last predictions of David.

23 NOW these be the last¹ words of David.

- David the son of Jesse said,—^kand the man who was raised up on high, ^lThe anointed of the God of Jacob,—and the sweet psalmist of Israel, said,
 2 ^mThe Spirit of the LORD spake by me,—and his word was in my tongue.
 3 The God of Israel said,—ⁿthe Rock of Israel spake to me,
 He that ruleth² over men must be ^ojust,—ruling ^pin the fear of God
 4 And ^q*he shall be* as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth,
Even a morning without clouds;
 As ^rthe tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain.
 5 Although my house be not so with God;
^sYet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant,
 Ordered in all things, and sure:
 For this is all my salvation, and all my desire,—although he make it not to grow.³
 6 But ^t*the sons of Belial shall be* all of them as ^uthorns thrust away,
 Because they cannot be taken with hands:
 7 But the man that shall touch them—must be fenced with iron and the staff of a spear;
 And they shall be utterly burned with fire in the same place.

¹ The following psalm is probably called 'the last,' as indicating David's last hopes and desires.

² This is a glowing picture of the rising Sun of truth, the Light of the world; under whose sunshine the beautiful fruits of truth and goodness are formed and ripened. The passage would be better rendered—

'There shall be a Righteous One ruling over men, Ruling in the fear of God;
 As the light of morning when the sun riseth,
 A morning cloudless for brightness,

As after rain the herbage from the earth.

For is not my house thus with God?

For an everlasting covenant he hath made with me.'

This should be compared with Psa. ii., lxxii., cx.; and is evidently a prophecy of the Messiah, in his righteous reign, the blessings which he showers on the world, and the punishment of his enemies.

³ Either, 'For shall he not surely make to grow all my salvation and all my desire?' or, 'But the sons of Belial shall not grow; but shall be all of them as thorns,' etc.

David's principal warriors.

- 8 THESE be the names of the mighty men¹ whom David had: ^a The Tachmonite that sat in the seat, chief among the captains; the same was Adino the Eznite:
- 9 ^b he lift up his spear against eight² hundred, whom he slew at one time. And after him was ^c Elcazar the son of Dodo the Ahohite, one of the three mighty men with David, when they defied the Philistines that were there gathered together
- 10 to battle, and the men of Israel were gone away: he arose, and smote the Philistines until his hand was weary, and his hand clave unto the sword: and ^d the LORD wrought a great victory that day;³ and the people returned after him only to spoil.
- 11 And after him was ^e Shammah the son of Agee the Hararite. ^f And the Philistines were gathered together into a troop [or, for foraging], where was a piece of
- 12 ground full of lentiles: and the people fled from the Philistines. But he stood in the midst of the ground, and defended it, and slew the Philistines: and ^g the LORD wrought a great victory.
- 13 And ^h three of the thirty chief [or, the three captains over the thirty] went down, and came to David in the harvest time unto ⁱ the cave of Adullam: and
- 14 the troop of the Philistines pitched in ^j the valley of Rephaim. And David was then in ^k an hold, and the garrison of the Philistines was then in Beth-lehem.
- 15 And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the water of
- 16 the well of Beth-lehem,⁴ which is by the gate! And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: nevertheless he
- 17 would not drink thereof, but poured it out unto the LORD.⁵ And he said, Be it far from me, O LORD, that I should do this: is not this ^l the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives? therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty men.
- 18 And ^m Abishai, the brother of Joab, the son of Zeruiah, was chief among three. And he lifted up his spear against three hundred, and slew them, and had the
- 19 name among three. Was he not most honourable of the three? therefore he was their captain: howbeit he attained not unto the first three.
- 20 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man, of ⁿ Kabzeel, who had done many acts,⁶ he slew two lionlike men of Moab: he went down also and
- 21 slew a lion in the midst of a pit in time of snow:⁷ and he slew an Egyptian, ^o a goodly man: and the Egyptian had a spear in his hand; but he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him
- 22 with his own spear. These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had the
- 23 name among three mighty men. He was more honourable than the thirty,⁸ but he attained not to the first three. And David set him ^p over his ^q guard.
- 24 ^r Asahel the brother of Joab was one of the thirty; Elhanan the son of Dodo of
- 25 Beth-lehem, ^s Shammah the Harodite, Elikah the Harodite, Helez the Paltite, Ira
- 27 the son of Ikkesh the Tekoite, Abiezer the Anethothite, Mebunni the Hushathite, Zalmon the Ahohite, Maharai the Netophathite, Heleb the son of Baanah, a
- 29 Netophathite, Ittai the son of Ribai out of Gibeah of the children of Benjamin,
- 30 Benaiah the Pirathonite, Hiddai of the brooks [or, valleys⁹] of Gaash, Abi-albon
- 32 the Arbathite, Azmaveth the Barhumite, Eliahba the Shaalbonite, of the sons of
- 33 Jashen, Jonathan, Shammah the Hararite, Ahiam the son of Sharar the Hararite.
- 34 Eliphelet the son of Ahasbai, the son of the Maachathite, Eliam the son of
- 35 Ahithophel the Gilonite, Hezrai the Carmelite, Paarai the Arbite, Igal the son
- 37 of Nathan of Zobah, Bani the Gadite, Zelek the Ammonite, Nahari the Beerothite,

^a or, Joshebbassebet the Tachmonite, head of the three.

¹ The following lists differ considerably from those in 1 Chron. xi.; but it is evident that the body of officers would undergo frequent changes by death and otherwise. Of those here mentioned, Asahel and Uriah were already dead, and their places were doubtless filled up by others. In some cases the same person appears under different names, one probably personal, the other titular.

² In 1 Chron. xi. 11, the number is three hundred.

³ This and the next exploit mentioned (vers. 11, 12) occurred probably while David was acting as general under Saul against the Philistines. However wonderful some of these exploits may be, they must not be judged of by the rules of modern European warfare, in which so much less depends on personal strength and valour. It is worthy of remark, also, that the actions recorded of these men evince not only martial prowess, but also truly generous feeling, elevated sentiment, and nobleness of mind.

⁷ The Hebrew word which is here translated 'thirty' is elsewhere rendered 'captains,' and probably means 'officers' in general.

38 armourbearer to Joab the son of Zeruiah, ^a Ira an Ithrite, Gareb an Ithrite, 39 ^a Uriah the Hittite: thirty and seven in all.

Numbering of the people; the visitation of pestilence, and its removal.

24 AND ^y again the anger¹ of the LORD was kindled against Israel, and ^z he 2 moved David against them to say, "Go, number Israel and Judah. For the king said to Joab the captain of the host, which was with him, Go now through all the tribes of Israel, ^b from Dan even to Beer-sheba, and number ye the people, 3 that ^c I may know the number of the people. And Joab said² unto the king, Now the LORD thy God add unto the people, how many soever they be, an hundredfold, and that the eyes of my lord the king may see it: but why doth my lord 4 the king delight in this thing? Notwithstanding, ^d the king's word prevailed against Joab, and against the captains of the host.

And Joab and the captains of the host went out from the presence of the king, 5 to number the people of Israel. And they passed over Jordan, and pitched in ^e Aroer,³ on the right side of the city that lieth in the midst of the river
6 [or, valley] of Gad, and toward ^f Jazer: then they came to Gilead, and to the land of Tahtim-hodshi [or, nether land newly inhabited]; and they came to ^g Dan-jaan, 7 and about to ^h Zidon, and came to the stronghold of Tyre, and to all the cities of the Hivites, and of the Canaanites: and they went out to the south of Judah, 8 even to Beer-sheba. So when they had gone through all the land, they came to 9 Jerusalem at the end of nine months and twenty days. And Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people unto the king: ⁱ and there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword; and the men of Judah were five hundred thousand men.

10 And ^k David's heart smote him after that he had numbered the people. And David said unto the LORD, ^l I have sinned greatly in that I have done: and now,
I beseech thee, O LORD, ^m take away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have 11 done very foolishly. For when David was up in the morning, the word of the 12 LORD came unto the prophet ⁿ Gad, David's ^p seer, saying, Go and say unto David, Thus saith the LORD, I offer thee three things; choose thee one of them, that I 13 may do it unto thee. So Gad came to David, and told him, and said unto him, Shall ^q seven years of famine come unto thee in thy land? or wilt thou ^r flee three months before thine enemies, while they pursue thee? or that there be ^s three days' pestilence in thy land? now advise, and see what answer I shall return to 1 We have here a glimpse of that arrangement in the Divine administration by which one sin brings on another, involving the punishment of both, and subordinating even the interference of the great adversary of the human race to the purposes of God's justice. See 1 Chron. xxi. 1.

2 Whatever might be the exact point of David's criminality, it is plain that this census had a military object, for which reason Joab and 'the captains of the host' (ver. 4), not the priests, were commissioned to take it.

3 A frontier town on the river Jabbok, which divided the portion of the tribe of Gad from the Ammonites.

4 David preferred any of those evils which, coming directly from the hand of God, without human interference, would best remind and assure him that the chastisement he was to suffer was gracious in its design, and regulated by mercy in its infliction. The punishment of which he made choice was one under which he and his family would be as much exposed as the poorest of his subjects.

5 When repentance is attributed to God, it is in a very different sense from that in which the word is used with reference to men. Being himself unchangeable, he always acts towards his creatures on the same principles, treating them according to their disposition and conduct. This necessarily causes an alteration in his procedure, according to the altered relation towards himself in which the sinner is placed by penitence and faith. See also note on Gen. vi. 6.

6 Showing at once David's sense of his own guilt, and his deep interest in his people's welfare.

7 The threshing-floors in the East are round level plots of ground in the open air, where the corn is trodden by the oxen. This is supposed to have been on the summit north-east of Zion, which was afterwards occupied by the temple.

21 went out, and bowed himself before the king on his face upon the ground. And Araunah said, Wherefore is my lord the king come to his servant? ^fAnd David said, To buy the threshingfloor of thee, to build an altar unto the LORD, that ^gthe plague may be stayed from the people. And Araunah said unto David, ^hLet my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him: ⁱbehold, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and threshing instruments and other instruments of the oxen for wood. All these things did Araunah, ^kas a king, give unto the king. And Araunah said unto the king, The LORD thy God ^laccept thee. And the king said unto Araunah, ^mNay; but I will surely buy it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the LORD my God of that which doth cost ⁿme nothing. So ^oDavid bought the threshingfloor and the oxen for fifty shekels of silver. And David built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings. ^pSo the LORD was intreated for the land, and ^qthe plague was stayed from Israel.

NOTE ON THE CHARACTER OF DAVID.

IN many parts of Scripture, David is presented to us as one of the most eminent of God's servants, and he is even mentioned by the honourable appellation, 'a man after God's own heart.' These words were uttered in immediate connection with a condemnation of Saul's disobedience (1 Sam. xiii. 14), and they predicted a successor whose character and conduct should be in direct opposition to those of Saul; one who would not, like Saul, seek to exercise an independent regal authority, but would be a faithful servant of Jehovah, obeying his commands as delivered by his prophets; and whom, therefore, God would approve and continue to favour. Thus the expression is interpreted by St. Paul, in Acts xiii. 22: 'I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall execute all my will.' The particular purposes for which God advanced David to the throne appear to have been—1. To maintain the knowledge and service of the one true God, and to enforce his law, in opposition to all forms of idolatry and irreligion. 2. To free the people from the power of the Philistines, and of all their enemies; and by a wise and just administration to make the nation prosperous and happy. All the pleasure of God in these important respects David faithfully performed; leaving an illustrious example to all his successors in the kingdom; of any of whom the highest praise is, 'that he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David his father had done' (1 Kings xv. 11; 2 Kings xviii. 3; xxii. 2).

But more than this, David's whole character and conduct, with the sad exceptions which he himself bemoaned with the most penitential sorrow, is one on which the mind dwells with the highest admiration. His youthful piety—his lofty and varied genius—his heroic courage—his largeness of heart and tenderness of feeling—his confidence and delight in God, and steadfast adherence to his service and worship, and zeal for his honour,—all these, as displayed in his history and in his writings, form a combination of excellencies both rare and wonderful.

With reference to his lamentable fall, several points are worthy of observation:—his deep sorrow on account of his sin; his unreserved confession of his guilt; his profound humiliation before God and man, even after he had received assurance of pardon from God himself; his respect for his reprover, whom he continued to honour and confide in as long as he lived; and the resignation of his after-life under all the painful chastisements of the Almighty. And that holy Judge who pronounced his approval of the general tenor of David's life instructed the sacred historian impartially to record this great sin, with the prophet's severe rebuke, and the many sufferings which clouded his later years. Surely no one, without wilfully perverting this history, can derive from it excuse or encouragement to sin.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE KINGS,

OTHERWISE CALLED

THE THIRD BOOK OF THE KINGS.

THE two Books of the Kings originally formed one in the Hebrew: but they were divided by the Greek translators, and called the Third and Fourth Books of the Kings; the two Books of Samuel being the First and Second. They further develop the leading subjects of the former Books (see Preface to 1 Samuel), taking up the history of the Hebrew nation at the period of its greatest glory; then relating its division into two independent states; and tracing their gradual declension to the time of their subversion.

In the history of the monarchy, the various characters of the successive kings, and the general spirit of their government, are faithfully portrayed; together with such of their actions, and such national events, as had an immediate bearing upon their relation to their Divine Sovereign, and consequently upon the religious state of the people. All this is exhibited in particular connection with the promise given to David (2 Sam. vii. 12—16), which, indeed, furnishes the key to the subsequent history. It is shown that the Lord fulfilled his gracious promise; chastising the seed of David for their sins, and even casting them off, but not for ever. So that the kingdom was not wholly taken from his family for the sin of Solomon (1 Kings xi. 32—37; xii. 20); nor was the nation or the family of David extinguished when Jerusalem and the temple were destroyed (2 Kings xxv. 27—30).

This view of the special purposes of the history will explain why, in some parts, more prominence is given to the affairs of the ten tribes than to those of the kingdom of Judah; inasmuch as they offer more exemplary illustrations of the manner in which the invisible Sovereign asserted his supremacy over both kings and people. The introduction and obstinate maintenance of idolatry in the kingdom of Israel made it needful that He should constantly interpose by his servants the prophets; reminding the nation of their backslidings; alarming hardened sinners by signs and wonders; and publicly punishing their kings, who led the people into sin, by frequent changes of the dynasty: so that, in the short space of 250 years, the throne was occupied by nine different families; until at last, after warnings and milder punishments had failed to produce amendment, the kingdom was utterly overthrown, and 'Ephraim ceased to be a people' (Isa. vii. 8).

In the smaller state of Judah, which continued faithful to the house of David, the existence of the temple worship and of the Levitical priesthood tended to uphold the authority of Jehovah. Some idolaters appear among the monarchs, but their reigns were generally short; while those of the pious kings were, according to the Divine promises by Moses, usually long and prosperous. These princes, with the aid of the prophets and priests, repressed idolatry, and revived from time to time the knowledge and service of Jehovah. Thus Judah, though a much smaller country, preserved her national existence for more than a century longer than Israel; but, finally, as no lasting reformation was effected, her land also was desolated, and the best of her sons were subjected to a seventy years' exile.

In these books also is further displayed the agency and influence of the prophets, who were specially commissioned by the Supreme King of Israel to assert his rights, and demand obedience to his laws; counselling, guiding, and aiding the monarchs and the people when they acted aright, and warning and judging them when they sinned. Great prominence is given to the prophetic ministry; so that we find it frequently taking part in the affairs of the nation, as well as declaring the Divine purposes respecting the future. Nathan's interference secures the accession of Solomon (1 Kings i. 45). Ahijah announces the division of the kingdom, with its causes (xi. 29—40). Shemaiah, after the division has taken place, confirms it, by directing Rehoboam to disband his army (xii. 22, 23). By various prophets, Jeroboam's idolatry is publicly reprobated, and its punishment threatened (xiii. 1—3; xiv. 7); judgment is denounced against the house of Baasha (xvi. 1); and Ahab's doom is distinctly declared (xxii. 17—28). Whilst, in the midst of the national history, the wonderful works of the two great prophets, Elijah and Elisha, occupy so much of several chapters, that the kings appear to hold but a secondary place (1 Kings xvii.—2 Kings xiii.) And besides these, there were Isaiah, Jeremiah, Hosea, and others, whose inspired writings, if carefully compared with the contemporaneous histories, will afford much aid in understanding the national affairs, and particularly the moral state of the times. A tabular view of the prophets, showing the periods at which they respectively lived, is given at the commencement of the Prophetical Books. See also the Chronological Table in pages 517—520.

Nothing certain is known with respect to the authorship of these Books of the Kings; but it appears that narratives of Solomon's reign had been composed by Nathan, Ahijah the Shilonite, and Iddo (2 Chron. ix. 29); that a history of Rehoboam had been written by Shemaiah and Iddo, to which the latter had added an account of Abijah (2 Chron. xii. 15; xiii. 22); that Jehu, the son of Hanani, had recorded the life of Jehoshaphat (2 Chron. xx. 34); that annals of the kings from Uzziah to Hezekiah had been kept by Isaiah, among whose prophecies may be found narratives almost verbally agreeing with these (see 2 Chron. xxvi. 22; xxxii. 32; Isa. xxxvi.—xxxviii. 1—8, 21, 22; xxxix.; compared with 2 Kings xviii. 13—37, xix., xx. 1—19); and that Jeremiah had done the same in his days (see 2 Kings xxiv. 18—20; xxv.; Jer. lli.) From such records of contemporary prophets, some inspired writer, in the time of Nebuchadnezzar and Evil-Merodach, compiled the present books, containing as much as the Holy Spirit deemed necessary. See 1 Kings xi. 41; xiv. 19, 29; xv. 7, 23; xvi. 5, 14, 20. The Jewish tradition, which ascribes this work to Jeremiah, appears highly probable on comparing the period at which the history closes (see 2 Kings xxv. 27—30) with what we know of the duration of his life; and further observing the occasional resemblance in style and expression to some parts of his writings.

The chronology of this period is not easily settled; and nothing more than an approximation to correctness seems now to be attainable. The parallel histories in the Books of the Kings and the Chronicles disagree respecting some dates, and other dates are manifestly erroneous in both. See Note in page 516, and Chronological Table in pages 517—520. The most careful investigations give from 422 to 432 years for the two books—from the accession of Solomon to the capture of Jerusalem—divided into four periods: 1. The undivided monarchy under Solomon, 40 years. 2. From the division of the kingdom to the accession of Jehu, who put to death the two kings of Judah and Israel, between 88 and 92 years. 3. From the accession of Jehu to the captivity of the ten tribes, between 161 and 167 years. 4. The duration of the kingdom of Judah alone, 133 years.

The FIRST BOOK OF THE KINGS comprehends a period of about 120 years, from the accession of Solomon to the death of Jehoshaphat; and it may be divided into two principal parts:—

I. The history of the UNDIVIDED KINGDOM under Solomon; including David's old age and death, Solomon's accession to the throne, and suppression of Adonijah's conspiracy (ch. i., ii.); Solomon's vision and prayer, and his wisdom (iii.); his court and officers, and the extent and prosperity of his kingdom (iv.); the building of the temple, and of Solomon's palaces (v.—vii.); dedication of the temple (viii.—ix. 9); Solomon's wealth and magnificence, and the queen of Sheba's visit (ix. 9—x.); Solomon's wives, and idolatry—God's displeasure—Solomon's adversaries (xi.)

II. The history of the TWO SEPARATE KINGDOMS for about 80 years; including Rehoboam's accession, and the revolt of the ten tribes (xii. 1—24); Jeroboam's idolatry, and the prophecies against him and his family (xii. 24—xiv. 20); the reigns of Rehoboam, Abijah, and Asa in Judah (xiv. 21—xv. 24), and of Nadab, Baasha, Elah, Zimri, Omri, and Ahab in Israel (xv. 25—xvi.); Elijah's prophetic ministry, and the call of Elisha (xvii.—xix.); war between Israel and Syria (xx.); murder of Naboth, and Elijah's reproof of Ahab (xxi.); Jehoshaphat's league with Ahab—Micaiah and the false prophets—death of Ahab (xxii. 1—40); Jehoshaphat's reign in Judah, and Ahaziah's in Israel (xxii. 41—53).

David's old age; Adonijah's conspiracy; and Solomon's accession to the throne.

1 NOW king David was old and stricken in years; and they covered him with 2 clothes, but he gat no heat. Wherefore his servants said unto him, Let there be sought for my lord the king a young virgin: and let her stand before the king, and let her cherish him, and let her lie in thy bosom, that my lord the king may 3 get heat. So they sought for a fair damsel throughout all the coasts of Israel,
4 and found Abishag a ^aShunammite, and brought her to the king. And the damsel was very fair, and cherished the king, and ministered to him: but the king knew her not.

^a Jos. 19. 18.

5 Then ^b Adonijah the son of Haggith exalted ¹ himself, saying, I will be king: and ^c he prepared him chariots and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him.

7 Absalom. ⁴ And he conferred with ^f Joab the son of Zeruiah, and with ^g Abiathar the priest: and ^h they following Adonijah helped him. But Zadok the priest, and Benaiah ⁵ the son of Jehoiada, and Nathan the prophet, and ⁱ Shimei, ⁶ and Rei, and ^k the mighty men which belonged to David, were not with Adonijah.

9 And Adonijah slew sheep and oxen and fat cattle by the stone of Zohaleth, ⁷ which is by En-rogel [or, the well Rogel^l], and called all his brethren the king's sons, and all the men of Judah the king's servants: but Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah, and the mighty men, and Solomon ⁸ his brother, he called not.

11 Wherefore Nathan spake unto Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon, saying, Hast thou not heard that Adonijah the son of ^m Haggith doth reign, and David our lord knoweth it not? Now therefore come, let me, I pray thee, give thee counsel, that thou mayest save ⁹ thine own life, and the life of thy son Solomon. Go and get thee in unto king David, and say unto him, Didst not thou, my lord, O king, swear unto thine handmaid, saying, ⁿ Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne? why then doth Adonijah reign? Behold, while thou yet talkest there with the king, I also will come in after thee, and confirm thy words.

15 And Bath-sheba went in unto the king into the chamber: and the king was very old; and Abishag the Shunammite ministered unto the king. And Bath-sheba bowed, and did obeisance unto the king. And the king said, What wouldest thou? And she said unto him, ^o My lord, ^p thou swarest by the LORD thy God unto thine handmaid, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne. And now, behold, Adonijah reigneth; and now, my lord the king, thou knowest it not: ^q and he hath slain oxen and fat cattle and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the sons of the king, and Abiathar the priest, and Joab the captain of the host: but Solomon thy servant hath he not called. And thou, my lord, O king, the eyes of all Israel are upon thee, that thou shouldst tell them who shall sit on the throne of my lord the king after him. Otherwise it shall come to pass, when my lord the king shall ^r sleep with his fathers, that I and my son Solomon shall be counted offenders.

22 And, lo, while she yet talked with the king, Nathan the prophet also came in. And they told the king, saying, Behold Nathan the prophet. And when he was come in before the king, he bowed himself before the king with his face to the ground. And Nathan said, My lord, O king, hast thou said, Adonijah shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne? ^s For he is gone down this day, and hath slain oxen and fat cattle and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the king's sons, and the captains of the host, and Abiathar the priest: and, behold, they eat and drink before him, and say, 'God save king Adonijah

Is this thing done by my lord the king, and thou hast not showed it unto thy servant, who should sit on the throne of my lord the king after him?

28 Then king David answered and said, Call me Bath-sheba. And she came into the king's presence, and stood before the king. And the king swarc, and said, ^t As the LORD liveth, that hath redeemed my soul out of all distress, ^u even as I swarc unto thee by the LORD God of Israel, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne in my stead; even so will

¹ Adonijah does not appear to have intended to depose his father, but to assert his claim to succeed to the crown after his death, as being the eldest surviving son. The invisible King of Israel had, however, reserved to himself the power of appointing his vicegerent, irrespectively of the law of primogeniture; and had promised the kingdom to Solomon, the 'man of peace,' who was to build the temple (1 Chron. xxii. 9; xxviii. 5); and Adonijah was cognizant of this decision: see ch. ii. 15.

² Showing the same laxity of parental discipline which had produced such disastrous consequences in the instances of Amnon and Absalom.

³ This personal quality, no doubt, as in the case of Absalom, contributed to his success.

⁴ This means only that Adonijah was next in age to Absalom; for they were not sons of the same mother.

⁶ This man was not Shimei of Bahurim; but probably the son of Elah, and the same who was afterwards one of Solomon's officers (ch. iv. 18). Josephus calls him 'the friend of David' (Antiq. vii. 14).

⁸ The omission of Solomon shows that Adonijah considered him as his rival.

¹ Gihon was a fountain in the valley on the west of Zion; consequently on the side of the city most distant from En-rogel, where Adonijah and his party were (ver. 9); and was probably chosen on that account.

⁴ According to the law in Exod. xxi. 12—14, the murderer was to be taken from the altar and slain; which implies that the altar had been resorted to as a place of refuge previously to the enactment of the Mosaic laws.

⁵ That is, all mankind (Gen. xi. 9; Josh. xxiii. 14). A fuller account of the closing scenes of David's life is given in 1 Chron. xxviii., xxix.

5 (said he) a man on the throne of Israel. Moreover thou knowest also what Joab the son of Zeruiah ¹did to me, and what he did to the two captains of the hosts of Israel, unto ^mAbner the son of Ner, and unto ⁿAmasa the son of Jether, whom he slew, and shed the blood of war in peace, and put the blood of war upon his girdle, that was about his loins, and in his shoes that were on his feet. Do therefore ^oaccording to thy wisdom, and ^plet not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace.¹ But show kindness² unto the sons of ^qBarzillai the Gileadite, and let them be of those that ^reat at thy table: for so ^sthey came³ to me when I fled because of Absalom thy brother. And, behold, thou hast with thee ^tShimei⁴ the son of Gera, a Benjamite of Bahurim, which cursed me with a grievous curse in the day when I went to Mahanaim: but ^uhe came down to meet me at Jordan, and I swore to him by the LORD, saying, I will not put thee to death with the sword. Now therefore ^vhold him not guiltless: for thou art a wise man, and knowest what thou oughtest to do unto him; but his hoar head ^ybring thou down to the grave with blood.

10 So ^zDavid slept with his fathers, and was buried in ^athe city of David. And the days that David ^breigned over Israel were forty years: seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

Solomon's kingdom established, and his enemies punished.

12 ^cTHEN sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father; and ^dhis kingdom was established greatly. And Adonijah the son of Haggith came to Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon. And she said, ^eComest thou peaceably? And he said, Peaceably. He said moreover, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And she said, Say on. And he said, Thou knowest that the kingdom was ^fmine, and that all Israel set their faces on me, that I should reign: howbeit the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's: for ^git was his from the LORD. And now I ask one petition of thee, ^hdeny me not. And she said unto him, Say on. And he said, Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the king, (for he will not say thee nay,) that he give me ⁱAbishag the Shunammite to wife. And Bath-sheba said, Well; I will speak for thee unto the king.

19 Bath-sheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to speak unto him for Adonijah. And the king rose up to meet her, and ^kbowed himself unto her, and sat down on his throne, and caused a seat to be set for the king's mother; ^land she sat on his right hand. Then she said, I desire one small petition of thee; I pray thee, say me not nay. And the king said unto her, Ask on, my mother: for I will not say thee nay. And she said, Let Abishag the Shunammite be given to ^mAdonijah thy brother to wife. And king Solomon answered and said unto his mother, And why dost thou ask Abishag the Shunammite for Adonijah? ask for him the kingdom also; for he is mine elder brother; even for him, and for ⁿAbiathar the priest, and for Joab the son of Zeruiah.⁵ Then king Solomon swore by the LORD, saying, ^oGod do so to me, and more also, if Adonijah have not spoken this word against his own life. Now therefore, as the LORD liveth, which hath established me, and set me on the throne of David my father, and who hath ^pmade me an house,⁶ as he ^qpromised, Adonijah shall be put to death this day. And king Solomon sent by the hand of Benaiah the son of Jehoiada; and he fell upon him that he died.

26 And unto Abiathar the priest said the king, Get thee to ^rAnathoth, unto thine own fields; for thou art worthy of death:⁷ but I will not at this time put thee to death, ^sbecause thou barest the ark of the Lord God before David my father, and because ^tthou hast been afflicted in all wherein my father was afflicted. So Solomon thrust⁸ out Abiathar from being priest unto the LORD; that he might

1 Joab's life had long been forfeited by atrocious murders. These directions are to be attributed not to personal resentment on David's part, but to a sense of justice, mingled perhaps with some self-reproach for having, from reasons of policy, delayed the infliction of merited punishment; which, indeed, would even now require peculiar wisdom, in order to avoid alienating the army.

2 The dying king felt the claims of gratitude to be not less sacred than those of justice.

3 This word is used for showing kindness, especially when God sends help (Psa. lxix. 18; Lam. iii. 57).

4 David's injunction evidently amounts to this—that Shimei was so dangerous a person that he must be closely watched, and on the first act of disobedience be put to death. Shimei might have preserved his life on certain conditions, which he acknowledged to be reasonable, and yet violated on a very slight pretext: see vers. 39, 40.

5 See note on 2 Sam. iii. 7. Adonijah's former offence had been overlooked; but it seems that, after his first alarm had subsided, his hopes revived; and Solomon discerned in this application (see ver. 15) the first development of a further design upon the crown, concocted between these three men, of which Solomon probably had some information not recorded here.

6 See refs. 'House' here means the royal succession.

7 As an accomplice in Adonijah's treason.

8 The Jewish kings exercised the power of appointing or deposing the high priests at their discretion. Abiathar seems to have been second to Zadok: see ch. iv. 4. In later times, we find that the high priest had a deputy called, in 2 Kings xxv. 18, the 'second priest,' and afterwards named 'Sagan.'

'fulfil¹ the word of the LORD, which he spake concerning the house of Eli in Shiloh.

28 Then tidings came to Joab: for Joab "had turned after Adonijah, though he turned not after Absalom. And Joab fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD, and 29 "caught hold on the horns of the altar. And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD; and, behold, he is by the altar. Then 30 Solomon sent Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, saying, Go, fall upon him. And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the LORD, and said unto him, Thus saith the king, Come forth. And he said, Nay;² but I will die here. And Benaiah brought the king word again, saying, Thus said Joab, and thus he answered me.

31 And the king said unto him, "Do as he hath said, and fall upon him, and bury him; ²that thou mayest take away the innocent blood, which Joab shed, from 32 me, "and from the house of my father. And the LORD ^bshall return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon two men more righteous ^cand better than he, and slew them with the sword, ^dmy father David not knowing thereof, to wit, 33 "Abner the son of Ner, captain of the host of Israel, and ^fAmasa the son of Jether, captain of the host of Judah. Their blood shall therefore return upon the head of Joab, and ^gupon the head of his seed for ever: ^hbut upon David, and 34 "upon his seed, and upon his house, and upon his throne, shall there be peace for ever from the LORD. So Benaiah the son of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and slew him: and he was buried ⁱin his own house in the wilderness.

35 And the king put Benaiah the son of Jehoiada in his room over the host: and ^jZadok the priest did the king put in the room of ^mAbiathar.

36 And the king sent and called for ⁿShimei, and said unto him, Build thee an

37 house in Jerusalem, and dwell there, and go not forth thence any whither. For it shall be, that on the day thou goest out, and passest over ^othe brook Kidron,³

38 thou shalt know for certain that thou shalt surely die: ^pthy blood shall be upon thine own head. And Shimei said unto the king, The saying is good: as my lord

39 the king hath said, so will thy servant do. And Shimei dwelt in Jerusalem many days. And it came to pass at the end of three years, that two of the servants of 40 Shimei ran away unto ^qAchish son of Maachah king of Gath. And they told Shimei, saying, Behold, thy servants be in Gath. And Shimei arose, and saddled

41 his ass, and went to Gath to Achish to seek his servants: and Shimei went, and brought his servants from Gath. And it was told Solomon that Shimei had gone

42 from Jerusalem to Gath, and was come again. And the king sent and called for Shimei, and said unto him, Did I not make thee to swear by the LORD, and pro-

43 tested unto thee, saying, Know for a certain, on the day thou goest out, and walkest abroad any whither, that thou shalt surely die? and thou saidst unto me,

44 The word that I have heard is good. Why then hast thou not kept the oath of the LORD, and the commandment that I have charged thee with? The king said

45 moreover to Shimei, Thou knowest ^rall the wickedness which thine heart is privy to, that thou didst to David my father: therefore the LORD shall ^sreturn thy 46 wickedness upon thine own head; and king Solomon shall be ^tblessed, and ^uthe throne of David shall be established before the LORD for ever. So the king commanded Benaiah the son of Jehoiada; which went out, and fell upon him, that he died. And the ^vkingdom was established in the hand of Solomon.

¹ This passage (which is similar to many others) does not mean that Solomon did this in order to fulfil the prophecy; but that, being led to do it by Abiathar's rebellion, he thus fulfilled the word of the Lord. See note on 1 Sam. ii. 30.

² Joab probably supposed that Solomon would be unwilling to shed blood in a holy place.

³ Solomon specifies the brook Kidron by way of example, meaning the immediate neighbourhood (see ver. 42).

⁴ Solomon had already married, more than a year before his accession, Naamah an Ammonitess, the mother of Rehoboam. Compare ch. xi. 42 with xiv. 21. This marriage with an Egyptian princess was not absolutely contrary to the law, as alliances with Canaanites were. See Exod xxxiv. 16; Deut. vii. 3; xxiii. 7.

⁵ Probably fortifying the lower city; a work which his father had desired to accomplish, and had perhaps commenced. See Psa. li. 18.

the LORD appeared to Solomon ^m in a dream by night: and God said, "Ask what I shall give thee.¹ " And Solomon said, Thou hast showed unto thy servant David my father ^p great mercy, according as he ^q walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee; and thou hast kept for him this great kindness, that thou ^r hast given him a son to sit on his throne, as it is this day. And now, O LORD my God, thou hast made thy servant king instead of David my father: ^s and I am but a little child: I know not how ^t to go out or come in.² And thy servant is in the midst of thy people which thou ^u hast chosen, a great people, ^v that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude. ^w Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart ^x to judge thy people, that I may ^y discern between good and bad: for ^z who is able to judge this thy so great a people?

11 And the speech ^c pleased the LORD, that Solomon had asked this thing. And God said unto him, Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast ^d not asked for thyself long life; neither hast asked riches for thyself, nor hast asked the life of thine enemies; but hast asked for thyself understanding to discern judgment; ^e behold, I have done according to thy words: ^f lo, I have given thee a wise and an understanding heart; so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee. And I have also ^g given thee that which thou hast not asked, both ^h riches and honour: so that there shall not be any among the kings like unto thee all thy days. And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, ⁱ as thy father David did walk, then I will ^k lengthen³ thy days. And Solomon ^l awoke; and, behold, it was a dream. And he came to Jerusalem, and stood before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and offered up burnt offerings, and offered peace offerings, and ^m made a feast to all his servants.

An instance of Solomon's judicial wisdom.

16 THEN came there two women, that were harlots, unto the king, and ⁿ stood before him. And the one woman said, O my lord, I and this woman dwell in one house; and I was delivered of a child with her in the house. And it came to pass the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also: and we were together; there was no stranger with us in the house, save we two in the house. And this woman's child died in the night; because she overlaid it. And she arose at midnight, and took my son from beside me, while thine handmaid slept, and laid it in her bosom, and laid her dead child in my bosom. And when I rose in the morning to give my child suck, behold, it was dead: but when I had considered it in the morning, behold, it was not my son, which I did bear. And the other woman said, Nay; but the living is my son, and the dead is thy son. And this said, No: but the dead is thy son, and the living is my son. Thus they spake before the king.

23 Then said the king, The one saith, This is my son that liveth, and thy son is the dead: and the other saith, Nay; but thy son is the dead, and my son is the living. And the king said, Bring me a sword. And they brought a sword before the king. And the king said, Divide the living child in two,⁴ and give half to the one, and half to the other. Then spake the woman, whose the living child was, unto the king, for ^o her bowels yearned upon her son, and she said, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it. But the other said, Let it be neither mine nor thine, but divide it. Then the king answered and said, Give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: she is the mother thereof.

28 And all Israel heard of the judgment which the king had judged; and they ^p feared the king: for they saw that the ^q wisdom of God was in him, to do judgment.

² This is a Hebraism for to conduct affairs.

³ The promise of long life was conditional, and was forfeited by Solomon's unfaithfulness; so that he scarcely reached the age of sixty: see ch. xi. 42.

⁴ The peculiar difficulty in this case arose from the characters of the two parties, and the absence of witnesses. The wisdom here displayed is highly esteemed and very valuable in the East, where the judge often has to discover the truth through the falsehoods of both parties. The expedient to which Solomon resorted shows that he possessed absolute judicial power, and might be expected to use it.

⁵ This chapter describes the state of the kingdom, not at any particular time, but during the whole period of Solomon's greatest prosperity.

⁶ The 'recorder' was the annalist or registrar of the proceedings of the government.

5 over the host: and Zadok and 'Abiathar¹ were the priests: and Azariah the son of Nathan was over ^uthe officers: and Zabud the son of Nathan was ^xprincipal officer, and ^ythe king's friend: and Ahishar was over the household: and ^zAdoniram the son of Abda was over the tribute [or, levy].

7 And Solomon had twelve officers² over all Israel, which provided victuals for the king and his household: each man his month in a year made provision. And these are their names: ^aThe son of Hur,³ in mount Ephraim: ^bthe son of Dekar, in Makaz, and in Shaalbim, and Beth-shemesh, and Elon-beth-hanan: ^cthe son of Hesed, in Aruboth; to him pertained Sochoh,⁴ and all the land of Hephher: ^dthe son of Abinadab, in all the region of Dor; which had Taphath the daughter⁵ of Solomon to wife: Baana the son of Ahilud; to him pertained Taanach⁶ and Megiddo,⁷ and all Beth-shean, which is by Zartanah beneath Jezreel, from Beth-shean to Abel-meholah, even unto the place that is beyond Jokneam: ^ethe son of Geber, in Ramoth-gilead; to him pertained ^fthe towns of Jair the son of Manasseh, which are in Gilead; to him also pertained ^gthe region of Argob, which is in Bashan, threescore great cities with walls⁸ and brasen bars: Ahinadab the son of Iddo had Mahanaim: Ahimaaz was in Naphtali; he also took Basmath the daughter of Solomon to wife: Baanah the son of Hushai was in Asher and in Aloth: Jehoshaphat the son of Paruah, in Issachar: Shimei the son of Elah, in Benjamin: Geber the son of Uri was in the country of Gilead, in ^hthe country of Sihon king of the Amorites, and of Og king of Bashan; and he was the only officer which was in the land.

20 Judah and Israel were many, ⁱas the sand which is by the sea in multitude, ^keating and drinking, and making merry. And ^lSolomon reigned over all kingdoms⁹ from ^mthe river¹⁰ unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: ⁿthey brought presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life.

22 And Solomon's provision for one day was thirty measures of fine flour, and 23 threescore measures¹¹ of meal, ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and an hundred sheep, beside harts, and roebucks, and fallowdeer, and fatted 24 fowl. For he had dominion over all the region on this side the river, from Tiphseh¹² even to Azzah, over ^oall the kings on this side¹³ the river: and ^phe had peace on all sides round about him. And Judah and Israel ^qdwelt safely, ^revery man under his vine¹⁴ and under his fig tree, ^sfrom Dan even to Beersheba, all the days of Solomon.

26 And ^tSolomon had forty¹⁵ thousand stalls of ^uhorses for his chariots, and 27 twelve thousand horsemen. And ^xthose officers provided victual for king Solomon, and for all that came unto king Solomon's table, every man in his 28 month: they lacked nothing. Barley¹⁶ also and straw for the horses and dromedaries [or, mules; or, swift beasts^y] brought they unto the place where the officers were, every man according to his charge.

³ Many persons are known in the East as much by their fathers' names as by their own. In such cases as this it is perhaps better to adopt the patronymic—reading, as in the margin, Ben-hur, Ben-dekar, etc.

⁴ This was probably the 'Socoh' in the mountains south of Hebron, near Eshtemoa. See Josh. xv. 48.

⁵ See note on ver. 1. Solomon's daughters, however, may have been betrothed in childhood.

⁶ Now called Taanmuk, on the north-east declivity of Mount Carmel. See Judg. v. 19. This district contained the rich plain and valley of Jezreel.

⁸ The ruins of many walled cities still remain in this neighbourhood.

⁹ They were his tributaries. Thus was fulfilled the promise made to Abraham (Gen. xv. 18) respecting the extent of territory which his descendants should possess: but the sins of the king and the people soon narrowed its limits.

¹⁰ That is, the river Euphrates.

¹¹ About 240 bushels of fine, and 480 of coarser flour.

¹² Tiphseh, or Thapsacus, on the western bank of the Euphrates, and Azzah, or Gaza, were the frontier towns on the north-east and south-west of Solomon's tributary dominions, which thus extended, in their greatest length, about 400 miles. The word 'Tiphseh' (more properly Tiphseh) means passage, or crossing. It was at this place that the younger Cyrus and Alexander the Great crossed the Euphrates in their expeditions.

¹³ That is, west of the Euphrates.

¹⁴ This is a proverbial expression, intimating that the people, even in the rural districts, enjoyed great security. Vine-arbours were very common in Egypt and Palestine, and are still found in Syria.

¹⁵ Or, more probably, four thousand, as in the parallel passage, 2 Chron. ix. 25. The word rendered 'stalls' may perhaps rather mean pairs.

¹⁶ Barley, which grew abundantly in Palestine, is still used as food for cattle in the East, where oats are not cultivated.

 31 ^b the wisdom of Egypt. For he was ^c wiser than all men; ^d than Ethan the Ezrahite, ^e and Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol: and ^f his 32 fame was in all nations round about. And ^g he spake three thousand proverbs:
 33 and his ^h songs were a thousand and five. And he spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop¹ that springeth out of the wall: he 34 spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes. And there came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth, which had heard of his wisdom.

5 AND ^k Hiram² king of Tyre sent his servants unto Solomon; for he had heard that they had anointed him king in the room of his father: ^l for Hiram was ever 2 a lover of David. And ^m Solomon sent to Hiram, saying, Thou knowest³ how 3 that David my father could not build an house unto the name⁴ of the LORD his God ⁿ for the wars which were about him on every side, until the LORD ^o put 4 them under the soles of his feet. But now the LORD my God hath given me 5 ^p rest on every side, so that there is neither adversary nor evil occurrent. ^q And, behold, I purpose to build an house unto the name of the LORD my God, ^r as the LORD spake unto David my father, saying, Thy son, whom I will set upon thy 6 throne in thy room, he shall build an house unto my name. Now therefore command thou that they hew me ^s cedar trees out of Lebanon; ⁵ and my servants shall be with thy servants: and unto thee will I give hire for thy servants according to all that thou shalt appoint: for thou knowest that there is not among us any that can skill to hew timber like unto ^t the Sidonians.
 7 And it came to pass, when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, that he rejoiced greatly, and said, Blessed be the LORD⁶ this day, which hath given unto David 8 a wise son over this great people. And Hiram sent to Solomon, saying, I have considered the things which thou sentest to me for: and I will do all thy desire 9 concerning timber of cedar, and concerning timber of fir. My servants shall bring them down from Lebanon unto the sea: ^u and I will convey them by sea in floats unto the place that thou shalt appoint me, and will cause them to be discharged there, and thou shalt receive them: and thou shalt accomplish my desire, ^v in giving food⁷ for my household.
 10 So Hiram gave Solomon cedar trees and fir trees⁸ according to all his desire.
 11 ^y And Solomon gave Hiram twenty thousand measures of wheat for food to his household, and twenty measures of pure oil; ⁹ thus gave Solomon to Hiram year 12 by year. And the LORD gave Solomon wisdom, ^z as he promised him: and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon; and ^a they two made a league together.
 13 And king Solomon raised a levy out of all Israel; and the levy was thirty thousand 14 men. And he sent them to Lebanon, ten thousand a month by courses: a month they were in Lebanon, and two months at home: and ^b Adoniram was over the 15 levy. ^c And Solomon had threescore and ten thousand that bare¹⁰ burdens, and 16 fourscore thousand hewers in the mountains; beside the chief of Solomon's officers which were over the work, three thousand and three hundred, which ruled over 17 the people that wrought in the work. And the king commanded, and they brought great stones, costly stones, and ^d hewed stones, to lay the foundation of the house.¹¹

¹ The caper-plant (capparis spinosa of botanists) is the only plant known which answers to all that is said in Scripture of the hyssop.

² Probably the son of the Hiram mentioned in 2 Sam. v. 11, thirty-three years before Solomon began to reign.

³ David seems to have communicated with Hiram on this subject. See 1 Chron. xxii. 4.

⁴ This expression is founded on Deut. xii. 5.

⁵ The forests of Lebanon were probably Solomon's; but the Hebrews were inferior, as artisans and sailors, to the Sidonians, whose services were therefore required for felling and working the timber, and conveying it by sea to the seaport most accessible to Jerusalem.

⁶ Though Hiram acknowledged Jehovah as the Maker of heaven and earth (see 2 Chron. ii. 11), yet, according to the notions of polytheism, he might only mean to recognise him in connection with other divinities, not as the only true God.

⁷ This was an appropriate exchange between an agricultural and a commercial state; Tyre supplying, for the most part, the workman's skill and labour; and Israel supplying food, probably for the workmen employed in these labours, as well as for Hiram's household. See note on 2 Sam. v. 11.

⁸ More probably 'cypress,' especially the species called cupressus sempervirens, which is remarkable for its durability.

¹⁰ These were not Israelites, but persons belonging to conquered or tributary nations. See ch. ix. 20—22; 2 Chron. ii. 17, 18.

18 And Solomon's builders and Hiram's builders did hew them, and the 'stone-squarers':¹ so they prepared timber and stones to build the house.

6 And it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth² year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in the month of Zif, which is the second month, that he began to build the house of the LORD.

2 And h the house which king Solomon built for the LORD, the length thereof was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height 3 thereof thirty cubits.³ And i the porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the house; and ten 4 cubits was the breadth thereof before the house. And for the house he made h windows of narrow lights [or, windows broad within, and narrow without].

5 And against the wall of the house he built i chambers round about, against [or, upon; or, joining to] the walls of the house round about, both of the temple m and

6 of the oracle: and he made chambers round about: the nethermost chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad: for without in the wall of the house he made narrowed rests⁴ [or, narrowings; or, rebatements] round about, that the beams should not be fastened

7 in the walls of the house. And n the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer nor ax nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building.

8 The door for the middle chamber was in the right side of the house: and they o went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber, and out of the middle

9 into the third. p So he built the house, and finished it; and covered the house 10 with beams and boards of cedar. And then he built chambers against all the house, five cubits high: and they rested on the house with timber of cedar.

11, 12 And the word of the LORD came to Solomon, saying, Concerning this house which thou art in building, q if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments to walk in them; then will I

13 perform my word with thee, r which I spake⁵ unto David thy father: and s I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not 'forsake my people Israel.

14 u So Solomon built the house, and finished it.

15 And he built the walls of the house within with boards of cedar, both the floor of the house, and the walls of the ceiling: and he covered them on the 16 inside with wood, and covered the floor of the house with planks of fir. And he built twenty cubits on the sides of the house, both the floor and the walls with boards of cedar: he even built them for it within, even for the oracle, even for

17 the x most holy place. And the house, that is, the temple before it, was forty 18 cubits long. And the cedar of the house within was carved with knops [or,

19 gourds] and open flowers; all was cedar; there was no stone seen. And the oracle he prepared in the house within, to set there the ark of the covenant of the 20 LORD. And y the oracle in the forepart was twenty cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in the height thereof:⁶ and he overlaid it

21 with pure gold; and so covered the altar which was of cedar. So Solomon overlaid the house within with pure gold: and he made a partition by the chains

22 of gold before the oracle; and he overlaid it with gold. And the whole house he overlaid with gold, until he had finished all the house: also z the whole altar that was by the oracle he overlaid with gold.

23 And within the oracle a he made two cherubim of olive tree, each ten cubits 24 high.⁷ And five cubits was the one wing of the cherub, and five cubits the other

³ Reckoning the cubit at twenty-one inches, the length of the temple was one hundred and five feet, its breadth thirty-five, and its height fifty-two and a half. It was built after the model of the tabernacle, but was just twice as large; and the symbolical meaning of its various parts was the same. See notes on Exod. xxv., xxvii., xxxv.—xxxix. Its magnificence did not consist in the size of the principal building, but in the preciousness of the materials, the richness of the ornaments, the excellency of the workmanship, and the number, extent, grandeur, and substantial masonry of its surrounding courts, chambers, walls, and towers.

⁴ The walls were narrowed, or made thinner as they ascended, by sets-off of about eleven inches on each side, which received the flooring-joists, as no cutting was on any account permitted within the building.

⁵ See the promise made to David in 2 Sam. vii. 13—16.

⁶ An exact cube of thirty-five feet.

⁷ These cherubim were distinct from those which covered the mercy-seat, and which were inseparable from it, being formed of the same mass of gold: these were colossal figures about seventeen feet high, made of olive-wood plated with gold, standing on the ground, on each side of the ark, and spreading their wings quite across the most holy place.

26 the cherubim were of one measure and one size. The height of the one cherub 27 was ten cubits, and so was it of the other cherub. And he set the cherubim that the wing of the one touched the one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall; and their wings touched one another in the midst of the 29 And he carved all the walls of the house round about with carved figures of 30 cherubim and palm trees and open flowers, within and without. And the floor of the house he overlaid with gold, within and without.

31 And for the entering of the oracle he made doors of olive tree: the lintel and 32 side posts were a fifth part of the wall [or, fivesquare]. The two doors [or, leaves of the doors] also were of olive tree; and he carved upon them carvings of 33 spread gold upon the cherubim, and upon the palm trees. So also made he for the door of the temple posts of olive tree, a fourth part of the wall [or, foursquare].

34 And the two doors were of fir tree: the ^c two leaves of the one door were folding, 35 and the two leaves of the other door were folding. And he carved thereon cherubim and palm trees and open flowers: and covered them with gold fitted 36 upon the carved work. And he built the inner court with three rows of hewed stone, and a row of cedar beams.

37 ^d In the fourth year was the foundation of the house of the LORD laid, in the 38 month Zif: and in the eleventh year, in the month Bul, which is the eighth

3 cubits, upon four rows of cedar pillars, with cedar beams upon the pillars. And it

¹ Some have supposed that this means a country-seat built in the forest of Lebanon; but it was more likely a palace in Jerusalem, to which this name was given on account of the large quantity of cedar-wood employed in its construction. It is not improbable that this edifice and the 'king's house' (ver. 1) and 'the house of Pharaoh's daughter' (ver. 8) were different parts of one large pile of building, according to the usual style of Oriental palaces.

² In the parallel passage (2 Chron. ii. 13) he is called

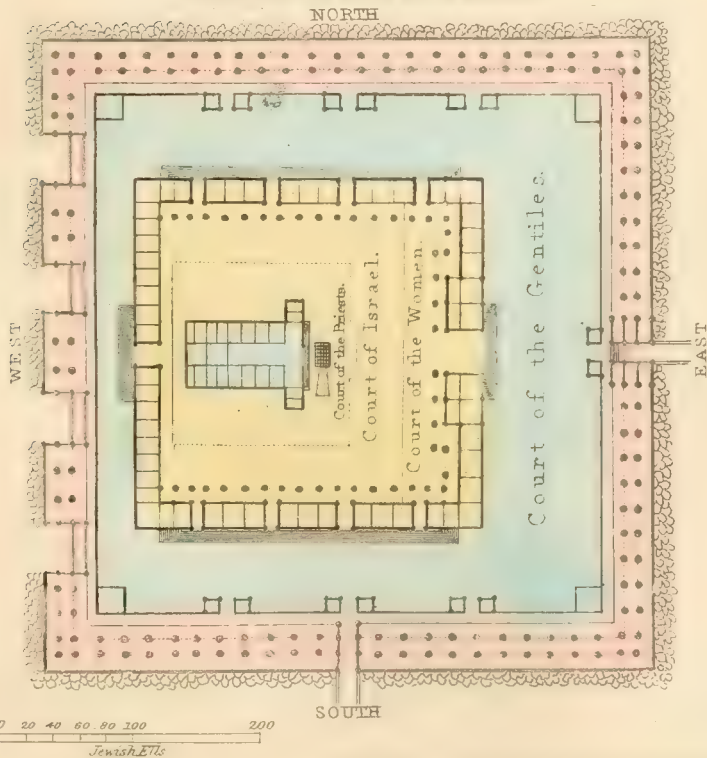

'the son of a woman of the daughters of Dan.' His mother, who had married a Tyrian, was probably descended from the colony of Danites who had seized upon Laish, which lay on the border of the tribe of Naphtali (see Judg. xviii. 2, 28, 29); and she might therefore be spoken of as belonging to either tribe.

³ Here, and in Jer. lii. 21, the height of the pillars alone is given. In 2 Chron. iii. 15 the pedestals on which they stood is included.

PLAN OF HEROD'S TEMPLE.

17 and the height of the other chapter was five cubits: and nets of checker work, and wreaths of chain work, for the chapters which were upon the top of the 18 pillars; seven for the one chapter, and seven for the other chapter. And he made the pillars, and two rows round about upon the one network, to cover the chapters that were upon the top, with pomegranates: and so did he for the other
 19 chapter. And the chapters that were upon the top of the pillars were of lily
 20 work in the porch, four cubits. And the chapters upon the two pillars had pomegranates also above, over against the belly¹ which was by the network: and the pomegranates were ^v two hundred in rows round about upon the other chapter.
 21 ^z And he set up the pillars in ^y the porch of the temple: and he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof Jachin [i. e. He shall establish]: and he set 22 up the left pillar, and called the name thereof Boaz [i. e. In it is strength]. And upon the top of the pillars was lily work: so was the work of the pillars finished.
 23 And he made ^a a molten sea, ten cubits from the one brim to the other: it was round all about, and his height was five cubits: and a line of thirty cubits did
 24 compass it round about. And under the brim of it round about there were knobs² compassing it, ten in a cubit, ^a compassing the sea round about: the 25 knobs were cast in two rows, when it was cast. It stood upon ^b twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was 26 set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward. And it was an hand breadth thick, and the brim thereof was wrought like the brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies: it contained ^c two thousand baths.³
 27 And he made ten bases of brass; four cubits was the length of one base,
 28 and four cubits the breadth thereof, and three cubits the height of it. And the work of the bases was on this manner: they had borders, and the borders
 29 were between the ledges: and on the borders that were between the ledges were lions, oxen, and cherubim: and upon the ledges there was a base above:
 30 and beneath the lions and oxen were certain additions made of thin work. And every base had four brasen wheels, and plates of brass: and the four corners thereof had undersetters: under the laver were undersetters molten, at the side
 31 of every addition. And the mouth of it within the chapter and above was a cubit: but the mouth thereof was round after the work of the base, a cubit and an half: and also upon the mouth of it were gravings with their borders, four-square, not round. And under the borders were four wheels; and the axletrees of the wheels were joined to the base; and the height of a wheel was a cubit 32 and half a cubit. And the work of the wheels was like the work of a chariot wheel: their axletrees, and their naves, and their felloes, and their spokes, were 33 all molten. And there were four undersetters to the four corners of one base:
 34 and the undersetters were of the very base itself. And in the top of the base was there a round compass of half a cubit high: and on the top of the base the 35 ledges thereof and the borders thereof were of the same. For on the plates of the ledges thereof, and on the borders thereof, he graved cherubim, lions, and palm trees, according to the proportion of every one, and additions round about.
 36 After this manner he made the ten bases: all of them had one casting, one 37 measure, and one size. Then ^d made he ten lavers of brass: one laver contained forty baths: and every laver was four cubits; and upon every one of the ten 38 bases one laver. And he put five bases on the right side of the house, and five on the left side of the house: and he set the sea on the right side of the house
 39 eastward over against the south. ^e And ^f Hiram made the lavers, and the shovels, and the basins.
 40 So Hiram made an end of doing all the work that he made king Solomon for the house of the LORD: the two pillars, and the two bowls⁴ of the chapters that were on the top of the two pillars; and the two ^g networks, to cover the two bowls of the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars; and four 41 hundred pomegranates for the two networks, even two rows of pomegranates for one network, to cover the two bowls of the chapters that were upon the

¹ Probably the swell of the leaf of the lily.

² The Hebrew word here is 'bekaim,' which means knops, i. e. in the form of colocynths. In 2 Chron. iv. 3 it is 'bekarim,' which means oxen.

to the capacity of the vessel, and the smaller to the quantity that it usually contained. The brazen sea, with the smaller lavers, was for the use of the priests, in washing themselves, in conducting the sacrifices, and in keeping the courts of the temple clean. The Gibeonites, or Nethinim, who drew water for the house of God, had the duty of filling it. It had the same typical significance as the laver of the tabernacle. See note on Exod. xxx. 17.

⁴ They are called 'pommels' in 2 Chron. iv. 12. They were, perhaps, globes placed over the chapters.

43 pillars; and the ten bases, and ten lavers on the bases; and one sea, and twelve 45 oxen under the sea; ^hand the pots, and the shovels, and the basins: and all these vessels, which Hiram made to king Solomon for the house of the LORD, 46 were of bright brass. ⁱIn the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the 47 clay ground between ^kSuccoth and ^lZarthan. And Solomon left all the vessels unweighed, because they were exceeding many: neither was the weight of the brass found out.

48 And Solomon made all the vessels that pertained unto the house of the LORD:
 49 ^mthe altar of gold, and ⁿthe table of gold, whereupon ^othe shewbread was, and the candlesticks of pure gold, five on the right side, and five on the left, before 50 the oracle, with the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs of gold, and the bowls, and the snuffers,¹ and the basins, and the spoons, and the censers of pure gold;
 and the hinges of gold, both for the doors of the inner house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house, to wit, of the temple.

51 So was ended all the work that king Solomon made for the house of the LORD.
 And Solomon brought in the things ^pwhich David his father had dedicated; even the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, did he put among the treasures of the house of the LORD.

The dedication of the temple; Solomon's prayer, and sacrifice.

8 THEN ² Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto king Solomon in Jerusalem, ^rthat they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD ^sout of the city of David, which is Zion.

2 And all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto king Solomon at the 3 ^tfeast in the month Ethanim, which is the seventh month.³ And all the elders of 4 Israel came, ^uand the priests took up the ark. And they brought up the ark of the LORD, ^vand the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, even those did the priests and the Levites bring up.⁴

5 And king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel, that were assembled unto him, were with him before the ark, ^xsacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not 6 be told nor numbered for multitude. And the priests ^ybrought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto ^zhis place, into the oracle⁵ of the house, to the most 7 holy place, even ^aunder the wings of the cherubim. For the cherubim spread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubim covered the 8 ark and the staves thereof above. And they ^bdrew out the staves, that the ends of the staves were seen out in the holy place [or, ark^c] before the oracle, 9 and they were not seen without:⁶ and there they are unto this day.⁷ ^dThere was nothing⁸ in the ark ^esave the two tables of stone, which Moses ^fput there at Horeb, ^gwhen [or, where] the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.

10 And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that 11 the cloud⁹ ^hfilled the house of the LORD, so that the priests could not stand to minister¹⁰ because of the cloud: for ⁱthe glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD.

12 ^kThen spake Solomon, The LORD said that he would dwell ^lin the thick 13 darkness. ^mI have surely built thee an house to dwell in, ⁿa settled place for

² The services at the dedication of the temple consisted of three parts: the solemn transference of the ark of the covenant from the city of David to the temple (vers. 1—21), Solomon's dedication prayer (vers. 22—61), and the sacrifice of peace-offerings (vers. 62—66).

⁴ Probably the Levites of the family of Kohath carried the ark into the courts of the temple; and then the priests conveyed it into the holy place, which they only were allowed to enter. (See Numb. ch. iv., and notes.) On two occasions before this, the priests had carried the ark by especial Divine command; namely, when the people crossed the Jordan, and when they encompassed Jericho.

⁵ That is, the most holy place; called the oracle, because here Jehovah answered the inquiries of the people by the ministry of the high priest.

⁶ The ends of the staves might be seen within the holy of holies, but not in the outer sanctuary.

⁷ This must refer to the time when the narrative from which this book was extracted was originally written, previously to the destruction of the temple by the Chaldeans.

⁸ In Heb. ix. 4 several things are spoken of as being in the ark, which are not mentioned here; but that passage seems to refer to the tabernacle as it existed in the time of Moses.

⁹ This was the symbol of Jehovah's presence, testifying that he had accepted the temple as his own house. The temple, with which so many hallowed associations were connected in the mind of a Jew, is used in the New Testament as an interesting representation of Christ (John ii. 19—21), of the individual believer (1 Cor. iii. 16; vi. 19), and of the universal church (Eph. ii. 19—22).

¹⁰ This was an evidence of the infirmity of the priests who officiated under the law. The parallel passage in 2 Chron. v. gives an account of a large attendance of Levites also as singers, who formed a grand choir befitting the importance and solemnity of the occasion.

¹¹ This alludes to the fixed and permanent structure of 14 And the king turned his face about, and ^o blessed all the congregation of 15 Israel: (and all the congregation of Israel ^p stood;) and he said, ^q Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which ^r spake with his mouth unto David my father, and 16 ^s hath with his hand fulfilled it, saying, 'Since the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel to build an house, that ^u my name might be therein; but I chose ^x David to be over my 17 people Israel. And ^y it was in the heart of David my father to build an house 18 for the name of the LORD God of Israel. ^z And the LORD said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst 19 well that it was in thine heart. Nevertheless ^a thou shalt not build the house; but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto 20 my name. And the LORD ^b hath performed his word that he spake, and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, ^c as the LORD promised, and have built an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

 21 And ^d I have set there a place for the ark, wherein ^e is the covenant of the LORD, or on earth beneath, ⁱ who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that 24 ^k walk before thee with all their heart: who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: ^l thou spakest also with thy mouth, and 25 hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day. Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, ^m There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel; so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou 26 hast walked before me. ⁿ And now, O God of Israel, let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

 27 But ^o will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven and ^p heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; ² how much less this house that I have builded?
 28 Yet ^q have thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O
 LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer, which thy servant 29 prayeth before thee to-day: that ^r thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, ^s My name shall be there: that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make 30 ^t toward [or, in] this place. ^u And hearken thou to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, when they shall pray toward [or, in] this place:
 and hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place: and when thou hearest, forgive.
 31 If any man trespass against his neighbour, and ^x an oath be laid upon him to 32 cause him to swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house: then hear thou in heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, ^y condemning the wicked, to bring his way upon his head; and ^z justifying the righteous, to give him according to his righteousness.
 33 ^a When ³ thy people Israel be smitten down before the enemy, ^b because they have sinned against thee, and ^c shall turn again to thee, and confess thy name, 34 and ^d pray, and make supplication unto thee in [or, toward] this house: then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land ^e which thou gavest unto their fathers.
 35 ^f When heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; ^g if they pray toward this place, and ^h confess thy name, and turn the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, that thou ⁱ teach them ^k the good way wherein they should walk, and ^l give rain upon thy land, which thou hast given to thy people for an inheritance.

the temple, compared with the materials of the tabernacle and its frequent change of place. See 2 Sam. vii. 6: 'I have not dwelt—but have walked,' etc.

¹ It appears from ver. 54 and 2 Chron. vi. 13, that Solomon kneeled down when he began to pray.

² This sublime language shows that the enlightened Israelite did not regard Jehovah merely as a local or national god. Yet Solomon united with his sense of the infinite majesty and omnipresence of God a firm belief in the manifestation of his power and grace in the temple: at the same time rejecting the notion that it was confined to the temple—a notion which, though adopted by the carnally-minded Jews, was always opposed by the prophets. See Isa. lxvi. 1, 2.

³ All the following cases are taken almost verbally from Lev. xxvi., and Deut. xxviii.

¹ In the parallel passage (2 Chron. vi. 29) the Hebrew word here rendered 'plague' is translated 'sore : ' it is called 'his own sore ; ' with the addition, 'and his own grief.' The phrase means Divine chastisements, in the form of bodily sufferings, or misfortunes of various kinds.

² The temple was to be 'a house of prayer for all people ; ' which plainly shows that the theocracy of the old covenant did not confine the privileges of religion to one particular nation, to the entire exclusion of all others. But the gospel goes far beyond this, in leading us to look not towards an earthly sanctuary, but to heaven itself, into which Christ has entered, 'to appear in the presence of God for us.' See Heb. viii. 2 ; ix. 24.

³ This form of confession of sin was afterwards adopted by the Jews. See Ps. cvi. 6 ; Dan. ix. 5.

⁴ See Dan. vi. 10. The direction of the face in prayer towards the temple was intended to denote faith in the presence of God there.

⁵ See note on Deut. iv. 20.

⁶ Probably, not all at one time, but during the festival.

- 64 king and all the children of Israel ^f dedicated the house of the LORD. ^g The same day did the king hallow the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings: because ^h the brasen altar that was before the LORD was too little to receive the burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings.
- 65 And at that time Solomon held ⁱ a feast, and all Israel with him, a great congregation, from ^k the entering in of Hamath unto ^l the river of Egypt, ¹ before the LORD our God, ^m seven days and seven days, even fourteen days. ⁿ On the eighth day he sent the people away: and they blessed [or, thanked] the king, and went unto their tents joyful and glad of heart for all the goodness that the LORD had done for David his servant, and for Israel his people.

God's answer to Solomon's prayer.

- 9 AND ^o it came to pass, when Solomon had finished the building of the house of the LORD, ^p and the king's house, and ^q all Solomon's desire which he was pleased to do, that the LORD appeared ² to Solomon the second time, ^r as he had appeared unto him at Gibeon.
- 3 And the LORD said unto him, ^s I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication, that thou hast made before me: I have ^t hallowed this house, which thou hast built, ^u to put my name there for ever; ^x and mine eyes and ^y mine heart shall be there perpetually. And if thou wilt ^z walk before me, ^a as David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my statutes and my judgments: then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, ^b as I promised to David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel. ^c But if ye shall at all turn from following me, ye or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them: ^d then will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them; and ^e this house, which I have hallowed ^f for my name, will I cast out of my sight; ^g and Israel shall be a proverb and a byword among all people: and ^h at this house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss; and they shall say, ⁱ Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and to this house? and they shall answer, Because they forsook the LORD their God, who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them: therefore hath the LORD brought upon them all this evil.

Solomon's transactions with Hiram; his tributes, and navy.

- 10 ^k AND it came to pass at the end of twenty years, ^l when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the king's house, (^m now Hiram the king of Tyre had furnished Solomon with cedar trees and fir trees, and with gold according to all his desire,) that then king Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee. And Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they pleased him not. And he said, What cities are these which thou hast given me, my brother? ⁿ And he called them the land of Cabul³ [i. e. displeasing] unto this day. And ⁴ Hiram sent to the king sixscore talents of gold.
- 15 And this ^{is} the reason of ^o the levy which king Solomon raised; for to build the house of the LORD, and his own house, and ^p Millo,⁵ and the wall of Jerusalem, and ^q Hazor, and ^r Megiddo, and ^s Gezer. For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, ^t and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it ^{for} a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife.
- 17 And Solomon built Gezer, and ^u Beth-horon the nether,⁶ and ^v Baalath,⁷ and ¹ That is, from one extremity of the land to the other.

³ Josephus says (Antiq. viii. 5) that these were towns of Galilee, in the neighbourhood of Tyre; and that 'Cabul,' in the Phœnician language, signifies unpleasing. It is probable that they were not within the promised land, and had not been previously occupied by Israelites (see 2 Chron. viii. 2); but were a portion of David's recent conquests. As the Phœnicians cared mostly for commerce, they would doubtless have preferred cities on the sea-coast, or on some great line of traffic.

⁴ Or, 'because Hiram had sent to the king six score talents of gold.'

⁵ See note on Judg. ix. 6.

⁷ Baalath is supposed by some to be the same as Baalgad or Baalbek, in the extreme north of Palestine. See Josh. xi. 17; xiii. 5. Baalbek, of which the magnificent ruins still remain, was a great commercial entrepôt, and a principal station for the caravans travelling from Phœnicia to the north and east. It is, however, more probable that Baalath was a town in the south of Canaan, on the borders of Judah and Dan, and belonging to the latter. See Josh. xix. 44.

¹ Tadmor, or Tamar (which means a palm-tree), is generally supposed to have been the original site of the celebrated city of Palmyra, which was situated on a well-watered and fruitful oasis in the Great Desert of Syria, nearly midway between Damascus and Thapsacus, on the Euphrates; and was a place of great commercial importance under the Roman empire. If this was the Tadmor of Solomon, it was probably built (or perhaps rather enlarged and fortified) by him, as a resting-place for the caravans between Palestine and Central Asia. But some think that Palmyra was not so ancient, and that the place here mentioned was either Baal-Tamar (Judg. xx. 33), or the 'city of palm-trees,' or 'Tamarim' (Deut. xxxiv. 3).

² If Tadmor were the same as Palmyra, this may mean 'within Solomon's territory,' or 'in the interior of the country;' Gezer, Beth-horon, and Baalath being on the seaward side of Jerusalem. Otherwise it must refer to Palestine Proper, as distinguished from Solomon's wider dominions. See Ezek. xlvii. 19; xlviii. 28.

³ For the reason of this, see 2 Chron. viii. 11.

⁷ The situation of Ophir can only be conjectured. The most probable opinions fix it either in the south of Arabia, or on the east of Africa, or in some part of India. The last supposition appears on the whole to be preferable, being supported by Josephus, and confirmed by the circumstance that India was the only country where all the articles brought from Ophir were procurable.

⁹ The honour of having been governed by this illustrious princess is claimed both by Arabia Felix and by Abyssinia. She appears in the annals of both countries; being called by the Arabians 'Bulki,' and by the Abyssinians 'Magna.' Perhaps the two accounts may be reconciled by remembering that Abyssinia was an Arabian colony, and that its language is a dialect of the ancient Arabic. The more general opinion, however, is that 'Sheba' was Saba or Sabaea, in Arabia Felix; a country whose inhabitants were well known to the Hebrews and the Greeks for their extensive traffic in the spices, gold, and precious stones which there abounded. The productions here described (ver. 2) are identical with those of the kingdom of Sabaea, as given by Strabo, the elder Pliny, and other authorities.

¹⁰ It appears from Josephus and other ancient writers, as well as from Scripture, that the proposing and solving of enigmas was a favourite occupation in the East; and that great kings, such as Solomon and Hiram, engaged in these contests of skill.

¹¹ The Hebrew word here used is generally translated 'burnt offering;' and the Septuagint and some other versions render the clause, 'and the burnt offerings which he offered (or caused to ascend) in the house of the Lord.' But the rendering in the text is supported by Ezek. xl. 26, and by the parallel passage in 2 Chron. ix. 4, where a cognate word is used which never signifies 'a burnt offer-

6 spirit in her. And she said to the king, It was a true report that I heard in 7 mine own land of thy acts [or, sayings] and of thy wisdom. Howbeit I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the half was not told me: thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard.
8 ^v Happy are thy men, happy are these thy servants, which stand continually 9 before thee, and that hear thy wisdom. ^z Blessed be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee, to set thee on the throne of Israel. ^a Because the LORD loved 10 Israel for ever, therefore made he thee king, ^b to do judgment and justice. And she ^c gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store, and precious stones: there came no more such abundance of spices as these which the queen of Sheba gave to king Solomon.
11 ^d And the navy also of Hiram, that brought gold from Ophir, brought in from 12 Ophir great plenty of ^e almug trees,¹ and precious stones. ^f And the king made of the almug trees pillars for the house of the LORD, and for the king's house, harps also and psalteries for singers: there came no such ^g almug trees, nor were 13 seen unto this day. And king Solomon gave unto the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside that which Solomon gave her of his royal bounty. So she turned and went to her own country, she and her servants.

Solomon's wealth, magnificence, commerce, and fame.

14 NOW the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred 15 threescore and six talents of gold, beside that he had of the merchantmen, and of the traffic of the spice merchants, and ^h of all the kings of Arabia, and of the 16 governors of the country. And king Solomon made two hundred targets of 17 beaten gold: six hundred shekels of gold went to one target. And *he made*ⁱ three hundred shields of beaten gold; three pounds of gold went to one shield: and the king put them in the ^k house of the forest of Lebanon.
18 ^l Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with the best 19 gold. The throne had six steps, and the top of the throne was round behind: and there were stays on either side on the place of the seat, and two lions stood beside 20 the stays. And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon 21 the six steps: there was not the like made in any kingdom. ^m And all king Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold; none were of silver: it was nothing 22 accounted of in the days of Solomon. For the king had at sea a navy of ⁿ *Tharshish*² with the navy of Hiram: once in three years³ came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks.
23 So ^o king Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom.
24 And all the earth⁴ sought to Solomon, to hear his wisdom, which God had put 25 in his heart. And they brought every man ^p his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and garments, and armour, and spices, horses, ^q and mules, a rate year by year.
26 ^r And Solomon ^s gathered together chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, whom he 27 bestowed in the cities for chariots, and with the king at Jerusalem. ^t And the king made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones, and cedars made he to be as the 28 sycamore trees that are in the vale, for abundance. ^u And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and ^v linen yarn:⁵ the king's merchants received the ing.' Some suppose this 'ascent' to have been a richly adorned staircase, such as is found in the ancient Persian palaces; others consider it to have been a magnificent viaduct across the valley which separated Mount Zion from Mount Moriah, on which the temple stood.

1 Or, algum trees (2 Chron. ix. 10, 11). As this wood was employed in the construction of musical instruments, it was probably a species of pine or of sandal wood.

2 The situation of Tharshish has been much debated; but a comparison of the various passages in which it is mentioned fixes it near the western outlet of the Mediterranean Sea, and points to the celebrated Phœnician colony of Tartessus on the Atlantic coast of Spain, not far from Gades, the modern Cadiz. In process of time, however, 'ships of Tharshish' came to signify large vessels built for distant voyages. Unless the phrase be used with this wider signification, the voyage here spoken of must be different from that mentioned in ch. ix. 28, x. 11; this being by the Mediterranean, and the other by the Red Sea.

3 This does not necessarily imply that the voyage occuried three years: it may equally well mean that it was made once in three years. But even if the length of the voyage be intended, it might, according to the Hebrew mode of computation, occupy only part of three successive years, making not more than a year and a half.

4 'All the earth' (or land) evidently refers to the dominions of Solomon; for those who came were tributaries.

5 The Hebrew word here translated 'linen yarn' does not bear this meaning elsewhere. The Septuagint gives it as a proper name, thus: 'And Solomon had horses brought from Egypt, and from Koa; the king's merchants took them from Koa at a fixed price.'

6 Egypt was the great mart for horses before their introduction into Arabia; and as Solomon's dominions extended to the confines of Egypt, he seems to have enjoyed a monopoly of the export of horses thence to the countries north and east of Palestine. In 'multiplying horses,' Solomon violated an express injunction of the law (Deut. xvii. 16), which was designed to preserve the people from substituting a confidence in one of the most hundred shekels of silver,¹ and an horse for an hundred and fifty: ² and so for all the kings of the Hittites,² and for the kings of Syria, did they bring them out by their means.

- 11 BUT ^aking Solomon loved ^bmany strange women, together with [or, beside] the daughter of Pharaoh, women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidonians, ² and Hittites; of the nations concerning which the LORD said unto the children of Israel, ^cYe shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you: for ^dsurely they will turn away your heart after their gods: Solomon clave unto these in love. And he had seven hundred³ wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines: and ^ehis wives turned away his heart. For it came to pass, when Solomon was old, ^fthat his wives turned away his heart after other gods; and his ^gheart was not perfect with the LORD his God, ^has was the heart of David his father.⁴ For Solomon went after ⁱAshtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after ^kMilcom the abomination of the Ammonites. And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father. ^lThen did Solomon build an high place for ^mChemosh, the abomination of Moab, in ⁿthe hill⁵ that is before Jerusalem, and for Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon. And likewise did he for ^oall his strange wives, which burnt incense and sacrificed unto their gods.
- 9 And the LORD was angry with Solomon, because ^phis heart was turned from the LORD God of Israel, ^qwhich had appeared unto him twice, and ^rhad commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the LORD commanded. Wherefore the LORD said⁶ unto Solomon, Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou hast not kept my covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, ^sI will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant. Notwithstanding ^tin thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but ^uI will rend it out of the hand of thy son. ^vHowbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom; but will give ^wone tribe to thy son for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake ^zwhich I have chosen.
- 14 And the LORD ^astirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: ^bhe was of the king's seed in Edom. ^cFor it came to pass, when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, ^dafter he had smitten every male in Edom; (for six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom:) that Hadad⁷ fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a little child. And they arose out of Midian, and came to Paran: and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt; which gave him an house, and appointed him victuals, and gave him land. And Hadad found great favour in the sight of Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the queen. And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's house: and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh.
- 21 ^dAnd when Hadad heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab the captain of the host was dead, Hadad said to Pharaoh, Let me depart, 22 that I may go to mine own country. Then Pharaoh said unto him, But what formidable resources of Oriental warfare for a simple reliance on Divine protection. See Isa. xxxi. 1. It is also worthy of notice, that horses and chariots, however serviceable in a plain country, were ill suited for warfare in a mountainous region, such as Palestine, where infantry was much more available. Consequently this law, which discouraged the use of horses, in fact compelled the Israelites to employ the kind of force best suited to the defence of their country.

² This is probably a general name for the Canaanitish nations, some of whom, particularly of the Hittite tribes, still remained in the neighbourhood, in a state of subjection to the Israelites: but they appear to have subsequently become independent: see 2 Kings vii. 6.

³ This number was sometimes much exceeded by Eastern sovereigns, who regard a numerous harem as a part of royal magnificence.

⁶ Most likely by the prophet Ahijah. See vers. 29, 30.

⁷ Hadad seems to have been the son of the king of Edom, who was probably slain in battle with the Israelites.

hast thou lacked with me, that, behold, thou seekest to go to thine own country? And he answered, Nothing: howbeit let me go in any wise.

23 And God ^c stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Eliadah, which 24 fled from his lord ^f Hadadezer king of Zobah: and he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, ^g when David slew them of Zobah: and they 25 went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus. And he was an adversary to Israel all the days ¹ of Solomon, beside the mischief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.²

26 And ^h Jeroboam the son of Nebat, an Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman, even he ⁱ lifted ³ up his hand
27 against the king. And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king: ^k Solomon built Millo, and repaired the breaches of the city of David his 28 father; and the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour; and Solomon seeing the young man that he was industrious, he made him ruler over all the charge of ^l the house of Joseph.⁴

29 And it came to pass at that time when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet ^m Ahijah the Shilonite⁵ found him in the way; and he had clad 30 himself with a new garment; ⁿ and they two were alone in the field: and Ahijah
31 caught the new garment that was on him, and ^o rent it in twelve pieces: and he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for ^p thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will

33 of Israel:) ^r because that they have forsaken me, and have worshipped Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did
34 David his father. Howbeit ^s I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand: but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David my servant's sake, 35 whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes: but ^t I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten 36 tribes. And unto his son will I give one tribe, that ^u David my servant may have a light alway before me in Jerusalem, ^v the city which I have chosen me to 37 put my name there. And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign according to all that thy soul desireth, and shalt be king over Israel. And it shall be, ^w if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do
38 that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as David my servant did, that ^x I will be with thee, and ^y build thee a sure house, as I
39 built for David, and will give Israel unto thee. And I will for this afflict the seed of David, but ^z not for ever.⁸

40 Solomon ^a sought therefore to kill Jeroboam. And Jeroboam arose, and fled into Egypt, unto Shishak⁹ king of Egypt, and was in Egypt until the death of Solomon.

¹ Probably not from his accession, but from the time that his wives publicly practised their idolatrous rites.

² This clause appears to refer to Hadad: the kings of Syria after this bore the name of Ben-hadad, or 'the son of Hadad.' But the Greek version has 'over Edom' (Idumea), instead of 'over Aram' (Syria).

⁴ Jeroboam was overseer either over the levies of men for the royal works, or over the collection of the tribute (or perhaps both) of the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh, or rather, probably, of the ten tribes, for so the term is used in other passages (see 2 Sam. xix. 20). The employment of so large a body of workmen, consisting of Ephraimites and their colleagues, headed by an Ephraimite, in magnificent works which had their centre in Judah, and tended peculiarly to the glory and advancement of that tribe, was likely to revive the old jealousy: see ver. 27.

⁵ That is, a native or inhabitant of Shiloh. See ch. xiv. 2; see also 2 Chron. ix. 29.

⁶ The Septuagint has, 'Ahijah had clad himself.' It was probably the outer garment now called kyke.

⁸ For in Christ the kingdom of David is established in far greater glory.

¹⁰ This was probably a book written by an official chronicler or historiographer, out of which the sacred writer extracted what God saw fit to transmit to future ages.

Rehoboam's accession; the revolt of the ten tribes.

4 all the congregation of Israel came, and spake unto Rehoboam, saying, Thy father made our ^l yoke grievous: ³ now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee. And he said unto them, Depart yet for three days, then come again to me. And the people departed.

^l ch. 4. 7, 22, 23; 1 Sam. 8. 11—18.

6 And king Rehoboam consulted with the old men, that stood before ⁴ Solomon his father while he yet lived, and said, How do ye advise that I may answer this people? And they spake unto him, saying, ^m If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever.

^m 2 Chr. 10. 6, 7; Pro. 15. 1.

8 But he forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, ⁵ and which stood before him: and he said unto them, What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter? And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions. ⁶

12 So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying, Come to me again the third day. And the king answered the people roughly, and forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him; and spake to them after ⁿ the counsel of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

So Israel departed unto their tents. But ^r as for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, ⁸ Rehoboam reigned over them.

^v ch. 11. 13, 32.

¹ Shechem, in the tribe of Ephraim, was a meeting-place of the ten tribes as distinguished from the two. It was afterwards fixed upon by Jeroboam as the capital of his kingdom.

² The Septuagint has the same reading here as in the parallel passage in 2 Chron. x. 2; namely, 'Jeroboam returned out of Egypt.'

³ This complaint was probably exaggerated; for, in carrying on his great public works, Solomon had employed the Canaanites as bondsmen, and made his own people overseers and rulers, etc.: see ch. ix. 22.

⁴ That is, as his chief officers and counsellors.

⁵ It was the custom in some Eastern countries for the heir-apparent to be brought up with young men of rank; who might, on his accession, fill the chief civil and military offices. These young men were probably about the same age as Rehoboam, who was above forty.

⁶ The cruel instrument of punishment which was called a 'scorpion,' was a long and heavy scourge armed with numerous knots and with spikes of metal.

¹⁰ Including part of the tribes of Benjamin and Simeon, which had been closely connected with Judah, and probably a few towns in Dan. The close alliance between these tribes had been promoted by their mutual contiguity, and by the proximity of them all to the capital and the temple; whilst Judah and Benjamin had a further bond of sympathy as being the two royal tribes. The province

Jeroboam's idolatry, and its reproof by a prophet; whose subsequent disobedience causes his death.

25 THEN Jeroboam ^b built Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein; and 26 went out from thence, and built ^c Penuel. And Jeroboam said in his heart,¹ 27 ^d Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David: if this people ^e go up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they 28 shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah. Whereupon the king took counsel, and ^f made two calves ² of gold, and said unto them, It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: ^g behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee 29 up out of the land of Egypt.³ And he set the one in ^h Beth-el, and the other put of Edom (see 2 Sam. viii. 14) was also annexed to the kingdom of Judah, and remained so for about a century (see 2 Kings viii. 20, 22; 2 Chron. xxi. 8, 10). Jeroboam, on the other hand, acquired nearly four-fifths of the territory of Canaan, with the sovereignty of Moab (see 2 Sam. viii. 2; 2 Kings i. 1; iii. 4). The Syrians and Ammonites, who had been brought under subjection by David, had probably already regained their independence in the latter part of Solomon's reign.

1 Though Jeroboam knew that he owed his elevation to God, and that, if he were faithful and obedient, his new kingdom was secured to him and to his family by the Divine promise, yet he chose to rely rather upon measures of worldly policy than upon the protection of Jehovah; disowning his authority, and perverting his worship. But he found, as all will find who follow his example, that the very plans by which he hoped to secure his safety caused his ruin. See ch. xiv. 7—16.

2 To effect his political object, Jeroboam not only violated the second commandment, but proceeded to set aside the Divine institutions with respect to the place, the ministers, the times, and the manner of worship. Although that which he introduced was rather a pretended worship of Jehovah, under these symbols, than that of false gods which was afterwards established by the dynasty of Omri (from which, indeed, it is always distinguished both in the history and in the prophets); yet its deep criminality is marked by the disgraceful appellation, the man 'who made Israel to sin' (2 Kings x. 29, etc.) He hereby not only repudiated the theocracy, and cut off his kingdom from God's special protection and favour; but brought both himself and his subjects under the curse of the Divine law. The ten tribes, from this time to the subversion of the kingdom, were a nation of idolaters; although a few individuals, amidst great discouragement, adhered to the service of Jehovah, and his prophets were feared and respected even by the worst of their kings.

3 These words are a quotation from Exod. xxxii. 4; and, as such, contain a bold defiance of Him who spoke by Moses. Like the Israelites in the wilderness, Jeroboam doubtless was led to the adoption of this form of worship by his residence in Egypt. Both he and his subjects well knew that it was strictly forbidden by the law, and had formerly brought down upon the people the severest Divine displeasure. But history and experience show how little men think of the word of God, or regard its plainest injunctions, when opposed to their inclinations.

4 Bethel and Dan were at the southern and northern extremities of the kingdom. Bethel was, in consequence of this desecration, called by the prophets 'Beth-aven,' i. e. house of idols, or vanity; instead of 'Beth-el,' house of God (Amos i. 5; Hos. iv. 15; v. 8; x. 5, 8). At Dan, idolatry had been established at a former period (Judg. xviii.)

5 Bethel is omitted here, perhaps, because it was taken in a few years by the king of Judah, and the worship of the calf there was interrupted for a time.

6 This illustrates the statement in 2 Chron. xi. 13, 14.

7 Not satisfied with other innovations, he acted as high priest, constituting himself the spiritual as well as temporal head of his kingdom.

8 This was probably the inauguration festival.

9 This prediction was delivered three hundred and sixty years before the event (see 2 Kings xxiii. 15); yet none of the kings of Judah gave or assumed this name till the appointed time. The prophecy implied that the family of David would continue on the throne of Judah, and would support the true religion, at some future time when their power should prevail over that of the ten tribes.

and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be burnt upon thee.¹ And he gave ^{*}a sign the same day, saying, This is the sign which² the LORD hath spoken; Behold, the altar shall be rent, and the ashes³ that are upon it shall be poured out.

4 And it came to pass, when king Jeroboam heard the saying of the man of God, which had cried against the altar in Beth-el, that he put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him. And [†]his hand, which he put forth against him, dried up, so that he could not pull it in again to him. The altar also was rent, and the ashes poured out from the altar, [‡]according to the sign which the man of God had given by the word of the LORD. And the king answered and said unto the man of God, [§]Intreat now the face of the LORD⁴ thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored me again. ^{||}And the man of God besought the LORD, and the king's hand was restored him again, and became as it was before.

7 And the king said unto the man of God, Come home with me, and refresh thyself, and [¶]I will give thee a reward. And the man of God said unto the king, [‡]If thou wilt give me half thine house, I will not go in with thee, neither will I eat bread nor drink water⁵ in this place: for so was it charged me by the word of the LORD, saying, [¶]Eat no bread, nor drink water, nor turn again by the same way that thou camest. So he went another way, and returned not by the way that he came to Beth-el.

11 Now there dwelt an old prophet⁶ in Beth-el; and his sons came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father. And their father said unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went, which came from Judah. And he said unto his sons, Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass: and he rode thereon, and went after the man of God, and found him sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am. Then he said unto him, Come home with me, and eat bread. And he said, [¶]I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee: neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place: for it was said to me [§]by the word of the LORD, Thou shalt eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest. He said unto him, I am a prophet also as thou art; and an angel spake unto me by the word of the LORD, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto him. So he went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.⁷

20 And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that the word of the LORD came unto the prophet that brought him back: and he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee, but camest back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the ^{||}place of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; thy carcase shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

23 And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back.

24 And when he was gone, [¶]a lion met him by the way, and slew him:⁸ and his carcase was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcase. And, behold, men passed by, and saw the carcase cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcase: and they came and told it in the city where the

1 The burning of men's bones upon an altar was a mark of the greatest contempt and dishonour.

2 This word should be rendered as a conjunction, as it is in other places: 'This is a sign that the Lord has spoken, Behold, the altar shall be rent,' etc. To confirm the prediction, this sign was immediately accomplished by an invisible power.

3 That is, the ashes of the sacrifices.

4 Jeroboam looks for help now, not to the objects of his worship, but to Him whose law and service he had set at nought; but, like Pharaoh in a similar case (Exod. x. 17), he asks only for the removal of the judgment.

5 To do this would have been a symbol of peace and friendship. The command to return by a different route was an additional precaution against forming any acquaintance by the way. The near vicinity and relation of this apostate people exposed the inhabitants of Judah to peculiar danger of infection from their sin.

6 The old prophet of Bethel, though a worshipper of Jehovah and endowed with prophetic inspiration, seems, like Balaam, not to have been a holy man (see ver. 18, and note on Num. xxii. 8). It is not easy to discover the motives of his strange conduct. He may have wished to tempt the prophet from Judah to disobedience, in order to destroy the moral effect of his mission; or he may have been actuated by a friendly feeling, while he resorted to unlawful means to attain his end.

7 Not duly considering that, while the prohibition which he had received upon this subject came immediately from God, he had only this man's word in opposition to it. His conduct clearly manifested a too easy credulity in compliance with his own inclination, such as is too often to be seen now among professors of religion.

8 This judgment on the disobedient prophet would vindicate his message, the authority of which had been compromised by his conduct. The impression of this event upon the people would be deepened by the miraculous restraint upon the lion: see ver. 28.

26 old prophet dwelt. And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is ^k the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the Lord: therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath torn him, and slain him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake unto him. And he spake to his sons, saying, Saddle me the ass. And they saddled him. And he went and found his carcase cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcase: the lion had not eaten the carcase, nor torn the ass. And the prophet took up the carcase of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back: and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn and to bury him. And he laid his carcase in his own grave; and they mourned over him, saying, 'Alas, my brother! And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried; ^m lay my bones beside his bones: ⁿ for the saying which he cried by the word of the LORD against the altar in Beth-el, and against all the houses of the high places which are in the cities of ^o Samaria, ¹ shall surely come to pass.

33 ^p After this thing Jeroboam returned not from his evil way, but made again of the lowest of the people priests of the high places: ^q whosoever would, he ^r consecrated him, and he became one of the priests of the high places. ^s And this thing became sin unto the house of Jeroboam, even ^t to cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth.

Ahijah's prophecy concerning Jeroboam and his family.

14 AT that time Abijah the son of Jeroboam fell sick. And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam; and get thee to Shiloh: behold, there is Ahijah the prophet, which told me that ^u I should be king over this people. ^v And take with thee ten loaves, and cracknels [or, cakes], and a cruse of honey, and go to him: he shall tell thee what shall become of the child. And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, ^w and went to Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah. But Ahijah could not see; for his eyes were set by reason of his age. And the LORD said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son; for he is sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her: for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself to be another woman.²

6 And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I am sent to thee with heavy tidings. Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, ^z Forasmuch as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel, and ^a rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee: and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, ^b who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes; but hast done evil above all that were before thee: ^c for thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images, to provoke me to anger, and ^d hast cast me behind thy back: therefore, behold, ^e I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and ^f will cut off from Jeroboam him that pisseth against the wall, ^g and him that is shut up and left³ in Israel, and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung, till it be all gone. ^h Him that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat: for the LORD hath spoken it. Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine own house: and ⁱ when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall die. And all Israel shall mourn for him, and bury him: for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave, because in him ^k there is found some good thing toward the LORD God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam. ^l Moreover the LORD shall raise him up a king over Israel, who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day: ^m but what? even now.⁴

15 For the LORD shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water, and he shall ⁿ root up Israel out of this ^o good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter them ^p beyond the river, ^q because they have made their groves, provoking the LORD to anger. And he shall give Israel up because of the sins of Jeroboam, ^r who did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

1 This word shows that the book was compiled after Omri had built and named Samaria. See the Preface to this book, and ch. xvi. 24.

2 A striking instance of the folly of attempting disguise before God, who could as easily reveal to the prophet the name and rank of the applicant, as make known the result of her child's illness.

3 Some translate this 'the bond and the free;' but it seems to mean that not one of the family of Jeroboam should escape, however carefully they might be shut up for protection.

4 The sense seems to be, 'But why do I speak of it as a distant event? Even now the sentence is beginning to take effect.'

17 And Jeroboam's wife arose, and departed, and came to 'Tirzah: ¹ and 'when she 18 came to the threshold of the door, the child died; and they buried him; and all Israel mourned for him, ² according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by the hand of his servant Ahijah the prophet.

19 And the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he ³ warred, and how he reigned, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles² of the kings of Israel.
20 And the days which Jeroboam reigned were two and twenty years: and he slept with his fathers, and Nadab his son reigned in his stead.

Reigns of Rehoboam, Abijam, and Asa, in Judah.

21 AND Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned in Judah. ¹ Rehoboam was forty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city ² which the LORD did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, ³ to put his name there. ⁴ And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

22 'And Judah did evil³ in the sight of the LORD, and they ⁴ provoked him to jealousy with their sins which they had committed, above all that their fathers 23 had done. For they also built them ⁵ high places, and images, ⁶ and groves, on 24 every high hill, and ⁷ under every green tree. ⁸ And there were also sodomites in the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

25 'And it came to pass in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that ¹ Shishak king of 26 Egypt came up against Jerusalem: ² and he took away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he even took away all: and 27 he took away all the shields of gold ³ which Solomon had made. And king
Rehoboam made in their stead brazen shields, and committed them unto the hands 28 of the chief of the guard, which kept the door of the king's house. And it was so, when the king went into the house of the LORD, that the guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard chamber.

29 'Now the rest of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not 30 written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? And there was ¹ war 31 between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days. ² And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David. ³ And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess. And ⁴ Abijam⁵ his son reigned in his stead.

15 Now ¹ in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam the son of Nebat reigned Abijam
2 over Judah. Three years⁶ reigned he in Jerusalem. 'And his mother's name 3 was ¹ Maachah,⁷ the daughter of ² Abishalom. And he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him: and ³ his heart was not perfect with 4 the LORD his God, as the heart of David his father. Nevertheless ⁴ for David's sake did the LORD his God give him a lamp in Jerusalem, to set up his son after 5 him, and ⁵ to establish Jerusalem: because David ⁶ did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD, and turned not aside from any thing that he commanded 6 him all the days of his life, ⁷ save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite. 'And there was war between Rehoboam⁸ and Jeroboam all the days of his life.

7 'Now the rest of the acts of Abijam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? And there was war between 8 Abijam and Jeroboam. ¹ And Abijam slept with his fathers; and they buried him in the city of David: and Asa his son reigned in his stead.

9 And in the twentieth year of Jeroboam king of Israel reigned Asa over Judah.
10 And forty and one years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his ² mother's name was 11 Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom. ³ And Asa did that which was right in the 12 eyes of the LORD, as did David his father. ⁴ And he took away the sodomites 13 out of the land, and removed ⁵ all the idols that his fathers had made. And also

1 The pleasant situation of Tirzah (see Song of Solomon vi. 4) had early attracted the Israelitish monarchs; so that it shared for some time, with Shechem, the honours of the capital (ch. xv. 33; xvi. 8).

2 Not the canonical book of the Chronicles, for that was not yet written (see Preface, in page 414); but a volume of national annals or records, out of which the author of this book, under the guidance of Divine inspiration, selected the most important passages.

3 The account in vers. 22—24 indicates a rapid and deep degeneracy, such as is described in Rom. i. 23—32. Man can never rise above the objects of his worship.

4 A fuller account of this invasion and of its causes is given in the parallel passage, 2 Chron. xii. 2—12. The same remark applies also to many other portions of the history of the kingdom of Judah.

5 Some Hebrew manuscripts and ancient versions have Abijah, as in 2 Chron. xii. 16.

6 On this and some other dates, see Chronological Table and note, in pages 516—520.

7 In 2 Chron. xi. 20, Maachah is called 'the daughter of Absalom;' and, in 2 Chron. xiii. 2, 'Michaiah, the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah.' Jewish writers suppose that Absalom the son of David is here intended; that his daughter Tamar was married to Uriel, and that consequently Maachah or Michaiah was his granddaughter. According to this supposition, the term 'daughter' is used in a wide sense, like 'father' in ver. 3, and 'mother' in vers. 10 to 13, where it means grandmother.

8 Several manuscripts, with the Targum and the Arabic version, read 'Abijam.' The Syriac has 'Abia the son of Rehoboam.'

^k Maachah his mother, even her he removed from being queen,¹ because she had made an idol² in a grove; and Asa destroyed her idol, and ^l burnt it by the brook ^m Kidron. ⁿ But the high places³ were not removed: nevertheless Asa's ^o heart was perfect⁴ with the LORD all his days. And he brought in the things which his father had dedicated, and the things which himself had dedicated, into the house of the LORD, silver, and gold, and vessels.

16 And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

17 And ^p Baasha king of Israel went up against Judah, and built ^q Ramah,⁵ ^r that he might not suffer any to go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.⁶

18 Then Asa took⁷ all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hand of his servants: and king Asa sent them to ^s Ben-hadad, the son of Tabrimon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria,⁸ that dwelt at ^t Damascus, saying,

19 There is a league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent unto thee a present of silver and gold; come and break thy

20 league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me. So Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of the hosts which he had against the cities of Israel, and smote ^u Ijon, and ^x Dan, and ^y Abelbeth-maachah, and all

21 Cinneroth, with all the land of Naphtali. And it came to pass, when Baasha heard thereof, that he left off building of Ramah, and dwelt in Tirzah. ^z Then king Asa made a proclamation throughout all Judah; none was exempted: and they took away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha had builded; and king Asa built with them ^a Geba of Benjamin, and ^b Mizpah.⁹

23 ^c The rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his might, and all that he did, and the cities which he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? Nevertheless in the time of his old age he was diseased in his Reigns of Nadab, Baasha, Elah, and Zimri, in Israel.

25 AND Nadab the son of Jeroboam began to reign over Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned over Israel two years. And he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of his father, and in ^f his sin where-with he made Israel to sin.

27 ^g And Baasha the son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, conspired against him; and Baasha smote him at ^h Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines;¹⁰ for Nadab and all Israel laid siege to Gibbethon. Even in the third year of Asa king of Judah did Baasha slay him, and reigned in his stead. And it came to pass, when he reigned, that he smote all the house of Jeroboam; he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed, until he had destroyed him, according unto ⁱ the saying of the LORD, which he spake by his servant Ahijah the Shilonite: ^k because of the sins of Jeroboam which he sinned, and which he made Israel sin, by his

² Rather, 'an idol to Ashtaroth.' The Septuagint renders it, 'removed her from ministering to Astarte.' See note on Judg. ii. 13.

³ The high places devoted to idolatrous worship were destroyed (see 2 Chron. xiv. 3); but there were others apparently used in the worship of the true God; though sacrifices could legally be offered only in the place which God had appointed for the purpose (Deut. xii. 13, 14.) These were not generally suppressed till the time of Hezekiah (see 2 Kings xii. 3; xviii. 4).

⁴ This refers not to his whole conduct, in which there were some serious blemishes, but to his sincere adherence to the appointed worship of God, and to the general principles of the Theocracy.

⁸ The bitter hostility which the disruption between the two rival kingdoms had produced was greatly aggravated by the course which each took of calling in foreign aid against the other, and which at last brought about the ruin of both kingdoms. That Syria should have attained so much strength so soon after its conquest by David, is explained by the circumstance that the only effect of that conquest was a levy of tribute, and not an annihilation of the resources of the country. Indeed, the overthrow at that time of the petty kingdoms into which Syria had formerly been divided, such as Zobah, Rehob, and Maachah, had prepared the way for the ascendancy of Damascus, as the centre of an united and powerful state, as soon as foreign control was removed.

⁹ In the time of Jeremiah (ch. xli. 9), there was still existing near Mizpah a pit, or fossé, 'which Asa the king had made across the valley for fear of Baasha king of Israel.'

¹⁰ Gibbethon was a Levitical city in the tribe of Dan (see Josh. xix. 44; xxi. 23). The Philistines had probably taken possession of it recently when it was abandoned by the Levites, who had quitted the country in large numbers because they were supplanted by the priests of the golden calves (see 2 Chron. xi. 14—17). It is likely that the same thing occurred in some other Levitical cities.

32 the chronicles of the kings of Israel? 'And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

33 In the third year of Asa king of Judah began Baasha the son of Ahijah to reign 34 over all Israel in Tirzah, twenty and four years. And he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in ^mthe way of Jeroboam, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

16 Then the word of the LORD came to ⁿJehu the son of Hanani¹ against Baasha, 2 saying, ^oForasmuch as I exalted thee out of the ^pdust, and made thee prince over my people Israel; and ^qthou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and hast the LORD against Baasha, and against his house, even for all the evil that he did in the sight of the LORD, in provoking him to anger with the work² of his hands, in being like the house of Jeroboam; and because ^yhe killed him.³

8 In the twenty and sixth year of Asa king of Judah began Elah the son of 9 Baasha to reign over Israel in Tirzah, two years. ^zAnd his servant Zimri, captain of half his chariots, conspired against him, as he was in Tirzah, drinking himself 10 drunk in the house of Arza steward of his house in Tirzah. And Zimri went in and smote him, and killed him, in the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned in his stead.

11 And it came to pass, when he began to reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, that he slew all the house of Baasha: he left him ^anot one that pisseth against a wall, which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking the LORD

15 In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign seven days in Tirzah. And the people were encamped ^eagainst Gibbethon, which belonged 16 to the Philistines. And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made Omri, the 17 captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp. And Omri went up 18 from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they besieged Tirzah. And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and burnt the king's house over him with fire, and 19 died, for his sins which he sinned in doing evil in the sight of the LORD, ^fin

20 Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they

21 Then were the people of Israel divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him king; and half followed Omri.
22 But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

¹ There was a prophet Hanani about the same time, who was sent to Asa king of Judah: see 2 Chron. xvi. 7.

² This refers not so much to his general conduct as to the setting up of idols.

⁴ Literally, 'none of his avengers.' Yet Divine justice soon avenged it so remarkably, that it was a proverb long afterwards, 'Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?' (2 Kings ix. 31).

⁵ In these twelve years are included the five in which Omri was at war with Tibni, who reigned as rival king. With the accession of Omri to the throne of Israel, hostilities ceased between the two kingdoms for about a century, till renewed by Amaziah. See 2 Kings xiv. 8.

⁶ The palace at Tirzah having been destroyed (ver. 18), Omri founded a new capital at Samaria, which continued to be the seat of government until the overthrow

 25 ^g Samaria. But ^h Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and did worse than Omri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

29 And in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel in 30 Samaria twenty and two years. And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight 31 of the LORD above all that were before him. And it came to pass, as if it had been a light thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat,^l that he took to wife Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal king of the ^m Zidonians, ⁿ and 32 went and served Baal, and worshipped him. And he reared up an altar for Baal 33 in ^o the house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria. ^p And Ahab made a grove; and Ahab ^q did more to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

 in Abiram his firstborn, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub,² of the kingdom of Israel. It was situated on a hill of considerable height; and, while it equalled Jerusalem in the natural strength of its position, it far surpassed it in respect of the fertility and beauty of its surrounding country. This city subsequently gave its name to the central part of Palestine, the inhabitants of which were called Samaritans. Under the Romans it was called Sebaste, and is now Sebastieh.

1 The prophet Micah (ch. vi. 16) speaks of 'the statutes of Omri,' the keeping of which brought Israel to desolation. He introduced a worse form of idolatry; and seems to have compulsorily enforced what Jeroboam had endeavoured to establish by example and allurements.

2 It is generally supposed that Hiel lost his eldest son when he began the work, and his youngest when he finished; all the rest having died during its progress. If this were so, his conduct presents a course of fool-hardy defiance to the God of Israel. It is evident that the prophecy was understood at the time, and that its fulfilment was noticed as an impressive manifestation of the power of the true God, in an idolatrous age.

3 There is something appalling in the sudden appearance of this extraordinary prophet of Divine vengeance, just at the time when the wickedness of Ahab and his people had reached its greatest height. We learn, however, from James v. 17, that earnest prayer, the expression of deep concern for the degenerate state of Israel, had preceded this awful denunciation. And, with all the stern severity which the sins of the nation required on the part of a preacher of repentance, a tender regard for the rebellious monarch and people is discernible.

4 Josephus and the Septuagint take the word translated 'inhabitants' as a proper name; and render the clause, 'the Tishbite from Thisbe of Gilead.'

5 That is, 'whose servant I am.'

6 The entire withholding of rain and dew would prevent all vegetable growth, and therefore cause famine in the land. This terrible visitation was designed to make the people see the evil of forsaking the Lord God for the idols of Egypt and Tyre. It was needful that a nation so deeply sunk in insensibility and ungodliness should be aroused, even at the expense of so much suffering. This prophecy is alluded to in Rev. xi. 6.

7 This was probably one of the winter torrents flowing into the Jordan; but it cannot now be distinguished.

8 Elijah had honoured God by his faith and obedience: now God is pleased to honour him by His extraordinary aid; using for this purpose creatures the most unlikely, and controlling their natural instinct, so as to make the prophet the more conscious of His care.

9 This was a place between Sidon and Tyre, named in the New Testament 'Sarepta' (Luke iv. 26), where there is still a village called Surafend. See note on Josh. xi. 8.

10 Not by a distinct message from heaven, but by disposing her to supply Elijah with food (see ver. 4), in the faith of his being a prophet of Jehovah. This incident, and the cure of Naaman the Syrian (2 Kings v.), are referred to by our Lord (Luke iv. 25—27), to illustrate God's sovereignty in bestowing his favours, and his mercy to the Gentile world.

12 said, Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand. And she said, As the LORD thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel,¹ and a little oil in a cruse: and, behold, I am gathering two² sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it, and die. And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but make³ me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son. For thus saith the LORD God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the LORD sendeth rain upon the earth.

15 And she went and did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house, did eat many days [or, a full year]. And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by ^c Elijah.

17 And it came to pass after these things, that the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick; and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him. And she said unto Elijah, ^d What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? art thou come unto me to call my sin⁴ to remembrance, and to slay my son? And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft, where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed. And he cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son? ^e And he stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, I pray thee, ^f let this child's soul come into him again.

22 And the LORD heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him again, and he ^g revived. And Elijah took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him unto his mother: and Elijah said, See, thy son liveth. And the woman said to Elijah, Now by this ^h I know⁵ that thou art a man of God, and that the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth.

(Now Obadiah feared the LORD greatly: for it was so, when ^m Jezebel ⁿ cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.) And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks: peradventure we may find grass to save the horses and mules alive, that we lose not all the beasts. So they divided the land between them to pass throughout it: Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.

4 Referring probably to the general sinfulness of her heart and life, rather than to any specific sin. This chastening dispensation awakened conscience, and set it upon the ever-seasonable work of self-judgment.

5 Her faith in his prophetic authority was now fully assured by this fresh and convincing proof. This is, so far as we know, the first instance of a man being raised from the dead.

6 This was the third year of Elijah's residence at Zarephath, or the fourth of the famine, which lasted three years and six months. See Luke iv. 25; James v. 17.

7 As the return of rain was to be 'according to Elijah's word' (ch. xvii. 1), it was necessary that he should announce it to Ahab, that it might not be regarded as a mere natural event, or as being brought about by the priests of Baal.

8 Elijah having said that there should be no rain till he called for it, Ahab had probably desired to get him into his power, with the view either of inflicting vengeance upon him, or of endeavouring to compel him to procure the desired blessing.

9 See note on 1 Sam. x. 5.

 15 he shall slay me. And Elijah said, As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I 16 So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him: and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

 17 And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, Art thou

 25 And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for your-

1 Thus tracing the national calamities to their true source; for they were but a practical fulfilment of the threatenings of the law.

2 Though the people worshipped Baal, they had never formally renounced Jehovah; nor had they ceased to regard themselves as his people.

3 There is something sublime in the spectacle of this public controversy between Jehovah and Baal. The fearless bearing of the prophet, as he stands alone before a hostile monarch with his numerous priests—his bold appeal to the people to renounce the fashionable idolatry—his fair proposal, in the execution of which he gives every advantage to his opponents—the cool irony by which he reproves their frantic efforts—the calm assurance with which, when their sun-god is setting, ‘about the time of the evening sacrifice,’ he draws near to the altar he had repaired—and his confiding prayer for the vindication of Jehovah’s glory and the turning of the people’s hearts,—all these prepare the mind for that Divine manifestation which carried conviction to the consciences of the multitude, extorting the confession, ‘Jehovah! he is the God.’ But the subsequent history shows that something more than the scenes of Sinai or Carmel, and even of Calvary, is needed to change the heart.

4 The prophets of Baal could not well object to this proposal, as the god they worshipped was represented by the sun as the active principle of heat. Nor could they decline the trial without forfeiting their reputation with the people. They perhaps hoped that, if Baal did not give proof of his divinity, such proof would be equally wanting on the part of Jehovah. The proposal was too sudden and too immediate in its execution to allow any time for artful contrivance on either side.

5 Rather, ‘they danced round the altar.’

6 This was not a light, bantering pleasantry, as if the prophet could amuse himself with their unsuccessful impiety; but a severe rebuke, made severer by its sarcastic form. Ridicule is not a test of truth, but it may sometimes be used to put down a mischievous absurdity.

7 The heathen supposed that such things might happen to prevent the gods hearing their prayers. Homer represents Thetis as waiting twelve days to ask a boon from Jupiter, when he should return from a journey. Iliad i. 426.

8 Similar self-inflictions by heathen priests, on urgent occasions, are mentioned by Herodotus and Plutarch.

9 That the people might be satisfied that there was no deception, and so become unquestionable eye and ear witnesses of what would follow, and prompt executors of his commands.

10 To impress upon the assembled multitude the essential unity of their nation, as God’s chosen people, and the proper unity of their worship.

11 Elijah was not of the priestly race; but, as a prophet, he was acting under a special and direct commission from heaven. See 1 Sam. vii. 9.

35 third time. And the water ran round about the altar; and he filled ^o the trench also with water.

36 And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, LORD ^p God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, ^q let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, ¹ and that I am thy 42 of abundance of rain. So Ahab went up to eat and to drink. And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; ^w and he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his 43 face between his knees, ⁴ and said to his servant, Go up now, look toward the sea. ⁵

And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said, ^a Go clouds and wind, and there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to Jezreel.

1 In this prayer Elijah expresses the end of all the miracles which he and other prophets had performed.

2 Many of the people must have known that a similar Divine interposition had occurred on the occasion of Aaron's first sacrifice (Lev. ix. 24). As, in the former, Jehovah himself solemnly accredited the institution of the Mosaic ritual, so here he sanctioned, in a similar manner, the prophet's attempt to restore His worship in opposition to that of Baal. See also Gen. xv. 17; 1 Chron. xxi. 26; 2 Chron. vii. 1.

3 It is unnecessary to suppose that Elijah did this with his own hand; for assistants would be found among the people who had seized them. These idolatrous prophets, who had been clearly convicted of deceiving the nation, were condemned to death by the law (Deut. xiii. 5, 15, 16; xvii. 5).

4 A posture expressive of the profoundest reverence.

5 The summit of Mount Carmel commands a very extensive view of the Mediterranean Sea.

6 A small black cloud on the verge of the horizon is in many places the sure precursor of a violent storm.

7 This proof of Elijah's humility and respect as a subject would be calculated to make a favourable impression on the king's heart; and to convince him that the prophet, in his zeal against idolatry, had been actuated by no personal disrespect or ill-will towards himself, but only by a principle of obedience to God, and an anxious concern for his country's good.

8 Jezebel's object probably was to induce Elijah to flee, not daring at present to carry her threat into execution. It is a striking evidence of the weakness of the strongest hearts, that Elijah should now give way to fear.

9 Some Hebrew manuscripts, with the Septuagint and Vulgate, read, 'And he feared and arose,' etc.

10 Out of Ahab's dominions. Elijah's flight at this critical moment left the auspicious movement which had just commenced in the land of Israel without a leader; and the people seem to have sunk down again into their former state.

11 This is the retem, a species of broom, which grows largely in this district. See note on Gen. xxi. 15.

12 The prophet, whom in the preceding chapter we have beheld on the very summit of Divinely imparted power, now comes before us in the deepest depression. After eminent success in the service of God we are in danger of taking importance to ourselves; and then it is a mercy to be shown our weakness, that so we may be kept humble (see 2 Cor. xii. 8, 9). Elijah being left to himself for a season, is seen to be 'a man subject to like passions' with ourselves.

13 Or, perhaps, 'on hot stones.' This is a common repast of the Bedouins in the present day.

- 8 because the journey is too great for thee. And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went in the strength of that meat ^m forty days and forty nights unto ⁿ Horeb¹ the mount of God.
- 9 And he came thither unto a cave, and lodged there; and, behold, the word of the LORD came to him, and he said unto him, ^o What doest thou here, Elijah?²
- 10 And he said, ^p I have been very ^q jealous for the LORD God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars,³ and ^r slain thy prophets with the sword; and ^s I, even I only, am left; and ^t they seek my life, to take it away.⁴ And he said, Go forth, and stand ^u upon the mount before ^v the LORD. And, behold, the LORD passed by, and ^w a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the LORD; but the LORD was not in the wind: and after the wind ^x an earthquake; but the LORD was not in the earthquake: and after the earthquake ^y a fire; but the LORD was not in the fire: and after the fire ^z a still small voice.⁵ And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that ^c he wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave. ^d And, behold, there came a voice unto him, and said, What doest thou here, Elijah? ^e And he said, I have been very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: because the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away. And the LORD said unto him, Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus: and when thou comest, ^f anoint ^g Hazael to be king over Syria: and ^h Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel: and ⁱ Elisha the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room.⁶ And ^k it shall come to pass, that him that escapeth the sword of Hazael shall Jehu slay: and him that escapeth from the sword of Jehu ^l shall Elisha slay. ^m Yet⁷ I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all ⁿ the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, ^o and every mouth which hath not kissed him.⁸
- 19 So he departed thence, and found Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and ^p he with the twelfth: and Elijah passed by him, and cast ^q his mantle upon him.⁹ And ^r he left the oxen, and ran after Elijah, and said, ^s Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then I will follow thee. And he said unto him, Go back again: for what have I done to thee? And he returned back from him, and took a yoke of oxen, and slew them, and ^t boiled their flesh with the instruments of the oxen, and gave unto the people, and they did eat. Then he arose, and went after Elijah, and ministered unto him.

² This interrogation does not necessarily convey a reproof; but seems designed to draw from the prophet a frank avowal of his present state of mind.

³ These altars had probably been used by pious Israelites of the ten tribes, when unable to go to Jerusalem.

⁴ The circumstances attending his ministry, especially the recent events at Carmel, had no doubt exceedingly raised his expectations. Having hoped to see a great reformation effected by his labours, he was ill prepared for this sad reverse.

⁵ In this Divine manifestation to Elijah there seems to be a designed reference to those which had formerly been granted to Moses in the same locality (see Exod. xix. 16—20; xxxiv. 1—8). These varied exhibitions would teach the prophet that the Lord, in carrying out his designs, was not confined to one agent. Elijah perhaps thought that all the work was to be done by him; but he now learned that Israel had to be acted upon by other ministry besides his; and that miraculous judgments and terrifying displays of God's power and displeasure, though proper for awakening attention, or for the intimidation or destruction of his enemies, were only preparations for the intended good, which must be effected by the convincing and persuasive instructions of his word, accompanied by the influences of his Spirit.

⁶ The meaning of this, as an answer to Elijah's complaint, appears to be, 'Hazael shall be king of Syria, and shall correct the Israelites for their idolatry (see 2 Kings viii. 12); Jehu shall be king of Israel, and shall utterly destroy the idolatrous house of Ahab; and Elisha shall help thee whilst thou art on earth, and, when thou art gone, shall carry on thy work.'

⁷ Elijah's complaint, and God's answer to it, are quoted in Rom. xi. 4, 5, to show that in the darkest times there may exist a hidden remnant of true servants of God.

⁸ Literally, 'kissed to him;' probably referring to kissing the hand; an act of worship represented in ancient sculptures.

5 And the messengers came again, and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy 6 gold, and thy wives, and thy children; yet I will send my servants unto thee to-morrow about this time, and they shall search thine house, and the houses of thy servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is pleasant in thine eyes, they 7 shall put it in their hand, and take it away. Then the king of Israel called all the elders of the land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this man seeketh mischief: for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my 8 silver, and for my gold; and I denied him not. And all the elders and all the 9 people said unto him, Harken not unto him, nor consent. Wherefore he said unto the messengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didst send for to thy servant at the first I will do: but this thing I may not do.¹ And the messengers departed, and brought him word again.

10 And Ben-hadad sent unto him, and said, ^yThe gods do so unto me, and more also, ^zif the dust of Samaria shall suffice for handfuls² for all the people that 11 follow me. And the king of Israel answered and said, Tell him, ^aLet not him
12 that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off. And it came to pass, when Ben-hadad heard this message, as he was ^bdrinking, he and the kings in the pavilions,³ that he said unto his servants, Set yourselves in array.⁴ And they set themselves in array against the city.

13 And, behold, there came a prophet⁵ unto Ahab king of Israel, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, ^cI will deliver 14 it into thine hand this day; and ^dthou shalt know that I am the LORD. And Ahab said, By whom? And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Even by the young men⁶ of the princes of the provinces. Then he said, Who shall order⁷ the battle?
15 And he answered, Thou. Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty-two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being ^eseven thousand.

16 And they went out at noon. But Ben-hadad was ^fdrinking himself drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him. And the young men of the princes of the provinces went out first. And Ben-hadad 18 sent out, and they told him, saying, There are men come out of Samaria. And he said, Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive; or whether they 19 be come out for war, take them alive.⁸ So these young men of the princes of the 20 provinces came out of the city, and the army which followed them. And they slew every one his man: and ^gthe Syrians fled; and Israel pursued them: and 21 Ben-hadad the king of Syria escaped on an horse with the horsemen. And the king of Israel ^hwent out, and smote the horses and chariots, and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter.

22 And ⁱthe prophet came to the king of Israel, and said unto him, Go, ^kstrengthen thyself, and mark, and see what thou doest: ^lfor at the return of the year⁹ the king of Syria will come up against thee.

23 And the servants of the king of Syria said unto him, ^mTheir gods are gods of the hills,¹⁰ therefore they were stronger than we; but let us fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they. And do this thing, Take 24 the kings away, every man out of his place, and put captains in their rooms: and number thee an army, like the army that thou hast lost, horse for horse, and chariot for chariot: and we will fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they. And he hearkened unto their voice, and did so.

26 And it came to pass at the return of the year, that Ben-hadad numbered the 27 Syrians, and went up to ⁿAphek,¹¹ to fight against Israel. And the children of

¹ Ben-hadad's first message was understood by the king of Israel merely as a demand of vassalage; and to this he tamely consented. But the second, which required the actual and immediate surrender of whatever Ben-hadad chose to take, was too much even for the passive Ahab; and, stimulated by his chief men, and by the general voice of the people, he resolved to make a stand.

² An hyperbolical description of the immense army which he would bring against Samaria. Ahab's pithy reply to this proud boast has since become a proverb.

³ Rather, 'booths;' made of the boughs and branches of trees.

⁴ Or, 'Begin the attack.'

⁵ The Lord yet had pity on the seed of Abraham, and, unasked, interposed for their deliverance. But we do not hear of any thanksgiving for these undeserved favours.

⁶ This means perhaps their attendants. These, though few in number, were to begin the attack; and this made the defeat that ensued the more surprising.

⁷ Rather, 'Who shall join?' that is, 'Who shall begin the battle, the Syrians or I?'

⁸ This unusual command would greatly embarrass his troops, and contribute to the success of their assailants.

⁹ In the early spring, when the winter-rains had ceased.

¹⁰ The Syrians may perhaps have derived this notion of the God of Israel partly from knowing that Samaria and Jerusalem were situated on hills; that Sinai and Carmel had been chosen for Divine manifestations; and that high places were much used by the Israelites for offering sacrifices.

¹¹ There were two places named 'Aphek,' and it is not certain which of the two this was; but, as the Syrians were now choosing the plain for fighting, it was most likely that mentioned in 1 Sam. xxix. 1, in the plain of Jezreel.

Israel were numbered, and were all present, and went against them: and the children of Israel pitched before them ^o like two little flocks of kids:¹ but the Syrians filled the country.

28 And there came a man of God, and spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the LORD, ^p Because the Syrians have said, The LORD is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, therefore ^q will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand; and ^r ye shall know that I am the LORD.

29 And they pitched one over against the other seven days. And so it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined: and the children of Israel slew of the 30 Syrians an hundred thousand footmen in one day. But the rest fled to Aphek, into the city; and there a wall² fell upon twenty and seven thousand of the men that were left. And Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, ^s into an inner

31 chamber. And his servants said unto him, Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful kings:³ let us, I pray thee, 'put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads,⁴ and go out to the king of Israel:

32 peradventure he will save thy life. So they girded sackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said, Thy servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, Is he yet alive? he is

33 my brother. Now the men did diligently observe whether any thing would come from him, and did hastily catch it:⁵ and they said, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he said, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he

34 caused him to come up into the chariot. And Ben-hadad said unto him, ^u The cities, which my father took from thy father, I will restore; and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus,⁶ as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. ^x So he made a covenant with him, and sent him away.⁷

35 And a certain man of ^y the sons of the prophets said unto his neighbour ^z in the word of the LORD, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man refused to smite him.

36 Then said he unto him, Because thou hast not obeyed the voice of the LORD, behold, as soon as thou art departed from me, a lion shall slay thee. And as

37 soon as he was departed from him, ^a a lion found him, and slew him.⁸ Then he found another man, and said, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man smote him,

38 so that in smiting he wounded him. So the prophet departed, and waited for the king by the way, and disguised himself with ashes⁹ upon his face. And ^b as the

39 king passed by, he cried unto the king: and he said, Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle; and, behold, a man turned aside, and brought a man unto me, and said, Keep this man: if by any means he be missing, then ^c shall

40 thy life be for his life, ^d or else thou shalt pay a talent of silver. And as thy servant was busy here and there, he was gone. And the king of Israel said unto

41 him, ^e So shall thy judgment be; thyself hast decided it. And he hastened, and took the ashes away from his face; and the king of Israel discerned him that

42 he was of the prophets. And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ^f Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man whom I appointed to utter destruction,¹⁰

43 therefore thy life shall go for his life, and thy people for his people. And the king of Israel ^g went to his house heavy and displeased, and came to Samaria.

The murder of Naboth; Elijah denounces judgments upon Ahab.

21 AND it came to pass after these things, that Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria. And Ahab spake unto Naboth, saying, Give me thy ^h vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house: and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it; or, if it seem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of

² To obviate the difficulty of so large a number being killed by a wall, some read, with a few ancient manuscripts, 'the heat,' or the hot wind. Others consider the Hebrew words to mean that 'twenty-seven thousand men' was the number of the whole remaining army; only a part of whom they suppose to have been destroyed.

⁴ Rather, 'ropes about our necks;' and the same in ver. 32.

⁵ Or, 'And the men took it as a good omen, for they quickly caught what [fell] from him.'

⁶ That is, he gave permission to establish an Israelitish quarter in the Syrian capital.

⁸ The punishment of this man's disobedience illustrated and confirmed both the parable and the threat.

⁹ The Septuagint and the Chaldee read, more appropriately, 'with a bandage upon his face.' This requires a change of only one letter in the Hebrew.

¹⁰ Heb., 'The man of my curse.' For the fulfilment of the following sentence, see ch. xxii. 35; 2 Kings x. 32.

3 it in money. And Naboth said to Ahab, The LORD forbid it me, 'that I should give the inheritance¹ of my fathers unto thee.

4 And Ahab came into his house heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him: for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers. And he laid him down upon his bed, and turned

5 away his face, and would eat no bread.² But ^kJezebel his wife came to him, and

6 said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread? And he said unto her, Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry: I will give thee the

8 vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite. So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto the elders and to the nobles

9 that were in his city, dwelling with Naboth. And she wrote in the letters, saying,

10 Proclaim a fast,³ and set Naboth on high among the people: and set ^ttwo men, ^msons of Belial, before him, to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst ⁿblaspheme God and the king. And then carry him out, and ^ostone him, that he may die.

11 And the men of his city,⁴ even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, did as Jezebel had sent unto them, and as it was written in

12 the letters which she had sent unto them. ^pThey proclaimed a fast, and set

13 Naboth on high among the people. And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him: and the men of Belial witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying, Naboth did blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city,⁵ and ^qstoned him

14 with stones, that he died. Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, Naboth is stoned,

15 ^rand is dead. And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is 16 not alive, but dead. And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession⁶ of it.

17, 18 ^sAnd the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying, Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, ^twhich is in Samaria:⁷ behold, he is in the 19 vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it. And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou⁸ killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, ^u"In the place where⁹ dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

20 And Ahab said to Elijah, ^vHast thou found me, O mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee: because ^wthou hast sold thyself to work evil in the 21 sight of the LORD. Behold, ^xI will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity, and will cut off from Ahab ^yhim that pisseth against the wall, and

22 ^zhim that is shut up and left in Israel, and will make thine house like the house of ^aJeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of ^bBaasha the son of Ahijah, for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and ^cmade Israel

23 to sin. And ^dof Jezebel also spake the LORD, saying, The dogs shall eat Jezebel

24 by the wall of Jezreel. ^eHim that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat.

25 (But ^fthere was none like unto Ahab, which did ^gsell himself to work wicked-26 ness in the sight of the LORD, ^hwhom Jezebel his wife stirred up. And he did very abominably in following idols, according to all things ⁱas did the Amorites, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.)

² Ahab's childish fretfulness was perhaps indulged the more, in order to engage the sympathy of his wife, whom he allowed to act for him in the matter; and she resolutely made her way to her object through the fourfold guilt of deceit, perjury, robbery, and murder.

³ Pretending, apparently, to fear some national calamities, and then fixing upon Naboth as the cause of the dreaded judgment. There is no wickedness so great but religion has sometimes been made a cover for it.

⁴ An instance of the servility produced by high-handed despotism. Compare 2 Kings x. 1—7.

⁵ That there might be no heir or avenger, his sons also were put to death: see 2 Kings ix. 26.

⁶ He seems to have gone with some state (2 Kings ix. 25).

⁷ That is, 'who rules at Samaria.' It was at Jezreel that Elijah met Ahab.

⁸ A man is not the less guilty because his weakness of character prevents his being more than an accomplice.

27 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that he ^mrent his clothes, and ⁿput sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and ^owent softly. And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying, Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? Because he humbleth himself before me, ^pI will not bring the evil in his days: but ^qin his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

Ahab forms alliance with Jehoshaphat; rejects Micaiah's warning, and is killed in battle.

22 AND they continued three years without war between Syria and Israel. And it came to pass in the third year, that ^rJehoshaphat the king of Judah came down to the king of Israel.¹ And the king of Israel said unto his servants, Know ye that ^sRamoth in Gilead is ours,² and we be still, and take it not out of the hand of the king of Syria? And he said unto Jehoshaphat, Wilt thou go with me to battle to Ramoth-gilead? And Jehoshaphat said to the king of Israel, ^tI am as thou art, my people as thy people, my horses as thy horses.

5 And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, ^uInquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day. Then the king of Israel ^vgathered the prophets together, about four hundred men, and said unto them, Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? ^wAnd they said, Go up: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

7 And ^xJehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might inquire of him? And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, *There is yet one man, Micaiah*³ the son of Imlah, by whom we may inquire of the LORD: but I hate him; ^yfor he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.⁴

9 Then the king of Israel called an officer, and said, Hasten hither Micaiah the son of Imlah. And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah sat each on his throne, having put on their robes, in a void place in the entrance of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets ^bprophesied before them. And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah made him horns of iron:⁵ and he said, Thus saith the LORD, With these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou have consumed them. And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the king's hand.

13 And the messenger that was gone to call Micaiah spake unto him, saying, Behold now, the words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one mouth: let thy word, I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good. And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, ^cwhat the LORD saith unto me, that will I speak. So he came to the king.

And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered him, Go, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.⁶ And the king said unto him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the LORD? And he said, I saw all Israel ^dscattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd:⁷ and the LORD said, These have no master: let them return every man to his house in peace.

18 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, ^eDid I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil?

¹ The two families were connected by the marriage of Jehoshaphat's son to Athaliah, Ahab's daughter (see 2 Kings viii. 18). Jehoshaphat, perhaps, hoped that by this means the whole of Israel might ultimately be reunited under the government of his family, and in the worship of the God of their fathers. But the result was far different (see 2 Kings xi. 1, etc.) By this unholy and unwise alliance he countenanced the corruptions of Israel, and opened a way for their introduction into Judah; where, in the following reigns, they produced a state of awful alienation from God, and brought the kingdom to the brink of ruin. While in Ahab we have a striking instance of a weak and wicked man, frequently arrested in his course and partially humbled, yet finally hardened in iniquity; in Jehoshaphat we see the still more affecting case of a sincerely pious man, whose weak compliances were perilous to himself, and mischievous to his family and kingdom, through successive generations.

² Ramoth-gilead was one of the cities which Benhadad had promised to restore (ch. xx. 34); which, however, on regaining his freedom, he had not done.

³ Micaiah's name has not occurred before; but Ahab's language implies that he had previously received from him messages of rebuke and warning. Some suppose him to be the prophet who had displeased Ahab some time before (see ch. xx. 35—42), and to have been imprisoned for his fidelity and boldness on that occasion: compare vers. 9, 26, 27.

⁵ Representing Ahab's strength and success.

⁶ This ironical reply, repeating the very words of the false prophets, was as much as to say, 'You favour and believe these prophets who bid you go; then go by all means, for you have their assurance of success.' Ahab plainly saw his meaning, probably from his tone of voice, countenance, and gesture.

⁷ This was a proverbial expression, derived from Numb. xxvii. 17.

19 And he said, Hear thou therefore the word of the LORD: ^fI saw the LORD sitting on his throne,¹ ^gand all the host of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left. And the LORD said, Who shall persuade [or, deceive] Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner. And ^hthere came forth a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will persuade him. And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be a ⁱlying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, ^kThou shalt persuade him, and prevail also: go forth, and do so. ^lNow therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit² in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil concerning thee.

24 But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and smote Micaiah on the cheek, and said, ^mWhich way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee? And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyself.

26 And the king of Israel said, Take Micaiah, and carry him back unto Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son; and say, Thus saith the king, ⁿPut this fellow in the prison, and feed him with ^obread of affliction and with water of affliction, until I come in peace. And Micaiah said, If thou return at all in peace, ^pthe LORD hath not spoken by me. And he said, Harken, O people, every one of you.

29 So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead. And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, I will disguise myself, and enter into the battle; but put thou on thy robes.³ And the king of Israel ^qdisguised himself, and went into the battle. But the king of Syria commanded his thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, saying, Fight neither with small nor great, save only with the king of Israel.⁴ And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, Surely it is the king of Israel. And they turned aside to fight against him: and Jehoshaphat ^rcried out. And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from pursuing him.

34 And a certain man drew a bow at a venture, and smote the king of Israel⁵ between the joints of the harness: wherefore he said unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the host; for I am wounded. And the battle increased that day: and the king was stayed up in his chariot against the Syrians, and died at even: and the blood ran out of the wound into the midst of the chariot. And there went a proclamation throughout the host about the going down of the sun, saying, Every man to his city, and every man to his own country.⁶ So the king died, and was brought to Samaria; and they buried the king in Samaria. And one washed the chariot in the pool of Samaria;⁷ and the dogs licked up his blood; and they washed his armour; according ^sunto the word of the LORD which he spake.

39 Now the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and ^tthe ivory⁸ house which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel? So Ahab slept with his fathers; and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

Jehoshaphat's reign over Judah, and Ahaziah's over Israel.

41 AND "Jehoshaphat the son of Asa began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab king of Israel. Jehoshaphat was thirty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi. ¹ This was a parable, describing in figurative language, borrowed perhaps from some well-known transactions, the events shortly about to take place, under the permission of God. In such parables the narrative is often nothing more than a vehicle to convey the truth.

² God righteously leaves men who hate the truth, and are willing to be deceived, under the influence of the great deceiver (see 2 Thess. ii. 10—12); making even Satan an instrument of accomplishing His own purposes of good by the destruction of the evil.

³ Although Ahab had overcome the scruples of his ally, he was evidently himself alarmed; and, in the hope of escaping the predicted danger (ver. 17), cunningly proposes to resign the post of honour to his too easy friend; who narrowly escaped paying the penalty of his foolish confidence; but in the moment of extremity was saved through faith and prayer: see 2 Chron. xviii. 31.

⁴ Such was Ben-hadad's return for Ahab's misplaced kindness: see ch. xx. 34.

⁵ While wicked men are calculating on the success of their devices (see vers. 30—32), the hand of God often reaches them, and inflicts their predetermined doom.

⁶ The Israelites appear to have made a successful retreat after their king was slain. Thus Micaiah's prophecy (ver. 17) was exactly fulfilled.

⁷ The meaning is, They washed his chariot in the pool of Samaria; and, while they were cleaning his armour, the dogs licked his blood. See note on ch. xxi. 19.

³ Probably by a storm.

⁴ On comparing this with 2 Chron. xx. 36, 37, it appears to refer to a second proposal on the part of Aha-ziah. Jehoshaphat, having been reprov'd and punished for entering into this league, would not consent to renew the attempt.

⁵ There is a remarkable identity of names in the two royal families of Israel and Judah, during several generations, arising from the connection between them by the marriage of Jehoshaphat's son with Ahab's daughter.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE KINGS,

THE FOURTH BOOK OF THE KINGS.

THE contents of this book, which is a continuation of the preceding, and comprises a period of about three hundred years, may be divided into two parts:—

I. The further history of the TWO KINGDOMS of Israel and Judah to the end of the former: containing the ministry of Elijah continued; his message to Ahaziah (ch. i.); and his translation to heaven (ii. 1—11). The ministry and miracles of Elisha (ii. 11—viii. 15). The reigns of Jehoram and Ahaziah in Judah (viii. 16—29).
Reign of Jehu in Israel (ix., x.) Athaliah's usurpation, and the preservation and reign of Joash in Judah (xi., xii.) Reigns of Jehoahaz and Jehoash in Israel; Elisha's last prophecy and death (xiii.) Reign of Amaziah in Judah; and of Jeroboam II. in Israel (xiv.) Reign of Azariah in Judah; and of Zachariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, and Pekah in Israel; Assyrian invasions (xv.
1—31). Reigns of Jotham and Ahaz in Judah (xv. 32—38, xvi.) Reign of Hoshea in Israel; conquest of the country by the Assyrians; overthrow of the kingdom; and colonization of the land of Israel by idolaters (xvii.)

II. The history of the surviving KINGDOM OF JUDAH continued to its overthrow by the Chaldeans: comprising Hezekiah's good reign; invasions of the Assyrians, and destruction of Sennacherib's army (xviii., xix.) Heze-kiah's sickness, and recovery; visit of ambassadors from Babylon (xx.) Wicked reigns of Manasseh and Amon (xxi.); Josiah's good reign, and reformatations (xxii. 1—xxiii. 30). Reigns of Jehoahaz, Jehoikim, and Jehoiachin; invasions of the Chaldeans, and the first transportation of the people to Babylon (xxiii. 31—xxiv. 17).
Reign of Zedekiah; capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar; destruction of the city and temple; and second transportation of the people to Babylon (xxiv. 18—xxv.
21). Gedaliah is appointed governor, and is killed; the remnant of the people flee into Egypt; mitigation of Jehoiachin's captivity (xxv. 22—30).

Ministry of Elijah continued; his message to Ahaziah

1 THEN Moab ^a rebelled against Israel ¹ ^b after the death of Ahab. And Ahaziah had been transferred to the kings of Israel; as that of Edom had remained with those of Judah.

² Either a latticed window (see refs.), or a balustrade.

³ Literally, 'the Lord of flies;' i. e. the Fly-god; the tutelary god of Ekron: so called, because he was worshipped either under the form of a fly (like the beetle-god of the Egyptians), or as the supposed protector against such annoying insects.

- 4 Israel, that ye go to inquire¹ of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? Now therefore thus saith the LORD, Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.
- 5 And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back? And they said unto him, There came a man² up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die. And he said unto them, What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you these words? And they answered him, He was an hairy³ man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite.
- 9 Then the king sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty. And he went up to him: and, behold, he sat on the top of an hill. And he spake unto him, Thou man of God, the king hath said, Come down. And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, ^k If I be a man of God, then ⁱ let fire come down⁴ from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.⁵ Again also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty. And he answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly. And Elijah answered and said unto them, If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty. And he sent again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty. And the third captain of fifty went up, and came and fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, ^j be precious in thy sight. Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight. And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him: be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king. And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, is it not because there is no God in Israel to inquire of his word? therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.
- 17 So he died according to the word of the LORD which Elijah had spoken. And Jehoram reigned in his stead in the second year of Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah; because he had no son. Now the rest of the acts of Ahaziah which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

Translation of Elijah to heaven.

- 2 AND it came to pass, when the LORD would ^k take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind, that Elijah went with ⁱ Elisha from Gilgal. And Elijah said unto Elisha, ^m Tarry here,⁶ I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to Beth-el. And Elisha said unto him, As the LORD liveth, and ⁿ as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Beth-el. And ^o the sons of the prophets that were at Beth-el came forth to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to-day? And he said, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace. And Elijah said unto him, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to Jericho. And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho.
- 5 And the sons of the prophets that were at Jericho came to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to-day? And he answered, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace. And Elijah said unto him, Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the LORD hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee.

² Though they did not know Elijah, his authoritative message and manner caused them to return without further inquiry.

³ This possibly refers to his dress—a garment of coarse camel's hair, like that worn by John the Baptist: see Matt. iii. 4; Mark i. 6.

⁴ Or, as in the Septuagint, 'fire shall come down.'

⁵ This was a severe but well-merited rebuke of the king and people for their impious rejection of Jehovah; and a solemn admonition of His absolute control over life.

9 And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double¹ portion of thy spirit be upon me. And he said, Thou hast asked a hard thing: ² nevertheless, ^q if thou see me ³ when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee: but if not, it shall not be so.

12 AND Elisha ^u saw it, and he cried, ^x My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof.⁵ And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and ^y rent them in two pieces. He took up also the ^z mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the bank of Jordan; and he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters, and said, Where⁶ is the LORD God of Elijah? and when he also had smitten the waters, ^a they parted hither and thither: and Elisha went over.

15 And when the sons of the prophets which were ^b to view at Jericho saw him, they said, ^c The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and bowed themselves to the ground before him. And they said unto him, Behold now, there be with thy servants fifty strong men; let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master: ^d lest peradventure the spirit of the LORD hath taken him up, and cast him upon some mountain, or into some valley. And he said, Ye shall not send. And when they urged him, till he was ashamed, he said, Send. They sent therefore fifty men; and they sought three days, but ^e found him not. And when they came again to him, (for he tarried at Jericho,) he said unto them, Did I not say unto you, Go not?

19 And the men of the city said unto Elisha, Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as ^f my lord seeth: but the water is naught, and the ground barren. And he said, Bring me a new cruse, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him. And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, and ^g cast the salt in⁷ there, and said, Thus saith the LORD, ^h I have healed these waters; ⁱ there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land. So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake.

23 And he went up from thence unto Beth-el: and as he was going up by the way, there came forth little children⁸ out of the city, and ^k mocked him, and said unto him, Go up, ^l thou bald head! go up, thou bald head! And he turned back, and looked on them, and cursed them in the name of the LORD. And there came forth two ^m she-bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them. And he went from thence to ⁿ mount Carmel, and from thence he returned to Samaria.

² 'Hard,' not because of any limitation of the power and grace of God, but because of the spiritual attainments it required in the recipient. See Matt. xvii. 21.

³ This would keep Elisha's attention awake to all the words and actions of his departing master.

⁴ This triumphant departure (so different from what the prophet had once passionately desired, 1 Kings xix. 4) was probably effected by the ministry of God's appearing in some glorious forms. It testified of angels appearing in some glorious forms. It testified of God's approval of Elijah's singular and devoted piety; and, like the ascension of Enoch at another period of prevailing wickedness, must have very much helped to revive and confirm a faith in the resurrection and future glory of the saints. See note on Gen. v. 24.

⁵ Elisha rightly regarded the courage, watchfulness, prayers, and Divine gifts of his predecessor, as a better defence to Israel than any military force.

⁶ This is an expression not of doubt or unbelief, but of firm conviction, 'Elijah's God is also my God.' By this miracle Elisha's commission as Elijah's successor was made known.

⁷ In this, as in other cases, the action was only symbolical; the power being wholly in 'the word of the Lord.'

⁹ The youths of this idolatrous city joined indignity to the person of one prophet with derision of the ascension of another. Such insolence and impiety imperatively required a public punishment.

Israel an hundred thousand ^slambs, and an hundred thousand rams, with the 5 wool.¹ But it came to pass, when 'Ahab was dead, that the king of Moab rebelled against the king of Israel.
 6 And king Jehoram went out of Samaria the same time, and numbered all 7 Israel. And he went and sent to Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, saying, The king of Moab hath rebelled against me: wilt thou go with me against Moab to battle? And he said, I will go up: "I am as thou art, my people as thy people, 8 and my horses as thy horses. And he said, Which way shall we go up? And 9 he answered, The way through the wilderness of Edom.² So the king of Israel went, and the king of Judah, and the king of Edom: and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey: and there was no water for the host, and for the cattle that followed them.
 10 And the king of Israel said, Alas! that the LORD hath called these three kings 11 together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab! But ^xJehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD, that we may inquire of the LORD by him?
 And one of the king of Israel's servants answered and said, Here is Elisha³ the 12 son of Shaphat, ^ywhich poured water⁴ on the hands of Elijah. And Jehoshaphat said, The word of the LORD is with him. So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat 13 and the king of Edom ^zwent down to him.⁵ And Elisha said unto the king of Israel, "What have I to do with thee? ^bget thee to ^cthe prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Israel said unto him, "Nay:
 for the LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the 14 hand of Moab. And Elisha said, ^eAs the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I

 15 Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee. But now bring me ^fa

 16 LORD came upon him. And he said, Thus saith the LORD, ^hMake this valley 17 full of ditches.⁷ For thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water, ⁱthat ye may drink, both 18 ye, and your cattle, and your beasts. And this is but a light thing in the sight 19 of the LORD: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand. And ye shall smite every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall fell every good tree, and stop all wells of water, and mar every good piece of land with stones.
 20 And it came to pass in the morning, when ^kthe meat offering was offered, that, behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country was filled with 21 water. And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight against them, they gathered all that were able to put on armour, and upward, 22 and stood in the border. And they rose up early in the morning, and the sun shone upon the water, and the Moabites saw the water on the other side *as red*⁸ 23 as blood: and they said, This is blood: the kings are surely slain, and they have 24 smitten one another: now therefore, Moab, to the spoil. And when they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them: but they went forward smiting the Moabites, even in their 25 country. And they beat down the cities, and on every good piece of land cast every man his stone, and filled it; and they ^mstopped all the wells of water, and
 howbeit the slingers went about it, and smote it.

¹ In Eastern countries it is still customary for tribute to be paid in kind.

² If they had attacked Moab from the north, they would have been exposed to the Syrians in the rear, and the Ammonites on the flank. By advancing from the south, through the desert that lay between Mount Seir and the Dead Sea, they would avoid these dangers, and make a junction with the king of Edom.

³ Elisha seems to have accompanied the army, probably in consequence of a Divine intimation.

⁴ That is, 'who waited on Elijah.' The Orientals do not dip their hands in water when washing, but have it poured on them by a servant.

⁵ This passage indicates a difference between Elijah and Elisha as to their character and position. Elijah, like other reformers raised up in times of the deepest depravity, was fitted by his bold and stern bearing to make the proudest quail before him; and appears, for the most part, as a messenger of justice. See 1 Kings xvii. 1; xviii. 40; xxi. 17—24; 2 Kings i. 6, 10, 12. Elisha carries on, by milder means, the work which had been begun. His wonders are chiefly miracles of mercy. Kings are here found reverencing his authority and soliciting his help. While his predecessor was an apt representative of our Lord's forerunner (see Mal. iv. 5), it was Elisha's distinguished honour, in his life, and especially in his miracles, to present a remarkable similarity—attended indeed by an equally remarkable inferiority—to our Lord himself. Comp. ch. iv. 42—44, with Matt. xiv. 15—21.

⁶ The use of music is mentioned, on other occasions, in connection with Divine impulse. See 1 Sam. x. 5, 6, 10, 11.

⁸ This may have been an optical illusion, arising from natural causes, both aiding and aided by their excitement and alarm.

⁹ The same as 'Kir of Moab' (Isa. xv. 1), 'Kir-harash' (Isa. xvi. 11), and 'Kir-heres' (Jer. xlviii. 31); since called Kerek, a strong mountain fortress celebrated in the wars of the Crusaders.

26 And when the king of Moab saw that the battle was too sore for him,¹ he took with him seven hundred men that drew swords, to break through even unto the king of Edom: but they could not. Then ^o he took his eldest son that should have reigned in his stead, and ^p offered² him for a burnt offering upon the wall. And there was great indignation against Israel:³ ^q and they departed from him, and returned to their own land.

Ministry of Elisha; the oil multiplied; the dead child raised; the poison corrected; the multitude fed.

4 NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of ^r the sons⁴ of the prophets unto Elisha, saying, Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the LORD: and the creditor is come ^s to take unto him my two sons to be bondmen:⁵ And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house? And she said, Thine handmaid hath not any thing in the house, save a pot of oil. Then he said, Go, borrow thee vessels abroad of all thy neighbours, even empty vessels; ^t borrow not a few. And when thou art come in, thou shalt shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full. So she went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her; and she poured out. And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed. Then she came and told the man of God. And he said, Go, sell the oil, and pay thy debt [or, creditor], and live thou and thy children of the rest.

8 And it fell on a day, that Elisha passed to "Shunem, where was ^u a great woman;⁶ and she constrained him to eat bread. And so it was, that as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread. And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which passeth by us continually: let us make⁷ a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall; and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool,⁸ and a candlestick:⁹ and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither. And it fell on a day, that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there. And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him. And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? wouldest thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host?¹⁰ And she answered, ^v I dwell¹¹ among mine own people. And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily she hath no child, and her husband is old. And he said, Call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door. And he said, ^z About this season, according to the time of life, thou shalt embrace a son. And she said, ^a Nay, my lord, thou man of God, ^b do not lie unto thine handmaid. And the woman conceived, and bare a son at that season that Elisha had said unto her, according to the time of life.

18 And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers. And he said unto his father, My head, my head. And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother. And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then died. And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out. And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may run to the man of God, and come again. And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is

1 The king of Moab had probably at this time retreated, and shut himself up in his capital, whence he made this unsuccessful sally.

2 Josephus says that this human sacrifice was offered within sight of the allied kings; and that they were so shocked at the spectacle, and moved with pity, as to raise the siege immediately, and retire from the country (Antiq. ix. 3).

3 Or, 'among the Israelites.'

4 See note on 1 Sam. x. 5. An important difference may be observed in the condition of the prophets, in the kingdoms of Judah and Israel. In Judah they are mostly scattered and isolated; but in Israel they have a more compact organization, in which the most distinguished prophets stand forth as spiritual teachers and rulers, having numerous pupils under their inspection and control. This prophetic body in the northern kingdom, like the body of priests in the southern, acted, to some extent, as a counterpoise to the prevalent idolatry, which was far more deeply rooted and widely spread in Israel than in Judah.

5 Or, 'servants.' See Lev. xxv. 39, 40; Isa. l. 1.

6 That is, as in the old translations, 'a rich woman.'

7 Rather, 'prepare,' or 'fit up.'

8 This should be 'chair,' or 'seat.' The Orientals generally sit on the floor, on a mat or carpet; raised seats being marks of distinction or respect. The Hebrew word here used is of frequent occurrence, and is almost always rendered 'throne.'

9 Rather, 'lamp,' or 'lamp-stand.'

10 The king and his general were under great obligations to Elisha (see ch. iii. 17—25); so that he might with propriety ask a favour.

11 The meaning is, I have nothing to look for from persons of such high rank: I belong to the people.

24 neither new moon,¹ nor sabbath. And she said, *It shall be well.*² Then she saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward; slack not thy

c to mount Carmel.⁴

c ch. 2. 25.

And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to 26 Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite: run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband?
27 is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well. And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught him ^eby the feet: but Gehazi came near to thrust her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is vexed within her: and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me.
28 Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? ^fdid I not say, Do not deceive me?
29 Then he said to Gehazi, ^gGird up thy loins, and take my staff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, ^hsalute him not;⁵ and if any salute thee,
30 answer him not again: and ⁱlay my staff upon the face of the child. And the mother of the child said, ^kAs the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not 31 leave thee. And he arose, and followed her. And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but there was neither voice, nor hearing. Wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The 32 child is ^lnot awaked. And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the 33 child was dead, and laid upon his bed. He ^mwent in therefore, and shut the 34 door upon them twain, ⁿand prayed unto the Lord. And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands; and ^ohe stretched himself upon the child; and 35 the flesh of the child waxed warm. Then he returned, and walked in the house to and fro; and went up, ^pand stretched himself upon him: and ^qthe child
36 sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes. And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her. And when she was come in unto

38 And Elisha came again to ^aGilgal: and there was a ^bdearth in the land; and the sons of the prophets ^cwere sitting before him: and he said unto his servant,
39 Set on the great pot, and seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets. And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine,⁶ and gathered thereof wild gourds his lap full, and came and shred them into the pot of pottage:
40 for they knew them not. So they poured out for the men to eat. And it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O thou
41 man of God, there is ^ddeath in the pot. And they could not eat thereof. But he said, Then bring meal. And ^ehe cast it into the pot; and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat. And there was no harm in the pot.
42 And there came a man from ^fBaal-shalisha, ^gand brought the man of God bread of the firstfruits,⁷ twenty loaves of barley, and full ears of corn in the husk thereof [or, in his scrip, or, garment]. And he said, Give unto the people, that 43 they may eat. And his servitor said, ^hWhat, should I set this before an hundred men? He said again, Give the people, that they may eat: for thus saith the 44 LORD, ⁱThey shall eat, and shall leave thereof. So he set it before them, and they did eat, ^jand left thereof, according to the word of the Lord.

Ministry of Elisha; Naaman the leper cured; Gehazi's punishment; the iron made to swim.

5 NOW ^kNaaman, captain of the host of the king of Syria, was ^la great man with his master, and honourable, because ^mby him the Lord had given deliverance [or, victory] unto Syria: he was also a mighty man in valour, but he was a leper.
2 And the Syrians had gone out by companies, and had brought away captive⁸ out
3 of the land of Israel a little maid; and she waited on Naaman's wife. And she ¹ This indicates that it had become a custom to resort to the prophets on Sabbaths and other particular days for instruction, or to join in religious worship.

² The Hebrew is simply 'Peace.' It seems to mean, Do not thwart me; grant my request.

³ Rather, 'Slack not the riding,' i. e. my riding; for the mistress alone rode. In the East, women usually ride on asses, and are attended by a man on foot, who drives.

⁴ A journey of about six hours from Shunem.

⁵ Oriental salutations are proverbially tedious, and incompatible with the prompt execution of important business. See Luke x. 4.

⁶ Literally, 'vine of the field;' so called from its mode of growth. It is supposed to have been the colocynthis-gourd (cucumis colocynthis, or cucumis prophetarum), an acrid plant which abounds in Syria.

⁷ Carrying out the spirit of the law in Deut. xviii. 4, 5; Numb. xviii. 13; and presenting to the prophets what, if circumstances had allowed, would have been brought to the priests.

⁸ This is a suggestive illustration of the social miseries which idolatry had brought upon the Israelites. The subsequent narrative beautifully shows how God can honour an humble sufferer, by making her, through her very calamity, an instrument for displaying his supremacy and goodness.

said unto her mistress, Would God my lord were with the prophet that is in 4 Samaria! for he would recover him of his leprosy. And one went in, and told his lord, saying, Thus and thus said the maid that is of the land of Israel.
 5 And the king of Syria said, Go to, go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel. And he departed, and ^htook with him¹ ten talents of silver, and six 6 thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment. And he brought the letter to the king of Israel, saying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him 7 of his leprosy. And it came to pass, when the king of Israel had read the letter, that he ⁱrent his clothes, and said, Am I ^kGod, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? wherefore consider,
 I pray you, and see how he seeketh a quarrel against me.
 8 And it was so, when Elisha the man of God had heard that the king of Israel had rent his clothes, that he sent to the king, saying, Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet 9 in Israel. So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and stood at 10 the door of the house of Elisha. And Elisha sent a messenger unto him, saying,
 Go and ^lwash² in Jordan ^mseven times, and ⁿthy flesh shall come again to thee, 11 and thou shalt be clean. But Naaman was wroth, and went away, and said, Behold, I thought, he will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and strike his hand over the place, and recover the 12 leper. Are not ^oAbana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned and went 13 away in a rage. And his servants came near, and spake unto him, and said, My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? how much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?
 14 Then went he down,³ and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God: and ^phis flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and ^qhe was clean.
 15 And he returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came, and stood before him: and he said, Behold, now I know that there is ^rno God⁴ in all the earth, but in Israel: now therefore, I pray thee, take ^sa blessing of thy 16 servant. But he said, As the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, ^tI will receive 17 none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused.⁵ And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth?⁶ for thy servant will henceforth offer neither burnt offering nor sacrifice unto other 18 gods, but unto the LORD. In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and ^xhe leaneth on my hand, and I bow myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down myself 19 in the house of Rimmon, the LORD pardon thy servant in this thing.⁷ ^yAnd he said unto him, Go in peace. So he departed from him a little way.
 20 But Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said, Behold, my master hath spared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought: but, as the LORD liveth, I will run after him, and take somewhat of 21 him. So Gehazi followed after Naaman. And when Naaman saw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, Is all well?
 22 And he said, All is well. My master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of ^zthe sons of the prophets: give them, I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.
 23 And Naaman said, Be content, take two talents. And he urged him, and bound two talents of silver in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid them 24 upon two of his servants; and they bare them before him. And when he came

1 Conceiving, no doubt, that his royal recommendation and his valuable presents would insure the exercise of the prophet's power on his behalf. It was therefore necessary that he should be taught that he must receive the boon he desired as God's gift, in God's way.

2 The simplicity of the means prescribed shows that it was merely a sign of the cure, and a trial of his obedience.

3 That is, from Samaria to the Jordan.

4 The mode in which this cure was performed had accomplished its great end, by convincing the heathen warrior of the unapproachable superiority of Jehovah, both in power and in beneficence. God thus uses his providential dispensations to convince men of his supreme glory and excellence, and to lead their hearts to Him.

5 Naaman ought, according to Eastern etiquette, to have offered his presents before he made his request; but the peculiarity of the circumstances had prevented this (see ver. 10): and now Elisha might, without any breach of courtesy, decline receiving them; and it was more for the glory of God that he should do so.

6 It is not easy to say with what particular views Naaman made this request; but in the East, sacred ground is most highly appreciated; and as such Naaman doubtless regarded the land of Israel. We need not wonder at some remains of superstition in one whose religious convictions were so recent, and whose knowledge must have been so limited.

7 Naaman seems to have desired to obtain the prophet's sanction to this act, which he should in future perform only as one of civil service to his king, not of religious worship. The prophet leaves his convictions to work out their own effects.

to the tower [*or, secret place*¹], he took them from their hand, and bestowed them 25 in the house: and he let the men go, and they departed. But he went in, and stood before his master. And Elisha said unto him, Whence comest thou, 26 Gehazi? And he said, Thy servant went no whither. ^a And he said unto him, Went not mine heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee? ^b *Is it a time*² to receive money, and to receive garments, and olive-yards, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and menservants, and maidservants?
 27 The leprosy therefore of Naaman ^c shall cleave unto thee, and unto thy seed for ever. And he went out from his presence ^d a leper as white as snow.

6 And ^e the sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where 2 we dwell with thee is too strait for us. Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam, and let us make us a place there, where we 3 may dwell. And he answered, Go ye. And one said, Be content, I pray thee, 4 and go with thy servants. And he answered, I will go. So he went with them.
 5 And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood. But as one was felling a beam, the axe head fell into the water: and he cried, and said, Alas, master! for 6 it was ^f borrowed. And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he showed him the place. And ^g he cut down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron 7 did swim. Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

Ministry of Elisha; he assists Israel against Syria.

8 THEN ^h the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his 9 servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my camp. And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place;
 10 ⁱ for thither the Syrians are come down. And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice.

11 Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not show me which of us is 12 for the king of Israel? And one of his servants said, None, my lord. O king:
 but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words 13 that thou speakest ^k in thy bedchamber. And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. ^l And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in 'Dothan.

14 Therefore sent he thither horses, and chariots, and a great host: and they 15 came by night, and compassed the city about. And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host compassed the city, both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, Alas, my 16 master! how shall we do? And he answered, Fear not: for ^m they that be with 17 us are more than they that be with them. And Elisha prayed, and said, LORD,
 I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the LORD opened the eyes of 18 the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of ⁿ horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha. And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the LORD, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindness.
 19 And ^o he smote them with blindness according to the word of Elisha. And Elisha said unto him, This is not the way, neither is this the city: follow me, and ^p I will bring you to the man whom ye seek. But he led them to Samaria.
 20 And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, ^q that Elisha said, LORD, ^r open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the LORD opened their eyes, and they saw; and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria.

21 And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, ^s My father, ^t shall 22 I smite them? shall I smite them? And he answered, Thou shalt not smite them: wouldst thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow? ^u ^v set bread and water before them, that they may eat and 23 drink, and go to their master. And he prepared great provision for them: and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. So ^w the bands of Syria came no more ^x into the land of Israel.

¹ The Hebrew word means a height. Some suppose it to be a hill, others a tower.

² This conduct of Gehazi tended to obscure the glory of God's grace, and to compromise the prophet's character for disinterestedness. It is affecting to see one who had been so intimately associated with such a man as Elisha manifesting a spirit so opposite: but the case of Judas is strikingly similar.

³ The king of Syria strangely failed to perceive that the God of Israel could disclose this plan to His prophet as easily as the others, and could as well protect him against it.

⁴ This would show the Syrians that they could effect nothing against a prophet of Jehovah.

⁵ The sense is, If you would spare those whom you had taken prisoners in battle, much more ought you to spare those whom you have not so taken. In a political point of view this treatment of them was eminently wise, as the event showed.

⁶ That is, not for some considerable time.

Ministry of Elisha; siege and distress of Samaria, and its miraculous deliverance.

- 24 AND it came to pass after this, that Ben-hadad king of Syria gathered all 25 his host, and went up, and besieged Samaria. And there was a great famine in Samaria: and, behold, they besieged it, until an ass's head¹ was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of dove's dung² for five pieces 26 of silver. And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the wall, there cried a 27 woman unto him, saying, Help, my lord, O king. And he said, If the LORD do not help thee, whence shall I help thee? out of the barnfloor, or out of the wine-28 press? And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him to-day, and we 29 will eat my son to-morrow. So ^x we boiled³ my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him: and ^y she 30 hath hid her son. And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he ^z rent his clothes; and he passed by upon the wall, and the 31 people looked, and behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh. Then he said,
 "God do so and more also to me, if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphat shall stand on him this day."⁴ 32 But Elisha sat in his house, and ^b the elders sat with him; and the king sent a man from before him: but ere the messenger came to him, he said to the elders,
 "See ye how this son of ^a a murderer hath sent to take away mine head? look, when the messenger cometh, shut the door, and hold him fast at the door: is not 33 the sound of his master's feet behind him?"⁵ And while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger came down unto him. And he said, Behold, ^c this evil is of the LORD; ^d what should I wait for the LORD any longer?
 7 Then Elisha said, Hear ye the word of the LORD; Thus saith the LORD, ^e Tomorrow about this time shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two 2 measures of barley for a shekel,⁶ in the gate⁷ of Samaria. ^h Then a lord on whose hand the king leaned answered the man of God, and said, Behold, ⁱ if the LORD would make windows in heaven, might this thing be? And he said, Behold, ^k thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof.
 3 And there were four leprous⁸ men ^l at the entering in of the gate: and they said
 4 one to another, Why sit we here until we die? ^m If we say, We will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there: and if we sit still here, we die also. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the host of the 5 Syrians: if they save us alive, we shall live; and if they kill us, we shall but die. And they rose up in the twilight, to go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria, behold, there 6 was no man there. For the LORD had made the host of the Syrians ⁿ to hear a noise of chariots,⁹ and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us ^o the kings of 7 the Hittites,¹⁰ and the kings of the Egyptians,¹¹ to come upon us. Wherefore they ^p arose and fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life.
 8 And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment,

¹ Some critics give a different sense to these words, principally on the ground that the ass was an unclean animal: but the utter destitution of other means of supporting life would overcome any objection of this kind. Plutarch mentions a similar instance of an extravagant price being paid for this same article by the soldiers of Artaxerxes.

² That such revolting food has been resorted to in famine may be seen in Josephus's 'Wars of the Jews,' v. 13, 7. But the meaning of the words is very doubtful. Bochart says that the Arabs give this name to a kind of pulse or pea, which was very common in Judea, and which was preserved by being parched and dried. Linnaeus supposes that it was a plant called the Star of Bethlehem.

⁴ Because it was thought that he had brought this calamity on, or that he did not exercise his power to remove it.

⁵ The language of Elisha makes it appear probable that the king followed close upon his messenger; and that the unbelieving and reproachful interrogation in the next verse was addressed by him to the prophet, to which the words of Elisha in the first verse of ch. vii. are the direct answer.

⁶ That is, about a peck of fine flour for half-a-crown, and two pecks of barley for the same.

⁷ The markets for country produce are held at the gates of Eastern towns.

⁸ Whether lepers were excluded by law from the cities and towns, as they had been from the camp during the journeys in the wilderness (Lev. xiii. 46), cannot be stated with certainty; but, if not, they were probably the objects of such aversion that they preferred associating together, as these men did, outside the gate. At the present day, lepers dwell at Jerusalem near the gate of Zion, in hovels not much better than dog-kennels.

⁹ By what means this was done is not stated, nor is it important. It is enough to know that God caused it.

¹⁰ See note on 1 Kings x. 29.

¹¹ This name is used to designate the nations south of Palestine, of whom the Egyptians were the most distinguished.

and went and hid it; and came again, and entered into another tent, and carried 9 thence also, and went and hid it. Then they said one to another, We do not well: this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, some mischief will come upon us: now therefore come, that 10 we may go and tell the king's household. So they came and called unto the porter of the city: and they told them, saying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, there was no man there, neither voice of man, but horses 11 tied, and asses tied, and the tents as they were. And he called the porters; and they told it to the king's house within.

12 And the king arose in the night, and said unto his servants, I will now show you what the Syrians have done to us. They know ^q that we be hungry; therefore are they gone out of the camp ^r to hide themselves in the field, saying, When 13 they come out of the city, we shall catch them alive, and get into the city. And one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left in the city, (behold, they are as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it: behold, ¹ I say, they are even as all the 14 multitude of the Israelites that are consumed:) and let us send and see. They took therefore two chariot horses; and the king sent after the host of the Syrians, 15 saying, Go and see. And they went after them unto Jordan: and, lo, all the way was full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their haste. And the messengers returned, and told the king.

16 And the people went out, and spoiled the tents of the Syrians. So a measure of fine flour was sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, 17 ^s according to the word of the LORD. And the king appointed the lord on whose hand he leaned to have the charge of the gate: ² and the people trode upon him in the gate, ³ and he died, 'as the man of God had said, who spake when the king 18 came down to him. And it came to pass as the man of God had spoken to the king, saying, "Two measures of barley for a shekel, and a measure of fine flour 19 for a shekel, shall be to-morrow about this time in the gate of Samaria: and that lord answered the man of God, and said, Now, behold, if the LORD should make windows in heaven, might such a thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see 20 it with thine eyes: but shalt not eat thereof. And ^x so it fell out unto him: for the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died. ⁴

Ministry of Elisha; the Shunammite and her land; Ben-hadad and Hazael.

8 THEN ⁵ spake Elisha unto the woman ^y whose son he had restored to life, saying, Arise, and go thou and thine household, and sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn: for the LORD ^z hath called for a famine; and it shall also come 2 upon the land seven years. And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God: and she went with her household, and sojourned in the land of the 3 Philistines ⁶ seven years. And it came to pass at the seven years' end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and she went forth to cry 4 unto the king for her house and for her land. And the king talked with ^a Gehazi the servant of the man of God, saying, ^b Tell me, I pray thee, all the great things 5 that Elisha hath done. And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how he had ^c restored a dead body to life, that, behold, the woman whose son he had restored to life cried to the king for her house and for her land. And Gehazi said, My lord, O king, this is the woman, and this is her son whom Elisha 6 restored to life. And when the king asked the woman, she told him. So the king appointed unto her a certain officer, saying, ^d Restore all that was her's, and all the fruits of the field since the day that she left the land, even until now.

¹ There is evidently a clause repeated here, which is omitted in several Hebrews manuscripts and ancient versions. The whole parenthesis should probably be read thus: 'for, behold! they only of all the multitude which were in Israel remained unconsumed.'

² Holding this post, he seemed less likely than others to lose the benefit of the promised plenty.

³ In their eagerness to reach the Syrian camp and share in its spoils.

⁴ Disbelief of God's word is a sin of heinous guilt and of awful consequences. It not only entails the loss of promised blessings, but it also brings down threatened punishments; for the promises and threatenings of God are here shown to be equally certain of accomplishment.

⁵ Rather, 'And.' It is probable that Elisha said this before the events related in the two preceding chapters, and that it is mentioned here in consequence of what occurred upon the woman's return, after the restoration of plenty. From the mention of Gehazi in ver. 4, some expositors have inferred that these events occurred before the cure of Naaman. See ch. v. 27.

⁶ If the famine were caused by drought, the lowlands near the sea were less likely to suffer from it than the mountainous districts, and they might also obtain supplies by sea. If it were occasioned or aggravated by Syrian invasion, the Philistines in the south might be exempt.

unto ^e Hazael, ^f Take a present in thine hand, and go, meet the man of God, and 9 ^g inquire of the LORD by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease? So Hazael went to meet him, and took a present with him, even of every good thing of Damascus, forty camels' burden,¹ and came and stood before him, and said, ^h Thy son Ben-hadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this 10 disease? And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest certainly 11 recover:² howbeit ⁱ the LORD hath showed me that ^k he shall surely die. And he settled his countenance stedfastly, until he was ashamed: and the man of God 12 ^l wept. And Hazael said, Why weepeth my lord? And he answered, Because I know ^m the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strongholds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and 13 ⁿ wilt dash their children, and rip up their women with child. And Hazael said, But what, ^o is thy servant a dog,³ that he should do this great thing? And Elisha answered, ^p The LORD hath showed me that thou shalt be king over Syria.
 14 So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master; who said to him, What said
 Elisha to thee? And he answered, ^q He told me that thou shouldst surely recover.
 15 And it came to pass ^r on the morrow, that he took a thick cloth, and dipped it in Reigns of Jehoram and Ahaziah in Judah.

16 AND in the fifth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel, Jehoshaphat⁴ being then king of Judah, ^s Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah began to 17 reign. ^t Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned 18 eight years in Jerusalem. And he walked ^u in the way of the kings of Israel, as did the house of Ahab: for ^v the daughter of Ahab was his wife: and he did evil 19 in the sight of the LORD. Yet the LORD would not destroy Judah for David his servant's sake, ^w as he promised him to give him alway a light, and to his children.
 20 In his days ^x Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah, ^y and made a king 21 over themselves. So Joram went over to Zair, and all the chariots with him: and he rose by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him about, and 22 the captains of the chariots: and the people fled into their tents. ^z Yet Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah⁵ unto this day. ^a Then Libnah⁶ revolted at the same time.
 23 And the rest of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, are they not written in 24 the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? ^b And Joram slept with his

 25 In the twelfth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel did ^d Ahaziah the LORD, as did the house of Ahab: for ⁱ he was the son-in-law of the house of Ahab.

 28 And he went ^j with Joram the son of Ahab to the war against Hazael king of 29 Syria in Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians wounded Joram. And ^k king Joram went back to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him at ^l Ramah, when he fought against Hazael king of Syria. ^m And Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Joram the son of Ahab in Jezreel, because he was sick [or, wounded].

1 A camel's burden would probably be from 300 to 600 lbs.: but in such a case the number of camels carrying the articles would be unnecessarily increased, both to display the king's wealth and to honour the prophet.

2 Some render, 'Go, say, Thou shalt not live; for the Lord hath showed me,' etc. But the translation in the text is supported by the best authorities. It means, that his disease was not mortal, and would not be the cause of his death; but that nevertheless he would die.

3 This expression has often been interpreted as an outbreak of indignant horror at being thought capable of such atrocities. But, considering the character and conduct of Hazael, and the spirit of the warfare of that age, it is more natural to understand the exclamation as the language of assumed or of real self-depreciation, and as expressing a doubt whether a person so inconsiderable as he was could ever have it in his power to do such a great (as he himself calls it, not such an evil) thing. The Hebrew text stands thus: 'But what! thy servant! the dog! (Sept., this dead dog!) that he should do this great work!' The prophet's answer is plainly calculated to meet this expression of surprise: 'Thou shalt be king.'

4 The clause, 'Jehoshaphat being then king of Judah,' is not found in several ancient manuscripts and versions, and appears inconsistent with 2 Chron. xxi. 1, 5.

5 Although this revolt of the Edomites was temporarily suppressed, it appears that the dominion of Judah over Edom was never completely restored. Thus was fulfilled the second part of Isaac's prediction respecting Esau in Gen. xxvii. 40. The loss of Edom must have greatly affected the commercial interests of the country, as putting a stop to all Indian voyages from Ezion-geber.

6 Libnah was one of the priests' cities (see Josh. xxi. 13); and its revolt was probably caused by the introduction of the worship of Baal (see 2 Chron. xxi. 10).

7 The intermarriage of the two families had the effect of greatly aggravating the wickedness of Judah, so that it resembled that of Israel in its worst form, even to the degree of Ahab's, which was more atrocious than Jeroboam's.

Jehu is anointed; slays the kings of Israel and Judah, and the worshippers of Baal; and reigns over Israel.

- 9 AND Elisha the prophet¹ called one of ² the children of the prophets, and said unto him, ³ Gird up thy loins, and take this box of oil in thine hand, ⁴ and go to Ramoth-gilead: and when thou comest thither, look out there Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him arise up from among his brethren, and carry him to an inner chamber; then ⁵ take the box of oil, and pour it on his head, and say, Thus saith the LORD, I have anointed thee king over Israel. Then open the door, and flee, and tarry not. So the young man, even the young man the prophet, went to Ramoth-gilead.
- 6 And when he came, behold, the captains of the host were sitting; and he said, I have an errand to thee, O captain. And Jehu said, Unto which of all us? And he said, To thee, O captain. And he arose, and went into the house; and he poured the oil on his head, and said unto him, "Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I have anointed thee king over ⁷ the people of the LORD, even over Israel.
- 8 And thou shalt smite the house of Ahab thy master, ⁸ that I may avenge the blood of my servants the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the LORD ⁹ at the hand of Jezebel. For the whole house of Ahab shall perish: and ¹⁰ I will cut off from Ahab ¹¹ him that pisseth against the wall, and ¹² him that is shut up and left in Israel: and I will make the house of Ahab like the house of ¹³ Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of ¹⁴ Baasha the son of Ahijah: ¹⁵ and the dogs shall eat Jezebel in the portion of Jezreel, and there shall be none to bury her. And he opened the door, and fled.
- 16 Then Jehu came forth to the servants of his lord: and one said unto him, Is all well? wherefore came ¹⁷ this mad fellow to thee? And he said unto them, Ye know the man, and his communication. And they said, It is false; ¹⁸ tell us now. And he said, Thus and thus spake he to me, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I have anointed thee king over Israel. Then they hastened, and ¹⁹ took every man his garment, ²⁰ and put it under him on the top of the stairs, and ²¹ blew with trumpets, saying, Jehu is king! So Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat the son of Nimshi conspired against Joram. (Now Joram had kept Ramoth-gilead, he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria. But ²² king ²³ Joram was returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria.)
- And Jehu said, If it be your minds, then let none go forth nor escape out of the city to go to tell it in Jezreel. So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel: for Joram lay there. ²⁴ And Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram. ²⁵ And there stood a watchman on the tower²⁶ in Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take an horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, Is it peace? So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu said, What hast thou to do with peace? ²⁷ turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again. Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and the driving [or, marching] is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; for he driveth furiously. And Joram said, Make ready. And his chariot was made ready. And ²⁸ Joram king of Israel and Ahaziah king of Judah went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and met him in the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite.
- 29 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, What peace, so long as ³⁰ the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel and her witchcrafts³¹ are so many? And Joram turned his hands, ³² and fled, and said

¹ Elijah had been commissioned, about twelve years before, to anoint Jehu to reign over Israel and to execute vengeance on the family and adherents of Ahab; but, upon Ahab's humiliation, a respite had been granted, and the commission was now given to Elisha, as Elijah's successor; who fulfilled it by deputy, probably either on account of his advanced age, or because he was too well known to be employed in an affair requiring secrecy.

² The word generally translated 'sons.'

³ To give the lie is not at all so offensive to Orientals as it is to us.

⁴ It is an ancient custom to honour royal and other illustrious personages by covering the ground over which they have to pass. If there was no time for preparation, the robes and mantles of the persons present were used for this purpose. See Matt. xxi. 8.

⁵ Neither Ahaziah nor Joram knew anything of what had taken place at Ramoth-gilead, because Jehu and his captains had not allowed any one to leave the city.

⁶ Probably a gate-tower to the palace of Jezreel.

⁷ That is, 'What matters it to thee whether there be peace or war?'

⁸ These expressions seem to refer to the licentious and superstitious practices which were connected with the idolatries which Jezebel had patronized.

⁹ That is, 'his reins,' so turning his chariot round.

- 24 to Ahaziah, There is treachery, O Ahaziah. And Jehu drew a bow with his full strength, and smote Jehoram between his arms,¹ and the arrow went out at his heart, and he sunk down in his chariot. Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezreelite: for remember how that, when I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, ^p the LORD laid this burden upon him; Surely I have seen yesterday the blood of Naboth, and the blood of his sons, saith the LORD; and ^q I will requite thee in this plat [or, portion], saith the LORD. Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, according to the word of the LORD.
- 27 But when Ahaziah the king of Judah saw this, he fled by the way of the garden house. And Jehu followed after him, and said, Smite him also in the chariot. And they did so at the going up to Gur, which is by Ibleam. And he fled to ^r Megiddo, and died there.² And his servants carried him in a chariot to Jerusalem, and buried him in his sepulchre with his fathers in the city of David.
- 29 And in the eleventh year of Joram the son of Ahab began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.
- 30 And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, Jezebel heard of it; ^s and she painted³ her face, and tired her head, and looked out at a window. And as Jehu entered in at the gate, she said, *'Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?'*⁴ And he lifted up his face to the window, and said, Who is on my side? who? And there looked out to him two or three eunuchs [or, chamberlains]. And he said, Throw her down. So they threw her down: and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and on the horses: and he trode her under foot.⁵ And when he was come in, he did eat and drink, and said, Go, see now this cursed woman, and bury her: for 'she is a king's daughter. And they went to bury her: but they found no more of her than the skull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands.⁶ Wherefore they came again, and told him. And he said, This is the word of the LORD, which he spake by his servant Elijah the Tishbite, saying, ^t In the portion of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel: and the carcase of Jezebel shall be ^u as dung upon the face of the field in the portion of Jezreel; so that they shall not say, This is Jezebel.
- 10 And Ahab had seventy sons⁷ in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto the rulers of Jezreel,⁸ to the elders, and to them that brought up Ahab's children, saying, Now as soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour; look even out the best and meetest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and fight for your master's house. But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, Behold, ^v two kings stood not before him: how then shall we stand? And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, ^w We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes.
- 6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be mine [Heb. for me], and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up. And it came to pass, when the letter came to them, that they took the king's sons, and ^b slew seventy persons, and put their heads in baskets, and sent him them to Jezreel. And there came a messenger, and told him, saying, They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said, Lay ye them in two heaps at the entering in of the gate ^c until the morning. And it came to pass in the morning, that he went out, and stood, and said to all the people, Ye be righteous: behold, ^d I conspired against my master, and slew him: but who slew all these?⁹ Know now that there shall ^e fall unto the earth nothing of the word of the LORD, which the LORD spake concerning the house of Ahab: for the LORD hath done that which he spake ^f by his servant Elijah. So Jehu slew all that

It is a common custom among Eastern women to tinge the edges of the eyelids with a black metallic powder, which is supposed to strengthen the eyes and to heighten their expression.⁴ Zimri was incited merely by his own ambition and cruelty; whereas Jehu did this by an order from Heaven.⁵ That is, by driving over her corpse.⁶ In India, where the bodies of pilgrims are sometimes devoured by dogs and vultures, it is observed that these are the only parts which are left unconsumed.⁷ The term 'sons' is often used to include all male descendants.⁸ The Septuagint has, 'to the rulers of Samaria.' Other ancient versions have, 'the rulers of the city.'⁹ Jehu had sent his orders secretly. This speech seems intended to reconcile the people to what had been done, as being in accordance with the well-known will of God.

- 12 And he arose and departed, and came to Samaria. And as he was at the

- 14 the queen. And he said, Take them alive. And they took them alive, and slew them at the pit³ of the shearing house, even two and forty men; neither left he any of them.
- 15 And when he was departed thence, he lighted on ^hJehonadab the son of Rechab⁴ coming to meet him: and he saluted him, and said to him, Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart? And Jehonadab answered, It is. If it be, ^hgive me thine hand.⁵ And he gave him his hand; and he took him up to

- 17 And when he came to Samaria, ^mhe slew all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had destroyed him, according to the saying of the LORD, ⁿwhich he spake to Elijah.
- 18 And Jehu gathered all the people together, and said unto them, ^oAhab served Baal a little; but Jehu shall serve him much. Now therefore call unto me all the ^pprophets of Baal, all his servants, and all his priests; let none be wanting: for I have a great sacrifice to do to Baal; whosoever shall be wanting, he shall not live. But Jehu did it in subtilty, to the intent that he might destroy the

And when they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt offerings, Jehu appointed fourscore men without, and said, If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, ^rhis life shall be for the life of him.
- 25 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt offering, that Jehu said to the guard and to the captains, Go in, and slay them; let none come forth. And they smote them with the edge of the sword; and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city of the house of Baal;

1 The Septuagint and Eusebius take this to be the name of a town, Beth-eked.

2 So expeditiously had Jehu executed his measures, that even the relatives of the two kings who had been slain had not heard of their death. All the sons of Jehoram, the father of Ahaziah, had been slain by the Arabians (see 2 Chron. xxi. 17); but these persons were probably nephews, who, as belonging to the family of Ahab, fell within Jehu's commission.

3 Rather, 'cistern': a receptacle for rain-water.

4 The Rechabites were a branch of the Kenites (see 1 Chron. ii. 55), to whom Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, belonged. See Judg. iv. 11; Jer. xxxv.

5 As a pledge of amity and co-operation. Jehu was evidently glad to have the support of a man of such character and influence; and Jehonadab probably hoped to engage Jehu to restore the pure worship of Jehovah.

6 Jehu was one of a large class of men, who are willing to serve God so far as they think to be consistent with their own temporal interests, and, by their ostentatious zeal in what they do, blind their own eyes and those of others to their disobedience to commands which do not agree with their policy or inclination (see vers. 28, 29). God sometimes sees fit to use such persons for his purposes, though they have not his approbation, and obtain from him no lasting good.

7 This order would excite no suspicion, as it seemed to indicate the greatest zeal for the worship of Baal.

was twenty and eight years.

Athaliah's usurpation in Judah; preservation of Jehoash and his installation as king.

11 AND when ^c Athaliah ^d the mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she 2 arose and destroyed all the seed royal.² But ^e Jehosheba, the daughter of king
^f Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash [or, Jehoash^g] the son of Ahaziah, and stole

4 And ⁱ the seventh year Jehoiada⁴ sent and fetched the rulers over hundreds, with the captains and the guard, and brought them to him into the house of the LORD, and made a covenant with them, and took an oath of them in the house of 5 the LORD, and showed them the king's son. And he commanded them, saying,
This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you that enter in ^k on the 6 sabbath shall even be keepers of the watch of the king's house; and a third part

9 And the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest commanded. And they took every man his men that were to come in 10 Jehoiada the priest. And to the captains over hundreds did the priest give commanded the captains of the hundreds, the officers of the host, and said unto them, Have her forth without the ranges: and him that followeth her kill with the sword. For the priest had said, Let her not be slain in the house of the ¹ At this time, probably, Hazael inflicted the cruelties predicted by Elisha in ch. viii. 12, 13. The territory now lost comprised nearly half of the kingdom. It was afterwards recovered by Jehoash and Jeroboam II. See ch. xiii. 25; xiv. 25.

² Athaliah determined to seize the royal power; and her daring measures unwittingly fulfilled a part of the sentence (see ch. ix. 8) against the house of Ahab which Jehu could not execute; for through her the taint of Ahab's blood had been given to the house of David.

⁵ That is, within the ranks of the guards set outside the temple.

⁶ The priests had been divided by David into courses, which attended at the temple by turns. Upon this occasion those whose weekly term of service was ended were retained, in addition to those whose week of duty was beginning. So that two courses of priests, singers, and porters were in the court of the temple together. See 2 Chron. xxiii. 8.

⁷ This word is interpreted by some as meaning ornaments—part of the regalia; but everywhere else it means the book of the law, a copy of which the high priest now presented to the young king as the rule of his life and government, agreeably to the command in Deut. xvii. 18.

⁸ Literally, 'Let the king live.'

⁹ Frequent references are made to such a position as occupied on solemn occasions by the kings. This was perhaps the brazen stage or gallery erected by Solomon, mentioned at the dedication of the temple (2 Chron. vi. 13).

¹⁰ Probably the Horse-gate, on the eastern side of the city (Jer. xxxi. 40).

Reign of Jehoash in Judah.

12 ^aSEVEN years old was ^bJehoash when he began to reign. In the seventh year of Jehu ^cJehoash began to reign; and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Zibiah of Beer-sheba. And Jehoash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all his days wherein Jehoiada the 3 priest instructed him. But ^dthe high places were not taken away: the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 And Jehoash said to the priests, 'All the money of the dedicated things that is brought into the house of the LORD, even ^fthe money² of every one that passeth the account, the money that every man is set at, ^gand all the money that 5 ^hcometh into any man's heart to bring into the house of the LORD, let the priests take it to them, every man of his acquaintance: and let them repair the breaches of the house,³ wheresoever any breach shall be found.

6 But it was so, that in the three and twentieth year of king Jehoash ⁱthe priests
7 had not repaired the breaches of the house.⁴ ^kThen king Jehoash called for Jehoiada the priest, and the other priests, and said unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the house? now therefore receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house.

8 And the priests consented to receive no more money of the people, neither to 9 repair the breaches of the house. But Jehoiada the priest took ^la chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the LORD: and the priests that kept the door put therein all the money that was brought into the house of the LORD.

10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that the king's scribe [or, secretary] and the high priest came up, and they put up in 11 bags,⁵ and told the money that was found in the house of the LORD. And they gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that had the oversight of the house of the LORD: and they laid it out to the carpenters 12 and builders, that wrought upon the house of the LORD, and to masons, and bowers of stone, and to buy timber and hewed stone to repair the breaches of the house of the LORD, and for all that was laid out for the house to repair it.
13 Howbeit ^mthere were not made for the house of the LORD bowls of silver, snuffers, basins, trumpets, any vessels of gold, or vessels of silver, of the money that was

1 As the people had, under the preceding kings, openly forsaken Jehovah and worshipped Baal, it was necessary publicly to renew the covenant they had violated.

2 Three kinds of dedicated money are here mentioned; namely, 1, the half-shekel paid by every one who 'passed over,' i. e. was numbered among the people; 2, the redemption money for dedicated persons or things (Lev. xxvii. 2); and, 3, the free-will offerings.

3 The temple had suffered, not only from neglect, but still more from injuries maliciously committed by the sons of Athaliah, who had pillaged it to enrich the temple of Baal (see 2 Chron. xxiv. 7). This holy place had been the asylum and nursery of Joash in his childhood; and, in grateful remembrance, he was now zealous for its maintenance and honour.

4 The income which had been ordained for this purpose had been retained by the priests and Levites for themselves.

5 It is still the custom in the East to put a certain sum in a bag, which is then sealed and labelled, and passes current for the amount specified in the label; and the person whose seal it bears is bound to make good any deficiency that may be found on opening it, unless it can be proved that violence has been used with the bag or seal.

6 That is to say, all the money thus collected was spent in substantial repairs of the edifice; none of it was applied to providing vessels for the temple service.

7 This was the first appearance of the Syrian power in the southern kingdom. This invasion occurred long after the events related in the preceding part of this chapter; and during the interval, the king, with his people, had revolted from God, and he had even murdered his cousin, the son of Jehoiada, for his faithful reproofs. See 2 Chron. xxiv. 18—24, and note on ver. 22.

Reigns of Jehoahaz and Jehoash in Israel; Jehoash's visit to Elisha; the prophet's death.

13 IN the three and twentieth year¹ of Joash the son of Ahaziah king of Judah, Jehoahaz the son of Jehu began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned
2 seventeen years. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, ^zand followed the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he

4 hand of ^dBen-hadad the son of Hazael, all their days.² And Jehoahaz ^ebesought the LORD, and the LORD hearkened unto him: for ^fhe saw the oppression of 5 Israel, because the king of Syria oppressed them. (^gAnd the LORD gave Israel a saviour,³ so that they went out from under the hand of the Syrians: and the 6 children of Israel dwelt in their tents,⁴ as beforetime. Nevertheless they ² This should be rendered 'continually,' as in 1 Sam. xviii. 29 and elsewhere; for Ben-hadad was conquered by Joash.

³ The Septuagint reads 'salvation.' It may refer either to the victories of Joash (ver. 25), or to the invasion of Syria by the Assyrians, which caused the invading army to withdraw from Israel.

⁴ The fear of hostile inroads had driven the country-people to live in the walled towns, as the inhabitants of Palestine are now compelled to do for fear of the Bedouin Arabs.

⁵ In the prospect of Elisha's departure, the king's conscience was aroused. Hence this visit, and this salutation

⁸ It was an ancient custom to shoot an arrow or cast a spear into a country, before the commencement of hostilities.

⁹ After Elisha's encouraging assurance (ver. 17), Joash could not be ignorant of the meaning of the symbol; and his conduct showed his want of faith and perseverance to make the most of the promised advantage.

Reign of Amaziah in Judah; renewed hostilities between the two kingdoms.

14 IN ^a the second year of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel reigned ^b Amaziah
2 the son of Joash king of Judah. He was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's 3 name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem. And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD; yet not like David his father: he did according to all things as 4 Joash his father did. ^c Howbeit the high places were not taken away: as yet the 5 people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places. And it came to pass, as soon as the kingdom was confirmed in his hand, that he slew his servants ^d which
6 had slain the king his father. But the children of the murderers he slew not; according unto that which is written in the book of the law of Moses, wherein the LORD commanded, saying, ^e The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, nor the children be put to death for the fathers; ^f but every man shall 7 be put to death for his own sin. ^g He slew of Edom in ^h the Valley of Salt⁵ ten thousand, and took Selah⁶ by war, ⁱ and called the name of it Joktheel⁷ unto this day.
8 ^j Then Amaziah sent messengers to Jehoash, the son of Jehoahaz son of Jehu,
9 king of Israel, saying, Come, let us look one another in the face.⁸ And Jehoash the king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, ^k The thistle⁹ that was in Lebanon sent to the ^l cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode

² This was the last manifestation of the power of God through his prophet, foreshadowing Him by whose death we live. Elisha, like his predecessor, was a prophet 'mighty in word and deed.' Whilst many other prophets were qualified to instruct the world by their writings, these two great men were enabled by their miraculous deeds to exert a most powerful influence, not only in their own age and country, but wherever the inspired record of their lives should come.

10). See also Jer. xlix. 16; Obadiah, ver. 3. Its very remarkable ruins are still to be seen in a valley near Mount Hor, called Wady Mousa, or the Valley of Moses.

⁷ Which means, 'subdued by God.' This name was retained as long as the place remained under the dominion of the kings of Judah.

⁸ Amaziah's challenge appears to have been prompted partly by revenge for the outrages committed by the Israelitish soldiers whom he had dismissed (see 2 Chron. xxv. 13), and partly by the elation consequent upon his victory over Edom; and he was given up to his pride and folly as a punishment for embracing idolatry. See 2 Chron. xxv. 14—20. Amaziah probably hoped to bring all Israel again under the rule of the house of David.

⁹ Rather, 'thorn;' as the word is rendered in 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11; Prov. xxvi. 9.

¹⁰ Probably as pledges of Amaziah's good conduct, instead of taking him prisoner.

15 " Now the rest of the acts of Jehoash which he did, and his might, and how he fought with Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the 16 chronicles of the kings of Israel? And Jehoash slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel; and Jeroboam his son reigned in his stead.
17 " And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Jehoash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years. And the rest of the acts of Amaziah, 18 are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? Now 19 ^y they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem: and he fled to ^z Lachish; but 20 they sent after him to Lachish, and slew him there. And they brought him on horses: and he was buried at Jerusalem with his fathers in the city of David.
21 And all the people of Judah took ^a Azariah, which was sixteen¹ years old, and 22 made him king instead of his father Amaziah. He built² ^b Elath, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

Reign of Jeroboam II. in Israel.

23 IN the fifteenth year of Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah, Jeroboam³ the son of Joash king of Israel began to reign in Samaria, and reigned forty and one 24 years. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed
25 not ^c from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. He restored the coast of Israel ^d from the entering of Hamath⁴ unto ^e the sea of the plain, according to the word of the LORD God of Israel, which he spake by the hand of his servant ^f Jonah⁵ the son of Amittai, the prophet, which was of ^g Gathhepher. For the LORD ^h saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter: for 26 ⁱ there was not any shut up, nor any left, nor any helper for Israel. ^k And the LORD said not that he would ^l blot out the name of Israel from under heaven: but he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam the son of Joash.
28 Now the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, and all that he did, and his might, how he warred, and how he recovered Damascus, and Hamath, ^m which belonged to Judah, for Israel, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the 29 kings of Israel? And Jeroboam slept with his fathers, even with the kings of Israel; and Zachariah his son reigned in his stead.

Reign of Azariah in Judah.

15 IN the twenty and seventh year of Jeroboam king of Israel ⁿ began ^o Azariah son of Amaziah king of Judah to reign. Sixteen years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem. And his mother's 3 name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem. And he did that which was right in the sight
4 of the LORD, according to all that his father Amaziah had done; ^p save that the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places.
5 And the LORD ^q smote the king, so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and ^r dwelt in a several house.⁶ And Jotham the king's son was over the house, ^s judging the people of the land.
6 And the rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are they not written in 7 the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? So Azariah slept with his fathers; and ^t they buried him with his fathers⁷ in the city of David: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

Reigns of Zachariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, and Pekah in Israel; Assyrian invasions.

8 IN the thirty and eighth year of Azariah king of Judah did Zachariah the son of Jeroboam reign over Israel in Samaria six months. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, ^u as his fathers had done: he departed not from 10 the sons of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. And Shallum the son of Jabesh conspired against him, and ^x smote him before the people, and slew him, and reigned in his stead.⁸

² That is, according to the usual meaning of this term, he repaired and fortified it; for it had been built before.

³ The reign of Jeroboam II. was the longest, and outwardly the most prosperous, of any of the kings of Israel. Before its close, the prophets Hosea and Amos were sent to the people of Israel (see Hos. i. 1; Amos i. 1; vii. 10); reproving them for their many heinous sins, especially their idolatry; warning them of the folly of relying upon foreign help; and foretelling their overthrow and captivity by the Assyrians, if they persisted in their wickedness; yet inviting them to repentance by offers of mercy, connected with rich evangelical predictions and promises.

⁴ Which had belonged to Israel in the time of David and Solomon.

⁶ Some render this, 'a house of debility,' i. e. a hospital. But it more probably means 'secluded.' The Jewish writers conclude that this was outside the city, according to the law. The cause of this infliction is stated in 2 Chron. xxvi. 16-20. Jotham his son seems to have acted as regent from the commencement of his father's leprosy to his death.

⁷ In the parallel passage (2 Chron. xxvi. 23) it is said more exactly, he 'was buried in the field of the burial;' probably in a place apart from the royal sepulchres.

⁸ The whole of this period is marked by great convul-

- 11 And the rest of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of 12 the chronicles of the kings of Israel. This was ^y the word of the LORD which he spake unto Jehu, saying, ^z Thy sons shall sit on the throne of Israel unto the fourth generation. ^a And so it came to pass.
- 13 Shallum the son of Jabesh began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of 14 ^b Uzziah king of Judah; and he reigned a full month in Samaria. For Menahem ¹ the son of Gadi went up from ^c Tirzah, and came to Samaria, and smote Shallum the son of Jabesh in Samaria, and slew him, and reigned in his stead.
- 15 And the rest of the acts of Shallum, and his conspiracy which he made, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.
- 16 Then Menahem smote ^d Tiphseh, and all that were therein, and the coasts thereof from Tirzah: because they opened not to him, therefore he smote it; and all ^e the women therein that were with child he ripped up.
- 17 In the nine and thirtieth year of Azariah king of Judah began Menahem the 18 son of Gadi to reign over Israel, and reigned ten years in Samaria. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not all his days from 19 the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. And ^f Pul the king of Assyria ² came against the land: and Menahem gave Pul ³ a thousand talents of silver, that his hand might be with him to ^g confirm the kingdom in 20 his hand. And Menahem ^h exacted the money of Israel, even of all the mighty ⁴ men of wealth, of each man fifty shekels of silver, to give to the king of Assyria.
 So the king of Assyria turned back, and stayed not there in the land.
- 21 And the rest of the acts of Menahem, and all that he did, are they not written 22 in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel? And Menahem slept with his fathers; and Pekahiah his son reigned in his stead.
- 23 In the fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, Pekahiah the son of Menahem 24 began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned two years. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of 25 Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. But Pekah the son of Remaliah, a captain of his, ^h conspired against him, and smote him in Samaria, the palace of the king's house, with Argob and Arich, and with him fifty men of the Gileadites: ⁵ and he killed him, and reigned in his room.
- 26 And the rest of the acts of Pekahiah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.
- 27 In the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah ⁱ Pekah the son of 28 Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned twenty years. And he did that which was ^m evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.
- 29 In the days of Pekah king of Israel ⁿ came Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and took ^o Ijon, and Abel-beth-maachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, ⁶ and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and ^p carried them captive to Assyria. ⁷
- 30 And Hoshea the son of Elah ^q made a conspiracy against Pekah the son of Remaliah, and smote him, and slew him, and ^r reigned in his stead, ⁸ in the twentieth year of Jotham the son of Uzziah.

sions: kings suddenly raised to the throne, and as suddenly dethroned. The state of the nation here described, both as to religion, morals, and politics, fully agrees with the representations of the prophet Hosea.

¹ Josephus says that Menahem was commander-in-chief: Antiq. ix. 11, 1.

² This is the first mention of the interference of the Assyrian monarchs in the affairs of Israel, unless Psal. lxxxiii. (see ver. 8) were written previously to this time. Till now their power had been almost confined to the eastern side of the Euphrates; but God was preparing them to be 'the rod of his anger,' to chastise his disobedient people. Their operations against Syria and Palestine cause them to be frequently mentioned, after this time, by the Greek authors.

³ On comparing this with the next verse, and with Hos. v. 13, it appears that Pul was marching against Menahem; and that Menahem sent him a thousand talents, in order not only to turn him from his scheme of conquest, but to gain his support in future emergencies.

⁴ Rather, the 'great men'; i. e. the rich: see ch. xxiv. 16, and note.

⁵ Boothroyd translates this, 'Pekah, with the aid of Argob and Arich, and fifty men of the Gileadites, smote him in the harem of his own palace.'

⁶ 'Gilead' stands here for all the country east of Jordan, comprising the tribes of Reuben and Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh.

⁷ According to the policy pursued by the Eastern conquerors, the flower of the newly-conquered nation was sent beyond the Euphrates, to people the thinly-inhabited parts of the Assyrian empire; and when this process was completed, new settlers were brought from the East, to occupy the land (ch. xvii. 24). The recently discovered inscriptions at Nineveh contain accounts of the campaigns of the Assyrian kings; describing them always as first invoking their gods, then defeating the enemy, subjugating the country, carrying off the inhabitants with their most valuable effects to Assyria, replacing them with colonists drawn from their immediate subjects, and appointing their own officers to take charge of the colonists and to govern the country. This was the first captivity, or exile of Israel, which included the tribes east of Jordan and the northern part of Canaan: but it was not sufficient to humble the 'pride and stoutness' of the inhabitants of Samaria. See Isa. ix. 9.

31 And the rest of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

Reigns of Jotham and Ahaz in Judah.

32 IN the second year of Pekah the son of Remaliah king of Israel began ^sJotham¹ 33 the son of Uzziah king of Judah to reign. Five and twenty years old was he 34 when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. And his 35 mother's name was Jerusha, the daughter of Zadok. And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD: he did ^taccording to all that his father Uzziah 35 had done. ^uHowbeit the high places were not removed; the people sacrificed and burnt incense still in the high places. ^vHe built² the higher gate of the house of the LORD.

36 Now the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

37 In those days the LORD began to send against Judah ^xRezin the king of Syria, and 38 ^yPekah the son of Remaliah.³ ^zAnd Jotham slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

16 In the seventeenth year of Pekah the son of Remaliah, ^aAhaz the son of 2 Jotham king of Judah began to reign. Twenty⁴ years old was Ahaz when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, and ^bdid not that which 3 was right in the sight of the LORD his God, like David his father. But ^che walked in the way of the kings of Israel, yea, ^dand made his son to pass through the fire,⁵ according to the ^eabominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out 4 from before the children of Israel. And he sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places, and ^fon the hills, and under every green tree.⁶

5 Then ^gRezin king of Syria and Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel came up 6 to Jerusalem to war: and they besieged Ahaz, ^hbut could not overcome him. At that time Rezin king of Syria ⁱrecovered Elath to Syria, and drave the Jews⁷ from ^kElath:⁸ and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there unto this day.

7 ^lSo Ahaz sent messengers ^mto ⁿTiglath-pileser king of Assyria, saying, ^oI am thy servant⁹ and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of 8 Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me. And Ahaz ^ptook the silver and gold that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and sent it for a present to the king of Assyria.

9 And the king of Assyria hearkened unto him: for the king of Assyria went up against ^qDamascus, and ^rtook it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir,¹⁰ ^sand slew Rezin.

10 And king Ahaz went to Damascus to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, ^tand saw an altar that was at Damascus: and king Ahaz sent to Urijah the priest the fashion of the altar, and the pattern of it, according to all the workmanship 11 thereof. And Urijah the priest built an altar¹¹ according to all that king Ahaz had 12 Damascus. And when the king was come from Damascus, the king saw the altar:

13 and ^uthe king approached to the altar, and ^voffered thereon. And he burnt his 14 the blood of his peace offerings, upon the altar. And he brought also ^xthe brazen the altar and the house of the LORD, and put it on the north side of the altar.

¹ In his reign Micah and Isaiah began their prophetic ministry, which continued through the reigns of Ahaz and Hezekiah.

² He repaired it, for it existed long before.

³ Their confederacy forms the subject of Isa. vii.

⁵ Some suppose this phrase to indicate not a sacrificial act, but a ceremony of purification; but, from Ps. cvi. 38; Jer. vii. 31; Ezek. xvi. 20; xxiii. 37, it appears that children were actually sacrificed; being sometimes first slain, and then burned. See note on Lev. xx. 2.

⁶ The first five chapters of Isaiah throw much light upon the state of the people at this period.

⁷ The Hebrews are here for the first time called 'Jews;' literally Judeans, i. e. men of Judah.

⁸ The Syrians, having subdued the tribes on the east of Jordan, continued their conquests southward until they gained possession of Elath on the Red Sea; but their progress was soon arrested by the Assyrians.

⁹ That is, 'I will be tributary to thee, and place myself under thy protection;' preferring to apply to any one rather than to God. But his sin brought its own punishment; for, while he purchased a temporary deliverance from the Syrians, he only changed his oppressor.

¹¹ It is not said that this new altar was used for idolatrous purposes. It appears at first to have been employed for the offerings prescribed by the law; but it was an unauthorized innovation in the worship of Jehovah.

Reign of Hoshea in Israel; conquest of the country by the Assyrians under Shalmaneser; end of the kingdom, and transportation of the people.

17 IN the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began Hoshea the son of Elah to 2 reign in Samaria over Israel nine years. And he did that which was evil in the 3 sight of the LORD, but not as³ the kings of Israel that were before him. Against him came up ^f Shalmaneser king of Assyria; and Hoshea became his servant, and ^g gave [Heb. rendered] him presents [or, tribute].
 4 And the king of Assyria found conspiracy in Hoshea: for he had sent messengers to So king of Egypt,⁴ and brought no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year: therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and ^h bound him
 5 in prison. Then ⁱ the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went 6 up to Samaria, and besieged it three years.⁵ ^k In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and ^l carried Israel away⁶ into Assyria, ^m and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan,⁷ and in the cities of the Medes.
 7 For so it was,⁸ that the children of Israel had sinned against the LORD their God, ⁿ which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the 8 hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, ^o and had feared other gods, and ^p walked in the statutes of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel,
 9 and ^q of the kings of Israel, which they had made. And the children of Israel did ^r secretly those things that were not right against the LORD their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, ^s from the tower of the watchmen

¹ Or, 'and I will consider about the brazen altar.'

² What this 'covert' was is unknown; but, from its connection with the king's entry, it may be supposed to have belonged to the royal gallery mentioned in ch. xi. 14; 2 Chron. vi. 13.

⁴ Both the time and the name indicate that this was the Egyptian king called Sevechus by Manetho, the second of the twenty-fifth dynasty. The recent appearance of the Assyrian armies in this neighbourhood naturally led the kings of Egypt to resist their further progress, and to endeavour to bring the small kingdoms of Palestine, which lay between the contending powers, under their own dominion. Hence both Judah and Israel were constantly exposed to the violence of the one party or the other; being coveted by Assyria as the key to Egypt, and by Egypt as an outpost against Assyria. In withholding the tribute from the Assyrian king, Hoshea doubtless relied upon aid from Egypt.

⁵ We have no particulars of this siege; but the character of the invaders, as described by prophets (see Nahum ii. 12, 13; iii. 1) and historians, and the sculptures discovered in the remains of Assyrian cities, combine to show that it must have been a time of extreme suffering; especially when the city was captured, and given up, according to the usual practice, to indiscriminate pillage and slaughter.

⁶ This was the second captivity of Israel, which included chiefly the inhabitants of the central part of Canaan. See also ch. xviii. 11.

⁷ If this be, as is probable, the river now called Kizil Ozan (or Yellow River), which enters the Caspian Sea at its south-west corner, then all these places are to be sought in the high-lands of Kurdistan and the Persian Irak, which anciently formed part of Media. In that district are found the ancient names Calachene, Chaboras, and Gausania, and the modern names Chaleal and Abhar. At the last place, extensive ruins, somewhat resembling those of Nineveh and Babylon, still remain.

⁸ The inspired writer carefully traces this awful catastrophe to its cause—the obstinate wickedness of the people. Beginning with Jeroboam's political idolatry, they had gone on to the grosser worship of Baal and Ashtaroth; and had in consequence committed (as the writings of the contemporary prophets show) the most scandalous sins of all kinds—oppression and robbery, violence and cruelty, gluttony and debauchery. They had continued in this downward course for more than two hundred years; though often checked by startling and even miraculous interpositions of Divine Providence. Famine, war, and pestilence had been repeatedly inflicted upon them; and a long succession of faithful men of God had warned them of the impending danger; but all had been in vain. And now that the people had utterly failed to accomplish the great object for which Jehovah had separated them for himself, and instead of being witnesses to the world of the spirituality and perfection of his nature, had dishonoured his holy name, he gave them up into the hand of their enemies, and removed them out of their place. Surely this is a solemn lesson to other nations, to whom God has given a still fuller and clearer revelation of his character and will.

places, as did the heathen whom the LORD carried away before them; and wrought wicked things ² to provoke the LORD to anger: for they served idols, ^a whereof the LORD had said unto them, ^b Ye shall not do this thing.

13 Yet the LORD ^c testified against Israel, and against Judah, by all the prophets, and by all ^d the seers, saying, ^e Turn ye from your evil ways, and ^f keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets. Notwithstanding they would not hear, but ^g hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that ^h did not believe in the LORD their God. And they rejected his statutes, ⁱ and his covenant that he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he testified against them; and they followed ^k vanity, and ^l became vain, and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should ^m not do like them. And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and ⁿ made them molten images, even two calves, ^o and made a grove, and worshipped all the host of heaven, ^p and served Baal. ^q And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire, and ^r used divination and enchantments, and ^s sold themselves ¹ to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger. Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and ^t removed them out of his sight: there was none left ^u but the tribe of Judah only. Also ^x Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but ^y walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

20 And the LORD ^z rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and ^a delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until he had cast them out of ^b his sight. For ^c he rent Israel from the house of David; and ^d they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and Jeroboam drave Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin a great sin. For the children of Israel ^e walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them; until the LORD removed Israel out of his sight, ^f as he had said by all his servants the prophets. ^g So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day.²

Colonization of the land of Israel by idolatrous people.

24 ^a AND the king of Assyria brought men ^b from Babylon, and from Cuthah,³ and from ^c Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel:⁴ and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof. And so it was at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they ^d feared not the LORD: therefore ^e the LORD sent lions among them, which slew some of them.⁵ Wherefore they spake to the king of Assyria, saying, The nations which thou hast removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the land:⁶ therefore he hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them, because they know not the manner of the God of the land. Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, Carry thither one of the priests whom ye brought from thence;⁷ and let them go and dwell

¹ That is, they made themselves slaves to idolatry.

² They were there also at the time when the book of Chronicles was written (see 1 Chron. v. 26), which was probably much later than this book. Since that time the people of Israel have never reappeared in a national character as distinct from Judah. Some of their descendants joined the Jewish exiles who returned to Jerusalem after the Babylonish captivity; but the greater portion of them remained (as did also many of the people of Judah) scattered among the nations in the countries to which they had been carried (see Acts ii. 5, 9). Josephus, who wrote in the reign of Vespasian, recites a speech of king Agrippa, in which, while exhorting the Jews to submit to the Romans, he says, 'Do any of you think that your fellow-tribes will come to your aid out of Adiabene?' (the principal province of Assyria.) Jerome also, in the fifth century of the Christian era, who resided for twenty years in Palestine, and was well acquainted with the East, says, 'Unto this day the ten tribes are subject to the kings of the Persians; nor has their captivity ever been loosed: they inhabit at this day the cities and mountains of the Medes.' Many of them appear to have been brought as settlers to Antioch, and other cities in Asia Minor; nor can it be doubted that a large number of the Jews, who in the times of the apostles were scattered so widely over different parts of the Roman empire, were their descendants, who at various periods had migrated to more westerly regions.

³ 'Cuthah' is the Chaldee for Cush: it is probably the modern Khusistan. The other places cannot now be certainly identified; but were probably in the same neighbourhood, on the eastern side of the lower waters of the Tigris and Euphrates. The colonization of the country seems to have been carried on chiefly under the reign of Esar-haddon: see Ezra iv. 2.

⁴ It is not to be inferred from these words that all the people were carried away, but that the Israelites were no longer the principal inhabitants or possessors of the land. It is evident, from 2 Chron. xxxiv. 6, that many of them were left, as was afterwards the case in the kingdom of Judah. Comp. ch. xxiv. 12—16, with xxv. 12, 22. Their descendants became incorporated with those of the heathen colonists; and this mixed population was afterwards known by the name of Samaritans. They became bitter enemies of the Jews: see Ezra, ch. iv., and Neh. ch. iv.

⁵ This would show both to the conquerors and the colonists that the Israelites had not been dispossessed of their country because God was not able to defend them, but because of their sins; and that none could occupy the land which Jehovah had called by his own name without his permission.

28 there, and let him teach them the manner of the God of the land. Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Beth-el, and taught them how they should fear the LORD.

29 Howbeit every nation made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt. And the men of ^a Babylon made Succoth-benoth,¹ and the men of Cuth made Nergal, and the men of Hamath made Ashima,^o and the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites ^p burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech, the gods of Sepharvaim. So they feared the LORD, ^q and made unto themselves of the lowest of them priests of the high places, which sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places. ^r They feared the LORD, and served their own gods, after the manner of the nations whom they carried away from thence.²

34 Unto this day they do after the former manners: they fear not³ the LORD, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, ^s whom he named Israel; with whom the LORD had made a covenant, and charged them, saying, 'Ye shall not fear other gods, nor ^u bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them: but the LORD, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power and ^x a stretched out arm, ^y him shall ye fear, and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice. And ^z the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandment, which he wrote for you, ^a ye shall observe to do for evermore; and ye shall not fear other gods. And the covenant that I have made with you ^b ye shall not forget; neither shall ye fear other gods. But ^c the LORD your God ye shall fear; and he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies. Howbeit they did not hearken, but they did after their former manner.

41 ^d So these nations feared the LORD, and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they ^e unto this day.

Hezekiah's good reign; Judah invaded by Sennacherib; Hezekiah's prayer, and its answer through Isaiah; the Assyrian army destroyed.

18 NOW it came to pass in the third year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, ^f that ^g Hezekiah the son of Ahaz king of Judah began to reign. Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was ^h Abi, the daughter of Zachariah. 3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, ⁱ according to all that David his father did. ^j He removed the high places, and brake the images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the ^k brazen serpent⁴ that Moses had made: for unto those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it: and he ^l called it Nehushtan [i. e. a piece of brass]. He ^m trusted in the LORD God of Israel; ⁿ so that after him was none like him⁵ among all the kings of Judah, 6 nor any that were before him. For he ^o clave to the LORD, and departed not from following him, but kept his commandments which the LORD commanded 7 Moses. And the LORD ^p was with him; and he ^q prospered whithersoever he went forth: and he ^r rebelled against the king of Assyria, and served him not.⁶ 8 ^s He smote the Philistines,⁷ even unto ^t Gaza, and the borders thereof, ^u from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

9 And ^v it came to pass in the fourth year of king Hezekiah, which was the up idolatry, and professed to worship Jehovah, and to regard his law as given by Moses; but they rejected all the later sacred writings.

² These words are more correctly rendered, 'whence they (i. e. the settlers in Samaria) had been brought.'

³ The first clause here is explained by the second. These people did not fear and worship the Lord only, according to his law; but, joining their own idolatry with his worship, might be truly said not to fear him. Those who attempt to unite their own devices with the service of God will find that service made thereby unacceptable to him.

⁴ The destruction of so venerable a memorial of a remarkable fact in the national history shows the wisdom and energy of Hezekiah's piety. The superstitious veneration paid to sacred relics, and especially the adoration paid to the cross, and even in express words to the wood and nails of it, with all the impostures which have arisen from that absurd idolatry, are an exact parallel to the worship of the brazen serpent; and Hezekiah's example fully authorizes the total abolition of everything of that kind in religious worship.—Scott.

⁵ This appears to be a proverbial mode of designating remarkable excellence; the same expression being used respecting Josiah (ch. xxiii. 25). David is commonly represented as the model of a Hebrew king.

⁶ Entering into the spirit of the theocracy, and depending upon the help of Jehovah (ver. 5), he refused the submission which his father had yielded to the king of Assyria. To do this, when that monarch's power was growing, and his attention was directed to Palestine, was an act of unusual faith.

⁷ Some regard this as a fulfilment of the prediction in Isa. xiv. 28—32.

- seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Shalmaneser king of 10 Assyria came up against Samaria, and besieged it. And at the end of three years

 11 Hoshea king of Israel, Samaria was taken. ^yAnd the king of Assyria did carry 13 Now ^bin the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did ^cSennacherib² king of was found in the house of the LORD,⁵ and in the treasures of the king's house.

 16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off ^fthe gold from the doors of the temple of the

 it to the king of Assyria.
 17 ^gAnd the king of Assyria sent⁶ Tartan and Rab-saris and Rab-shakeh⁷ from

1 The following narrative, to ch. xx. 19, is substantially identical with Isa. xxxvi.—xxxix. As Isaiah was one of the writers of the chronicles of the kingdom of Judah, this passage was probably first written by him in that form, and subsequently inserted, with some alterations, in the collection of his prophecies.

2 Sennacherib is mentioned by Herodotus in consequence of his attempt upon Egypt.

3 In 2 Chron. xxxii. 1, it is said that he 'thought' (rather, 'proposed') to subdue them unto himself. He certainly did not take all the fenced cities; for, besides Jerusalem, Lachish and Libnah were not taken.

4 Lachish was a town of Judah, south-west of Jerusalem. Sennacherib was now besieging this place (2 Chron. xxxii. 9); and, while there, he sent part of his forces to Jerusalem, to summon Hezekiah to surrender.

5 Hezekiah's faith, when put to a severe test, at first failed; and he purchased an expensive and ignominious peace, becoming again a vassal of the Assyrian king; but his faith soon regained its power: see 2 Chron. xxxiii. 2—6.

6 This second invasion is thought to have been about three years after the first; and it is supposed that the events related in ch. xx. 1—19 occurred in the interval.

7 These three names (comp. Jer. xxxix. 3) appear to be official, not personal appellations. 'Tartan,' who was a military officer of high reputation for previous conquests (see Isa. xx. 1), was probably the chief of the body-guard; 'Rab-saris' the chief eunuch; and 'Rab-shakeh' the chief cup-bearer. This invasion seems to be referred to in Isa. ch. x., where the different towns and villages which lay in the route of the Assyrians are mentioned; and in Isa. ch. xxii., which describes the state of Jerusalem during the siege.

8 That is, not broken, but cracked; really though not apparently injured, and thus incapable of yielding the support expected from it. The reed was a peculiarly fit symbol of Egypt, as it grew plentifully in that country. See Isa. xxx. 5, 7.

9 This refers to the abolition of idolatry, which had been effected by Hezekiah (see ch. xviii. 4; 2 Chron. xxx. 16). The Assyrians had therefore heard that Hezekiah had destroyed the idols and high places; and, according to their polytheistic notions, they supposed that he had thereby offended his God.

10 Hezekiah had doubtless, in obedience to the law, discouraged the training of cavalry. As the Assyrians prided themselves much on their horse-forces, they would look with contempt on a people destitute of them.

11 This may have been merely a false boast on the part of Rab-shakeh; or he may have been encouraged by some false prophet.

12 Or, 'Aramaic.' Through a great part of the Assyrian monarchy, especially on the west of the Euphrates it: and talk not with us in the Jews' ¹ language in the ears of the people that are 27 on the wall. But Rab-shakeh said unto them, Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men which sit on the wall, that they may ² eat² their own dung, and drink their own piss with you?

^P see ch. 6. 25.

28 Then Rab-shakeh stood and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and 29 spake, saying, Hear the word of the great king, the king of Assyria: Thus saith the king, ³ Let not Hezekiah deceive you: for he shall not be able to deliver you 30 out of his hand: neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD,³ saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, ⁴ and this city shall not be delivered into the hand 31 of the king of Assyria. Harken not to Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, ⁵ Make an agreement with me [or, Seek my favour] by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his 32 fig tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his cistern: until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, 'a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil-olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not die:
 and hearken not unto Hezekiah, when he persuadeth [or, deceiveth] you, saying, 33 The LORD will deliver us. "Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered at all 34 his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria? "Where are the gods of Hamath, and of Arpad?⁴ where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and ⁵ Ivah?
 35 "have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand? Who are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of mine hand, ⁶ that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of mine hand?

the Aramaic or Syriac—a language allied to the Hebrew —was spoken by the people; and the Assyrian officers must have been familiar with it.

² Hyperbolic expressions, denoting the utmost extremities of famine, to which the people should be reduced in the threatened siege.

³ The Assyrian had before endeavoured to excite fears of Jehovah's anger; he now insinuates mistrust of Divine protection. The enemies of God's people can only succeed by shaking their confidence in his grace and power.

⁴ See note on ch. xvii. 24.

⁵ Shebna had been displaced by Eliakim (see refs.)

⁶ See note on Gen. xxxvii. 34.

⁷ Hezekiah's faith prompted him to refer his cause to Jehovah, whom he had always acknowledged as his Sovereign, and had made it his chief care to serve and honour (see 2 Chron. xxix.—xxxi.), and against whom Rab-shakeh's blasphemies were directed.

⁸ A proverb expressing imminent danger, extreme weakness, and entire dependence on the aid of others.

⁹ Jehovah is called the living God, in contrast to the gods of the surrounding nations, with whom the Assyrian had blasphemously confounded him (ch. xviii. 35).

¹⁰ This expression probably refers to Jerusalem, and the few fortresses, with their inhabitants, which had as yet escaped the general desolation. See Isa. i. 8. It appears probable that Psa. xlv. was written about this time: see note on its title.

¹¹ The Hebrew word here used is generally rendered 'wind' or 'spirit.' Some suppose it to be a figure for any severe judgment. Others refer it to the deadly wind of the desert, called the Samiel, by which whole caravans, and even armies, have sometimes been destroyed. But the rendering most accordant with the Hebrew idiom is,
 'I will put a spirit in him;' i. e. 'I will make him alter his feelings and purposes.'

¹² This is generally supposed to refer to the report of Tirhakah's approach (ver. 9). As Sennacherib only took occasion from that to utter fresh blasphemies (vers. 10 —13), God inflicted upon him, as he had formerly done upon Pharaoh, a most terrible punishment.

¹³ Libnah, as well as Lachish, was a town in the plain or low lands of Judah, south-west of Jerusalem.

- heard say of Tirhakah ¹ king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee: ² he sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying, Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah, king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God ² in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria. Behold, ^a thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly: and shalt thou be delivered? ^b Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; ³ as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of ^c Eden which were in Thelasar? ¹³ ^d Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah?
- ¹⁴ ^e And Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the house of the LORD, and ^f spread it before the LORD. And Hezekiah prayed before the LORD, and said, ⁴ ^g O LORD God of Israel, ^h which dwellest between the cherubim, ⁱ thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou ^k hast made heaven and earth. ¹⁶ LORD, ^l bow down thine ear, and hear: ^m open, LORD, thine eyes, and see: and hear the words of Sennacherib, ⁿ which hath sent him to reproach the living God. Of a truth, LORD, ^o the kings of Assyria have destroyed the nations and their lands, and have cast their gods into the fire: ⁵ for they were no gods, but ^p the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them. ¹⁹ Now therefore, O LORD our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, ^q that all the kingdoms of the earth may know ⁶ that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.
- ²⁰ ^r Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent ⁷ to Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria ^s I have heard. This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him;
- ^t The virgin ^u the daughter of Zion ⁸ hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; The daughter of Jerusalem ^x hath shaken her head at thee.
- ²² Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed?
And against whom hast thou exalted ^y thy voice,
And lifted up thine eyes on high?—even against ^z the Holy One of Israel.
- ²³ ² By thy messengers thou hast reproached the LORD, and hast said,
^a With the multitude of my chariots I am come up
To the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon,
And will cut down the tall cedar trees thereof, and the choice fir trees thereof:
And I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into ^b the forest of his Carmel.⁹
- ²⁴ I have digged, and drunk strange waters,
And with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of besieged places.¹⁰
- ²⁵ Hast thou not heard ¹¹ long ago how ^c I have done it,
And of ancient times that I have formed it?
Now have I brought it to pass,
That ^d thou shouldest be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps.
- ²⁶ Therefore their inhabitants were of small power,¹²
They were dismayed and confounded;
They were ^e as the grass of the field, and as the green herb,
As ^f the grass on the house tops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.
- ²⁷ But ^g I know thy abode, and ^h thy going out, and thy coming in,¹³
And thy rage against me.

¹ Tirhakah seems to be the king called 'Taracos' by Manetho, and 'Tearkon' by Strabo. Though here called 'king of Ethiopia,' he ruled also over Egypt, and was one of the greatest conquerors of ancient times.

² Sennacherib wished to induce Hezekiah to capitulate before the Ethiopians arrived, or perhaps before the Jews heard of their approach.

³ See notes on ch. xvii. 5, 24.

⁴ In this prayer Hezekiah, like Solomon (1 Kings viii. 27), recognises at once God's special protection of his people, and his universal presence, and sovereignty over all things.

⁵ This appears to have been the general practice of the Eastern conquerors; unlike the policy of the Romans, who admitted the gods of the nations whom they conquered among their own.

⁶ The best pleas in prayer are derived from the honour of Jehovah; and He, being appealed to on this ground, now impressively showed his supremacy by the defeat of the vaunting conqueror of other gods.

⁷ This was apparently a written communication.

⁸ The people of Judah, of which Zion, or Jerusalem, was the capital, are thus poetically represented.

⁹ Rather, 'I will enter its extreme height, its garden forest.'

¹⁰ The same Hebrew phrase occurs in Isa. xix. 6; and may perhaps be better rendered, 'all the streams of Egypt.' The meaning is, that where there was no water, he caused it to be dug for and found; and where there was, he speedily caused it to be exhausted: both implying the command of vast resources, and innumerable hands; so that no difficulties could obstruct his victorious march.

¹¹ Vers. 25—28 are addressed to Sennacherib: 'Be not proud of thy victories: thou art merely an instrument in my hand by which I have punished wicked cities, as I long ago predicted by my prophets.' See Isa. x. 5, 6.

¹² Either from weakness or from terror.

¹³ These expressions signify all the actions of his life, as in Ps. cxxxix. 2, etc.

- 28 Because ⁱ thy rage against me and thy tumult ¹ is come up into mine ears,
Therefore ^h I will put my hook ² in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips,
And I will turn thee back ⁱ by the way by which thou camest.

3 The message now turns from the invader to Hezekiah and his people: promising them an entire deliverance from the Assyrians, and assuring them, as a sign or pledge of that event, that there should be an abundant supply of provisions for two years, from the spontaneous productions of the land. The invasion of the Assyrians had probably either prevented the cultivation or destroyed the produce of the ground that year; and some suppose that the Jews were unable to cultivate the land in the second year, because it was the Sabbatical year, or the year of Jubilee (see Lev. xxv. 21).

4 The sculptures at Nineveh contain representations of the Assyrian methods of conducting a siege, which are in exact accordance with these words.

5 Some have supposed that this destruction was effected by a pestilence, some by a storm of hail, and others by a destructive wind. See note on ver. 7. But it seems best to understand the term 'angel' as meaning a celestial agent, Divinely commissioned to accomplish this deliverance; who may, however, have made use of some secondary cause (see 2 Sam. xxiv. 15, 16; Acts xii. 23). The Egyptians (to whom also this supernatural interposition was a timely deliverance) preserved the tradition of it, though in a greatly corrupted form. See Herodotus, b. 2, c. 41. This event appears to be commemorated in Psa. lxxvi.: see note on its title. See also Isa. xvii. 12—14.

6 That is, 'at the time of rising in the morning.'

7 According to some chronological calculations, he reigned eighteen years after this time.

8 In the original it is 'Ararat' (see Gen. viii. 4), by which name the Armenians still call their country.

9 As Hezekiah survived this sickness fifteen years, and reigned altogether nearly twenty-nine, this must have been in the fourteenth year, which was that of the Assyrian invasion; and it was probably shortly before that event: see ver. 6.

10 Hezekiah's disorder was in itself incurable; and must have terminated in death but for the miraculous cure which was granted in answer to his prayer.

11 Or, 'middle city,' probably a particular part of Jerusalem so called, as Zion was named the Upper, and Akra the Lower City.

- 8 And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, ^rWhat shall be the sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day? And Isaiah said, ^sThis sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.
- 11 And Isaiah the ^tprophet cried unto the LORD: and ^uhe brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial¹ of Ahaz.
- 12 ^vAt that time ^wBerodach-baladan,² the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, ^zsent letters and a present unto Hezekiah: for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.³ And ^aHezekiah hearkened unto them,⁴ and showed them all the house of his precious things, the silver, and the gold,⁵ and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armour [or, jewels], and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah showed them not.⁶
- 14 Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, 15 They are come from a far country, even from Babylon. And he said, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, ^bAll the things that are in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not showed them.
- 16, 17 And Isaiah said unto Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD. Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store unto this day, ^cshall be carried into Babylon:⁷ nothing shall be left, 18 saith the LORD. And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, ^dshall they take away; ^eand they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon. Then said Hezekiah unto Isaiah, ^fGood is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. And he said, Is it not good, if peace and truth be [or, shall there not be peace and truth] in my days?
- 20 ^gAnd the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how he ^hmade a pool, and a conduit, and ⁱbrought water into the city, are they not written in 21 the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? And ^kHezekiah slept with his fathers: and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

- 21 MANASSEH ^lwas twelve years old when he began to reign, and reigned fifty 2 and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hephzi-bah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, ^mafter the abominations of the 3 heathen, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel. For he built up again the high places ⁿwhich Hezekiah his father had destroyed; and he reared up altars for Baal,⁸ and made a grove, ^oas did Ahab king of Israel; and ^pworshipped all the host of heaven, and served them. And ^qhe built altars in the house of the LORD, of which the Lord said, ^rIn Jerusalem will I put my name. 5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven ^sin the two courts of the house of 6 the LORD. ^tAnd he made his son pass through the fire, and observed ^utimes,

¹ The same Hebrew word is translated 'degrees' in vers. 9, 10; and in other passages 'steps.' Hence many commentators have supposed that the 'dial' consisted of a stair, or series of steps, so constructed that the shadow upon it marked the hours of the day. The recession of the shadow, in whatever way it was effected, was clearly miraculous. God alone could foretell or effect it.

⁴ Or, 'rejoiced at their arrival' (see Isa. xxxix. 2). This embassy and present from Babylon proved too powerful an assailant for Hezekiah's heart, and put him off his guard. See 2 Chron. xxxii. 31.

⁵ How these riches had been amassed so rapidly is not stated. Not long before, Hezekiah had been obliged to empty his treasury, and had even stripped the temple, to meet the demand of the king of Assyria. But he had probably obtained large spoils from the Assyrian camp (see ch. xix. 35); and he had subsequently received considerable presents, both for his own use and for the service of the temple. See 2 Chron. xxxii. 23.

⁸ See notes on Judg. ii. 11, 13; 1 Kings xv. 13. The worship of stars seems to have been of Chaldean origin.

and used enchantments, and dealt with ^x familiar spirits and wizards: he wrought 7 much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger. And he set a graven image of the grove that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son, ^y In this house, and in Jerusalem, which 8 I have chosen out of all tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever: ^z neither will I make the feet of Israel move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; ^a only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.
 9 But they hearkened not: and Manasseh ^b seduced them to do more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.¹
 10, 11 And the LORD spake by his servants the prophets,² saying, ^c Because Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, ^d and hath done wickedly above all that the Amorites did, which were before him, and ^e hath made Judah also to sin 12 with his idols: therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, ^f I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that whosoever heareth of it, both 13 ^g his ears shall tingle. And I will stretch over Jerusalem ^h the line of Samaria, and the plummet ⁱ of the house of Ahab:³ and I will ^k wipe Jerusalem as a man

 15 and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies; because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, ⁿ since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.
 16 ^o Moreover Manasseh shed innocent blood ^p very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another; ^q beside his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin, in doing that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.
 17 Now ^r the rest of the acts of Manasseh,⁵ and all that he did, and his sin that he sinned, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?
 18 And ^s Manasseh slept with his fathers, and ^t was buried in the garden of his own house, in the garden of Uzza. And Amon his son reigned in his stead.

19 ^u AMON was twenty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Meshullemeth, the daughter 20 of Haruz of Jotbah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, 21 ^v as his father Manasseh did. And he walked in all the way that his father walked in, and served the idols that his father served, and worshipped them:

1 This national relapse into idolatry, so quickly after Hezekiah had laboured earnestly to root it out, indicates that the reformation which he effected amongst the people was in most cases only external, without a real change of heart.

2 It is supposed that, besides Isaiah, some of the minor prophets were living in this reign, and perhaps others whose messages have not been preserved.

3 As they had followed Ahab's sins (see ver. 3), so they should share the doom of his family and kingdom.

4 Apostasy is usually accompanied by a fierce and persecuting spirit. The Jews have a tradition that the prophet Isaiah was sawn asunder by the king's command. Josephus says that Manasseh cruelly slew all the righteous men among the Hebrews; nor would he spare the prophets, but every day slew some of them: so that Jerusalem was overflowed with blood (Antiq. x. 3).

5 We learn from 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11, that Manasseh was taken prisoner by the Assyrians, and carried to Babylon; and that there he repented and sought God, and was afterwards restored to his kingdom, probably as a tributary to the king of Assyria. See ch. xxiii. 29.

- doers of the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD: and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the house of the LORD, ^m to
- 6 repair the breaches of the house, unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and
- 7 to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house. Howbeit ⁿ there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because they dealt faithfully.
- 8 And Hilkiah the high priest said unto Shaphan the scribe, ^o I have found the book of the law¹ in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah gave the book to
- 9 Shaphan, and he read it. And Shaphan the scribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and said, Thy servants have gathered² the money that was found in the house, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work,
- 10 that have the oversight of the house of the LORD. And Shaphan the scribe showed ^p the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath delivered me a book. And
- 11 Shaphan read it before the king. And it came to pass, when the king had heard
- 12 the words³ of the book of the law, that ^q he rent his clothes. And the king commanded Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and ^r Achbor the son of ^s Michaiah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asahiah a servant of the king's,
- 13 saying, Go ye, inquire of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for great is ^t the wrath of the LORD that is kindled against us, because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us.
- 14 So Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam, and Achbor, and Shaphan, and Asahiah, went unto Huldah ^u the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of ^x Tikvah, the son of ^y Harhas, keeper of the wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the
- 15 college⁴ [or, in the second part];) and they communed with her. And she said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell the man that sent you to me,
- 16 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, ^z I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the words of the book which the king of Judah hath
- 17 read: ^a because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; ^b therefore my wrath shall be kindled against this place, and ^c shall not be quenched.
- 18 But to ^d the king of Judah which sent you to inquire of the LORD, ^e thus shall ye say to him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, As touching the words which
- 19 thou hast heard; Because thine ^f heart was tender, and thou hast ^g humbled thyself before the LORD, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, that they should become ^h a desolation and ⁱ a curse, and hast rent thy clothes, and wept before me; ^j I also have heard
- 20 thee, saith the LORD. Behold therefore, I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou ^k shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace: ^l and thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place. And they brought the king word again.
- 23 And ^m the king sent, and they gathered unto him all the elders of Judah and of
- 2 Jerusalem. And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, both small and great: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant ⁿ which was found in the house of the LORD.
- 3 And the king ^o stood by a pillar, ^p and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments and his testimonies and his statutes, ^q with all their heart ^r and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book. And all the people stood to the covenant.

¹ This may have been the original copy of the law of Moses (see 2 Chron. xxxiv. 14), or of the covenant which was renewed with the people in the plains of Moab; for they were laid up beside the ark (see Deut. xxxi. 24—26). It is probable that, during the reigns of Manasseh and Amon, the reading of the Scriptures had been prohibited, and generally given up; and if some of the people had copies for their own private use, these would be concealed on account of the fear of persecution.

² Heb., 'melted;' or, 'poured forth:' that is, paid out.

³ The passages read to the king were probably, among others, the threatenings and curses of the law against its transgressors (Lev. xxvi., or Deut. xxviii.) It would seem that Josiah had never before heard them, though many copies of the law had been made under the direction of Hezekiah. To account for this, it is supposed that the people generally at that time were satisfied with abstracts, containing only a sort of ritual directing them in the outward observances of religion.

⁴ Literally, 'in the second.' It probably means either the suburbs, or the Lower City as distinguished from the Upper. See note on ch. xx. 4.

⁶ That is, before the destruction of Jerusalem and the overthrow of the kingdom. These predictions seem to have further quickened the king's zeal. See ch. xxiii.

⁷ See note on ch. xi. 14.

- 4 And the king commanded¹ Hilkiah the high priest, and the priests of the second order,² and the keepers of the door, to bring forth out of the temple of the Lord all the vessels that were made for Baal, and for³ the grove, and for all the host of heaven: and he burned them without Jerusalem in the fields of Kidron, and
- 5 carried the ashes of them unto Beth-el.³ And he put down the idolatrous priests,⁴ whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem; them also that burned incense unto Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the planets⁵ [or,
- 6 constellations], and to⁶ all the host of heaven. And he brought out the 'grove from the house of the Lord, without Jerusalem, unto the brook Kidron, and burned it at the brook Kidron, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the
- 7 powder thereof upon⁷ the graves of the children of the people. And he brake down the houses⁸ of the sodomites, that were by the house of the Lord,⁹ where the women wove hangings⁶ for the grove.
- 8 And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had burned incense, from² Geba to Beer-sheba, and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of
- 9 the city. "Nevertheless the priests of the high places⁷ came not up to the altar of the Lord in Jerusalem,⁶ but they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren.
- 10 And he defiled⁶ Topheth, which is in⁴ the valley of the children of Hinnom,⁸ that no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to
- 11 Molech. And he took away the horses⁹ that the kings of Judah had given to⁵ the sun, at the entering in of the house of the Lord, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the chamberlain, which was in the suburbs, and burned the chariots of the
- 12 sun with fire. And the altars that were⁸ on the top¹⁰ of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars which⁴ Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the Lord, did the king beat down, and brake them down from thence, and¹ cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron.
- 13 And the high places that were before Jerusalem, which were on the right hand of the mount of corruption, which⁴ Solomon the king of Israel had builded for² Ashtoreth the abomination of the Zidonians, and for¹¹ Chemosh the abomination of the Moabites, and for¹² Milcom the abomination of the children of Ammon, did
- 14 the king defile. And he¹⁰ brake in pieces the images, and cut down the groves, and filled their places with the bones of men.
- 15 Moreover the altar that was at Beth-el,¹¹ and the high place¹² which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burned the high place, and stamped it small to powder,
- 16 and burned the grove. And as Josiah turned himself, he spied the sepulchres that were there in the mount, and sent and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and burned them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the⁹ word of the
- 17 LORD which the man of God proclaimed, who proclaimed these words. Then he

1 This purification appears, from 2 Chron. xxxiv., to have been begun before the finding and public reading of the law; but it was probably not completed till afterwards, and therefore the whole is dated together here.

2 The inferior priests.

3 Sending the impure to an impure place, which had long ago been polluted by the calf-worship.

4 Heb., 'Chemarim.' See Zeph. i. 4. The analogous Syriac word means a priest; and seems to have been appropriately used for the priests of Syrian idols.

5 The Hebrew words 'Mazzaloth' and 'Mazzaroth' are supposed to mean the resting-places of the sun, i. e. the twelve signs of the Zodiac. See Job xxxviii. 32.

6 That is, either drapery to adorn or protect the image of Asherah, or the tent in which the idol was placed.

7 These priests appear to have been descendants of Aaron, who had officiated at the high places in the kingdom of Judah; professedly worshipping the true God, but in an unlawful manner. That they might not continue to do mischief in the country, they were brought to Jerusalem to reside among their brethren; but they were not allowed to exercise priestly functions, although maintained at the charge of the sanctuary, according to the law in Lev. xxi. 17—23. The idolatrous priests of Samaria were all slain (ver. 20), as the law required (Exod. xxii. 20).

8 Sometimes called simply 'Gei Hinnom' (the valley of Hinnom), whence the Greek Gehenna. The name 'Topheth' was given to it from 'toph,' a drum; drums being beaten to drown the cries of the children offered in sacrifice to Moloch. This place having been the scene of that cruel worship, Josiah caused it to be polluted by throwing into it the dead bodies of animals and the offal of the city. This practice being continued afterwards, fires were lighted in the valley to consume the carcases, and thus prevent the noxious effects which might otherwise have arisen. Hence the place was called the Gehenna of fire; and represented to the Jews the place of punishment for the wicked, where it is emphatically said by our Lord (quoting from Isaiah), 'their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched' (Isa. lxvi. 24; Mark ix. 44).

9 The ancient Persians, who were sun-worshippers, dedicated to that luminary white horses and chariots, which were paraded on solemn occasions.

10 That is, on the roof of the house. The roofs of the houses were used by the Persians for the worship of the heavenly bodies.

11 Josiah's power appears to have extended beyond the limits of Judah. It is probable that, as a faithful tributary to the king of Assyria, he was allowed to govern some of the northern towns, as the Assyrian colonists did not fully people the country. See 2 Chron. xxxiv. 6.

said, What title¹ is that that I see? And the men of the city told him, It is ^r the sepulchre of the man of God, which came from Judah, and proclaimed these 18 things that thou hast done against the altar of Beth-el. And he said, Let him alone; let no man move his bones. So they let his bones alone, with the bones of ^s the prophet that came out of Samaria.

19 And all ^t the houses also of the high places that were ^u in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Israel had made to provoke the LORD to anger, Josiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el.

20 And ^x he ^y slew all the priests of the high places that were there upon the altars, and ^z burned men's bones upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

21 And the king commanded all the people, saying, ^a Keep the passover unto the LORD your God, ^b as it is written in the book of this covenant. Surely ^c there was not holden such a passover² from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all 23 the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah; but in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, wherein this passover was holden to the LORD in Jerusalem.

24 Moreover ^d the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the images [or, ^e teraphim³], and the idols, and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, that he might perform the words of ^f the law which were written in ^g the book that Hilkiah the priest found 25 in the house of the LORD. ^h And like unto him was there no king before him,⁴ that turned to the LORD with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him.

26 Notwithstanding the LORD turned not from the fierceness of his great wrath, wherewith his anger was kindled against Judah,⁵ ⁱ because of all the provocations that Manasseh had provoked him withal. And the LORD said, I will remove Judah also out of my sight, as ^j I have removed Israel, and will cast off this city Jerusalem which I have chosen, and the house of which I said, ^k My name shall be there.

28 ^l Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

29 ^m In his days Pharaoh-nechoh⁶ king of Egypt went up against the king of Assyria to the river Euphrates: and king Josiah went against him;⁷ and he ⁿ slew 30 him at ^o Megiddo, when he ^p had seen him. ^q And his servants carried him in a chariot dead⁸ from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre. 31 ^s JEHOAHAZ was twenty and three years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was ^t Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. 5 The frequent interchange of relapse and reformation, according to the will of the sovereign for the time being, shows that the habits of the people had become thoroughly depraved; and that idolatry, whether with or without royal patronage, was deeply rooted in the public mind.

6 Herodotus (ii. 159) mentions this expedition of Necos (Pharaoh-nechoh), and says that he defeated the Syrians (Jews) at Magdolis (Megiddo), and took a large city Cadytis (Chald. Kadutha, 'the holy,' i. e. Jerusalem).

7 Josiah probably felt himself bound, as a tributary to the king of Assyria, to oppose the progress of the Egyptian army.

8 This word may be more correctly rendered 'dying;'

i. e. mortally wounded. It appears, from 2 Chron. xxxv. 24, that when Josiah had been wounded at Megiddo, his servants put him into another chariot, and brought him to Jerusalem, where he died. It was probably at this period of overwhelming calamity that Psalms lxxxviii., lxxxix. were written. See note on title of Ps. lxxxviii.

9 Jehoahaz is called 'Shallum' by Jeremiah (ch. xxii. 11). He appears to have been more popular than his elder brother Jehoiakim.

12 Eliakim was Josiah's second son (1 Chron. iii. 15). The eldest, Johanan, was perhaps dead. After defeating Josiah's army, Necho took Carchemish; and on his return, treating Judea as a conquered province, he exercised his supremacy by appointing Eliakim as his deputy, and changed his name to mark him as his vassal. The same was done by Nebuchadnezzar (ch. xxiv. 17). Jehoiakim's character is portrayed by Jeremiah, ch. xxii. 13—19.

24 In ^d his days Nebuchadnezzar king¹ of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakim became his servant three years: then he turned and rebelled against him. ^e And the LORD sent against him bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, ^f according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by his servants the prophets. Surely ^g at the commandment of the LORD came this upon Judah, to remove them out of his sight, ^h for the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did; ⁱ and also for the innocent blood that he shed: for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood; which the LORD would not pardon.

5 ^k Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? ^l So Jehoiakim slept with his fathers: and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

10 ^p At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city was besieged. And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it. ^q And Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers: and the king of Babylon ^r took him ^s in the eighth year of his reign. ^t And he carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the LORD,³ and the treasures of the king's house, and ^u cut in pieces all the vessels of gold ^v which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the LORD, ^x as the LORD had said. And ^y he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, ^z even ten thousand captives, and ^a all the craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save ^b the poorest sort of the people of the land.

15 And ^c he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers, and the mighty of the land, those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon. And ^d all the men of might,⁴ even seven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths a thousand, all that were strong and apt for war, even them the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon.⁵ And ^e the king of Babylon made Mattaniah⁶ ^f his father's brother king in his stead, and ^g changed his name to Zedekiah.

² In 1 Chron. iii. 16 he is called 'Jecooniah,' and in Jer. xxii. 24 'Coniah.' As he reigned only three months as a mere vassal of the king of Babylon, his reign is scarcely reckoned; and therefore it was said of Jehoiakim (Jer. xxxvi. 30), 'he shall have none to sit upon the throne of David.'

³ The people were assured by the false prophets that these sacred vessels should be brought back; but God told them by his prophet (Jer. xxvii. 16—22) that, instead of these being restored, the rest should follow, as they did (see ch. xxv. 13—17). Nebuchadnezzar spoiled the temple three times: 1, when he took Jerusalem in the reign of Jehoiakim (see Dan. i. 2); 2, when he came the second time, in that of Jeconiah; and, 3, when he captured it in that of Zedekiah (ch. xxv. 13).

⁴ This means wealthy men, as distinguished from 'mighty men of valour' (ver. 14). This enumeration is evidently supplementary to that in ver. 14. Combining the two, the total number of persons now transported may be thus summed up: princes, or chiefs and warriors, 10,000; persons of property 7,000; craftsmen and smiths 1,000; making a total of 18,000.

⁵ This is reckoned, by both Usher and Hales, to have been the commencement of the seventy years' captivity, as predicted by Jeremiah.

⁶ He was son of Josiah, and brother of Jehoiakim.

19 daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. ^k And he did *that which was evil*¹ in the sight
 20 of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. ^l For through the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence, ^m that Zedekiah rebelled² against the king of Babylon.

25 And it came to pass ⁿ in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against 2 it round about. And the city was besieged³ unto the eleventh year of king
 3 Zedekiah. And on the ninth day of the ^o fourth month ^p the famine prevailed in 4 the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land. And ^q the city was broken up, and all the men of war ^r fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden: (now the Chaldees were against the 5 city round about:) and ^s the king went the way toward the plain. And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of 6 Jericho: and all his army were scattered from him. ^t So they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon ^u to Riblah; and they gave judgment⁴ 7 upon him. And ^v they slew the sons⁵ of Zedekiah before his eyes, and ^w put out the eyes⁶ of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon.⁷

8 And in the fifth month, ^z on the seventh⁸ day of the month, which is ^a the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, ^b came Nebuzar-adan, 9 captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem: ^c and he burnt the house of the LORD,⁹ ^d and the king's house, and all the houses of 10 Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire. And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the guard, ^e brake down the walls of 11 Jerusalem round about. ^f Now the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the 12 multitude, did Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carry away.¹⁰ But the captain of the guard ^g left of the poor of the land¹¹ to be vinedressers and husbandmen.

13 And ^h the ⁱ pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and ^k the bases, and ^l the brasen sea that was in the house of the LORD, did the Chaldees break in 14 pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon. And ^m the pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith 15 they ministered, took they away. And the firepans, and the bowls, ⁿ and such things as were of gold, in gold, and of silver, in silver, the captain of the guard 16 took away. The two pillars, one sea, and the bases which Solomon had made for the house of the LORD; ^o the brass of all these vessels was without weight.

17 ^p The height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, and the chapter upon it was brass: and the height of the chapter three cubits; and the wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapter round about, all of brass: and like unto these had the second pillar with wreathen work.

18 ^q And the captain of the guard took ^r Seraiah the chief priest, and ^s Zephaniah 19 the second priest, and the three keepers of the door: and out of the city he took an officer that was set over the men of war, and ^t five men of them that were in ³ Jerusalem was strong by nature, and had been so fortified by art that Nebuchadnezzar was compelled to blockade it for eighteen months, and at last only reduced it by famine. This of course greatly prolonged and aggravated the sufferings of the besieged; of which terrible descriptions may be found in Lam. iv. 3—10; Ezek. iv. 16; v. 10. In connection with this narrative should also be read Jer. ch. xxi., xxiv., xxvii.—xxxiv., xxxvii.—xxxix., lii.

⁴ This was a just retribution on Zedekiah for the breach of his oath, and his obdurate disregard of the merciful counsel of God. See Jer. xxxviii. 17; xxxii. 5; xxxiv. 3, etc.

⁵ And, according to Jer. xxxix. 6 and lii. 10, all the 'nobles' or 'princes' of Judah.

⁶ The loss of sight was intended not only as a punishment, but also to incapacitate him for ever being king again.

⁷ Thus two apparently inconsistent prophecies (Jer. xxxii. 4; Ezek. xii. 13) were both literally fulfilled.

⁸ In Jer. lii. 12, it is the tenth day of the month. If the burning of the city lasted several days, it might be reckoned from either the beginning or the end. Josephus says that it was on the same day of the same month that the second temple was burned by the Romans. From this period to the completion of the second temple, under Darius Hystaspis, was seventy years.

⁹ The ark of the covenant was probably burned with the temple, for it is never mentioned afterwards; showing how little God cares for the outward ceremonial when the inward spirit of religion is gone. See Jer. vii. 4, 13—15. The prophet Jeremiah was present, and beheld the sad accomplishment of his early predictions, in the horrors of the famine and the carnage, and the plunder and destruction of the city and temple; and has recorded his feelings in his pathetic elegies. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17—19, and Lamentations.

¹¹ Poverty is sometimes a protection. The poor, formerly oppressed, have now liberty and peace, while their oppressors are sent into captivity.

Gedaliah is appointed governor by Nebuchadnezzar, and is killed by Ishmael; the remnant of the people flee into Egypt.

22 ^xAND as for the people that remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even over them he made ^yGedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, ruler.

23 And when all the ^zcaptains of the armies, they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah governor, there came to Gedaliah to Mizpah; even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan the son of Careah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth the ^aNetophathite, and Jaazaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men. And Gedaliah ^bswore to them, and to their men, and said unto them, Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon; and it shall be well with you.

25 But ^cit came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, came, and ten men with him, and smote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah. And all the people, both small and great, and the captains of the armies, arose, ^dand came to Egypt:² for they were afraid of the Chaldees.

Jehoiachin's captivity is relieved by Evil-merodach.

27 ^eAND it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the year that he began to reign ^fdid lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of prison; and he spake kindly to him, and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon; and ^gchanged his prison garments: and he did ^heat bread continually before him all the days of his life. THE FIRST BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

THE two books of Chronicles were anciently one; and were called 'Words of Days,' that is, Diaries or Journals, probably with reference to the ancient annals from which they appear to have been chiefly compiled. They were divided into two parts by the Greek translators, who called them 'Paraleipomena,' i. e. 'things omitted,' or supplements; because many things not contained in the preceding histories are here supplied. The name of Chronicles was first given to them by Jerome. They appear to have been written after the close of the Babylonian captivity (see 1 Chron. iii. 19—24; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21, 22). The Jews generally ascribe them to Ezra; and that tradition is probably correct; though a few additions to the genealogies must have been made after his time. Some, however, think they were of a later date.

The sources of information from which this book was derived, were for the most part the same as those which were used by the author of the books of Kings: but there were evidently some others.

One principal object of this portion of the sacred writings appears to have been to point out, from the ancient national records, the descent and location of the different families before the captivity; with the view of enabling the Jews who returned from Babylon to regain their former inheritances. It was also designed to assist the restoration of the worship of God according to the Divinely-ordained model. For this purpose, the genealogies, offices, and duties of the priests and Levites, and other public officers, are carefully specified; and those portions of the history of David and other pious kings which illustrate their care for the ordinances of religion, and their zeal in promoting reformations, with the happy results of their exertions, are particularly dwelt upon; whilst, in contrast with this, the causes of the national calamities are very pointedly and impressively declared. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 14—21, etc.

On comparing the books of Chronicles with those of Samuel and The Kings, it will be found that, although they have much in common, there is in the present books much that is original and peculiar. In the first nine chapters, which consist chiefly of genealogies, many facts of great interest may be gleaned with respect to the early periods of the Hebrew history; and the historical part contains many signal manifestations of the Divine government, and other important information respecting the affairs of the kingdom of Judah, of which we should otherwise possess but very brief and general notices. It is a general characteristic of the books of the Chronicles, as compared with those of Samuel and The Kings, that, in those portions of the history which are common to both, these books have more of the national and less of the personal, more of the ecclesiastical and less of the political, more of the didactic and less of the historical: so that here, still more frequently than in the preceding books, the hand of God is distinctly pointed out in all the events which are related; and the connection is shown between righteousness and prosperity on the one hand, and between sin and chastisement on the other. All these books will be found to explain and illustrate each other. The diversities in orthography and language which occasionally occur, and which evidently arise from changes in dialect and usages, occasioned by the connection of the Jews with Aramean nations, form an incidental proof of the genuineness and authenticity of these writings.

THE FIRST BOOK OF CHRONICLES is naturally divided into two parts.

Part I. contains GENEALOGIES, showing the descent of the people of Israel from Adam to the time of Ezra, with short historical notices.

Genealogies from Adam to Jacob (ch. i., ii. 2). The descendants of Judah, with their settlements (ii. 3—55); the family of David (iii.) Other descendants of Judah, also of Simeon, Reuben, Gad, and half of Manasseh, with their settlements; and historical notices (iv., v.) Genealogies of the Levites and priests (vi.) The descendants of Issachar, Benjamin, Naphtali, the other half of Manasseh, Ephraim, and Asher, with some of their settlements; and historical notices (vii.) Genealogy of Benjamin to the time of Saul; Saul's descendants (viii.) List of the families who dwelt at Jerusalem (ix. 1—34). Saul's pedigree repeated (ix. 34—44).

II. THE REIGN OF DAVID; comprising the death of Saul and Jonathan (ch. x.) David's accession to the throne, and capture of Jerusalem; his mighty men (xi., xii.) Removal of the ark to the house of Obed-edom (xiii.) David's palace; his children; his victories (xiv.) Bringing up of the ark to Jerusalem, and arrangements for Divine worship in connection therewith (xv., xvi.) David's desire to build a temple, and God's message to him by Nathan (xvii.) Victories over the Philistines, Moabites, Edomites, Syrians, and Ammonites (xviii.—xx. 8). Numbering of the people; infliction of pestilence, and its removal (xxi.) David's preparations for the temple (xxii.) Number and distribution of the Levites and priests (xxiii., xxiv.); the singers and musicians (xxv.); the porters, store-keepers, officers, and judges (xxvi.) The arrangement of the army; the princes and officers (xxvii.) David's last exhortations; the offerings of the princes and people for the temple; David's thanksgiving and prayer; Solomon's establishment on the throne (xxviii., xxix.)

1 It is the peculiar glory of Jewish history, that, whereas the earliest accounts of all other nations are involved in obscurity and fable, this can be clearly traced along an unbroken line to the very commencement of the human race. The genealogies which occupy ch. i.—ix. are mostly repeated from other parts of sacred history, though with considerable additions. They were probably taken from the national registers which existed in the time of Ezra; and were doubtless of great value to the Jews after their return from Babylon, when they would be in danger of losing the distinctions of their tribes and families. They are still of use in illustrating and confirming the Scripture history; and especially in showing the descent of our Saviour through the line of David and Abraham.

2 See Gen. ch. x., and notes. There are apparent discrepancies between these genealogies and other parts of Scripture, which appear to have arisen from the following causes. In some instances, errors or omissions have been made in transcribing; in others, grandsons and remoter descendants are mentioned as sons; in others, again, the successor of a man in his property or titles is called his son; sometimes the same person appears with names varying more or less; and sometimes the same name has been, by our English translators, spelt differently in different places.

3 This genealogy agrees substantially with that in Gen. x. The words 'the children of Aram,' in Gen. x. 23, are left out here; so that Uz and others appear as the sons of Shem, though they were actually his grandsons.

33 Sheba, and Dedan. And the sons of Midian;¹ Ephah, and Ephher, and Henoch, and Abida, and Eldaah. All these are the sons of Keturah.

34 And ^xAbraham begat Isaac. ^yThe sons of Isaac; Esau, and Israel.

35 The sons of ^zEsau; Eliphaz, Reuel, and Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah. The 36 sons of Eliphaz; Teman, and Omar, ^aZephi, and Gatam, Kenaz, and Timna,² and

37 Amalek. The sons of Reuel; Nahath, Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah. And ^bthe

38 sons of Seir; Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah, and Dishon, and Ezar,

39 and Dishan. And the sons of Lotan; Hori, and ^cHomam: and Timna was Lotan's 40 sister. The sons of Shobal; ^dAliah, and Manahath, and Ebal, ^eShephi, and 41 Onan. And the sons of Zibeon; Aiah, and Anah. The sons of Anah; ^fDishon.

42 And the sons of Dishon; ^gAmram, and Eshban, and Ithran, and Cheran. The sons of Ezer; Bilhan, and Zavan, and ^hJakan. The sons of Dishan; Uz, and Aran.

43 Now these are the ⁱkings that reigned in the land of Edom before any king reigned over the children of Israel; Bela the son of Beor: and the name of his

44 city was Dinhabah. And when Bela was dead, Jobab the son of Zerah of Bozrah 45 reigned in his stead. And when Jobab was dead, Husham of the land of the 46 Temanites reigned in his stead. And when Husham was dead, Hadad the son of Bedad, which smote Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his stead: and the 47 name of his city was Avith. And when Hadad was dead, Samlah of Masrekah

48 reigned in his stead. ^kAnd when Samlah was dead, Shaul of Rehoboth by the 49 river reigned in his stead. And when Shaul was dead, Baal-hanan the son of 50 Achbor reigned in his stead. And when Baal-hanan was dead, ^lHadad reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was ^mPai; and his wife's name was Mehetabel, 51 the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab. Hadad died also. And the 52 ⁿdukes³ of Edom were; duke Timnah, duke ^oAliah, duke Jetheth, duke Aholi-

53 bamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon, duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar, duke

54 Magdiel, duke Iram. These are the dukes of Edom.

2 These are the sons of ^pIsrael; ^qReuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, Issachar, 2 and Zebulun, Dan, Joseph, and Benjamin, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

3 THE sons of ^rJudah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah: which three were born unto him of the daughter of ^sShua the Canaanitess. And ^tEr, the firstborn of Judah, 4 was evil in the sight of the LORD; and he slew him. And ^uTamar his daughter-in-law bare him Pharez and Zerah. All the sons of Judah were five.

5,6 The sons of ^vPharez; Hezron, and Hamul. And the sons of Zerah; ^wZimri, 7 ^zand Ethan, and Heman, and Calcol, and ^aDara: five of them in all. And the sons of ^bCarmi; ^cAchar, the troubler of Israel, who transgressed in the thing

8 ^daccursed. And the sons of Ethan; Azariah. The sons also of Hezron, that were 9 born unto him; Jerahmeel, and ^eRam, and ^fChelubai.

10 And Ram ^gbegat Amminadab; and Amminadab begat Nahshon, ^hprince of the 11 children of Judah; and Nahshon begat ⁱSalma, and Salma begat Boaz, and Boaz

12 begat Obed, and Obed begat Jesse, ^kand Jesse begat his firstborn Eliab, and 16 fifth, Ozem the sixth, David the seventh: whose sisters were Zeruiah, and Abigail.

17 ^mAnd the sons of Zeruiah; Abishai, and Joab, and Asahel, three. And ⁿAbigail bare Amasa: and the father of Amasa was ^oJether the Ishmeelite.⁵

18 And Caleb⁶ the son of Hezron begat children of Azubah his wife, and of Jerioth:

19 her sons are these; Jeshur, and Shobab, and Ardon. And when Azubah was 20 dead, Caleb took unto him ^pEphrath, which bare him Hur. And Hur begat

21 Uri, and Uri begat ^qBezaleel. And afterward Hezron went in to the daughter of ^rMachir the father of Gilead, whom he married when he was threescore years

22 old; and she bare him Segub. And Segub begat Jair,⁷ who had three and twenty 23 cities in the land of Gilead. ^sAnd he took Geshur, and Aram, with the towns of Jair, from them, with Kenath, and the towns thereof, even threescore cities.

24 All these belonged to the sons of Machir the father of Gilead. And after that Hezron was dead in Caleb-ephratah, then Abiah Hezron's wife bare him ^tAshur the father of Tekoa.

¹ Isaiah, in ch. lx. 6, 7, couples Midian and Ephah together; also Nebaioth and Kedar: see ver. 29.

² Timna might be the name of a son of Eliphaz (see ver. 51); but as, in Gen. xxxvi. 12, it appears that he had a concubine so named, and that Amalek was her son, the reading of the Alexandrine copy of the Septuagint seems the better—'And Thamna the concubine of Eliphaz bore Amalek.'

³ Or, 'chiefs.' See note on Gen. xxxvi. 1.

⁴ Carmi was son of Zabdi, of the family of Zerah.

⁵ See note on the parallel passage, 2 Sam. xvii. 25.

⁶ The 'Chelubai' of ver. 9; where the Septuagint has 'Caleb.' This verse is obscure. It seems that only Caleb's children by Jerioth are here mentioned. But the Vulgate, Syriac, and Arabic versions make Jerioth the daughter of Caleb by Azubah, and the persons subsequently named the sons of Jerioth.

⁷ See note on Numb. xxxii. 41.

¹ This is the only instance recorded in Scripture of the marriage of a foreign slave to his master's daughter. The object doubtless was to preserve the inheritance in the family. It would appear that, though by the law in Numb. xxvii. an heiress in her own right could not marry an Israelite of another tribe, she might marry a foreigner, if he were a proselyte; as this caused no confusion of inheritances. One of Sheshan's posterity, Zabad, is mentioned in ch. xi. 41 among David's chief men, and is there styled 'the son (i. e. descendant) of Ahlai,' the daughter of Sheshan, ver. 31.

² This was not the daughter of Caleb the son of Je-phunneh, but the daughter of another Caleb, the son of Hezron, who lived ages before.

³ This was another Caleb, the grandson of the one before mentioned, and brother to Uri the father of Bezaleel, who constructed the tabernacle.

⁴ Instead of 'the house of Joab,' it should be 'Beth-joab;' as it is the name of a place.

⁵ Rather, 'But the families of the Sopherites which dwelt at Jabez,' etc.; 'these were Kenites that were descended from Hemath,' etc.

⁶ The descendants of David are more particularly recorded than any others, as being not only the royal family of Judah, but also the family 'of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came' (Rom. i. 3; ix. 5).

² Zedekiah was successor to Jehoiakim, in which sense the word 'son' is sometimes used.

⁴ This remarkable man, whose parentage is not recorded, probably lived soon after the Israelites took possession of Canaan, and when they were greatly straitened and harassed by the remains of the ancient inhabitants. Jabez showed his piety by his earnest desire for the full possession of the promised inheritance, and by seeking it from God through prayer.

⁵ Or, 'that I may be sorrowful no more,' alluding to the signification of his name.

⁶ This word means 'craftsmen' or 'artificers,' and is so translated in Neh. xi. 35, where this place is mentioned. It was probably not far from Jerusalem.

20 father of Keilah the Garmite, and Eshtemoa the Maachathite. And the sons of Shimon were, Amnon, and Rinnah, Ben-hanan, and Tilon. And the sons of Ishi were, Zoheth, and Ben-zoheth.

21 The sons of Shelah¹ the son of Judah were, Er the father of Lecah, and Laadah the father of Mareshah, and the families of the house of them that wrought fine linen, of the house of Ashbea, and Jokim, and the men of Chozeba, and Joash, and Saraph, who had the dominion in Moab, and Jashubi-lehem. And these are ancient things. These were the potters, and those that dwelt among plants and hedges: there they dwelt with the king for his work.

The descendants of Simeon; with their settlements.

24 THE sons of Simeon were, ^lNemuel, and Jamin, ^mJarib, Zerah, and Shaul: 25 Shallum his son, Mibsam his son, Mishma his son. And the sons of Mishma; 27 Hamuel his son, Zacchur his son, Shimei his son. And Shimei had sixteen sons and six daughters; but his brethren had not many children, neither did all their 28 family multiply, like to the children of Judah. And they dwelt at ⁿBeer-sheba, 29 and Moladah, and Hazar-shual, and at ^oBilhah, and at Ezem, and at ^pTolad, and 31 at Bethuel, and at Hormah, and at Ziklag, and at Beth-marcaboth, and ^qHazar-susim, and at Beth-birei, and at Shaaraim. These were their cities unto the reign 32 of David. And their villages were, ^rEtam, and Ain, Rimmon, and Tochen, and 33 Ashan, five cities: and all their villages that were round about the same cities, 34 unto ^sBaal. These were their habitations, and their genealogy. 39 And they went to the entrance of Gedor, even unto the east side of the valley, 40 to seek pasture for their flocks.² And they found fat pasture and good, and the land was wide, and quiet, and peaceable; for they of Ham had dwelt there of old. 41 And these written by name came in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and ^t'smote their tents, and the habitations that were found there, and destroyed them utterly unto this day, and dwelt in their rooms: because there was pasture 42 there for their flocks. And some of them, even of the sons of Simeon, five hundred men, went to mount Seir, having for their captains Pelatiah, and Neariah, and 43 Rephaiah, and Uzziel, the sons of Ishi. And they smote ^u"the rest of the Amalekites that were escaped,³ and dwelt there unto this day.

¹ The genealogy of Shelah (vers. 21—23) is full of difficulties, which appear to have been felt by the most ancient translators, and to be incapable of satisfactory solution with our present knowledge.

² As the tribe of Simeon, at the division of the kingdom, withdrew their allegiance from the house of David, it is probable that the kings of Judah extended their dominion as far as possible into the territories of that tribe; so that they were obliged to seek pasture for their flocks at Gedor, and on the mountains of Seir. This expedition of the Simeonites (ver. 41), which took place during the reign of Hezekiah, must have been probably about the time when the ten tribes were subjugated, and carried into exile, by the Assyrians.

³ The descendants of those who had escaped in the wars which Saul and David had carried on against them.

⁴ The two rights of primogeniture—the sovereignty and a double portion of the inheritance—were divided between Judah and Joseph. See notes on Gen. xlviii. 5; xlix. 8.

⁵ That is, the Reubenites used the country as pasture-land for cattle, just as the Arabs do now. It hence appears that the tribes on the east of the Jordan possessed extensive pasture ground eastwards.

⁶ Or, 'Hagarenes;' descendants of Hagar.

fell by their hand: and they dwelt in their tents throughout all the east land of Gilead.

11 And the children of Gad dwelt over against them, in the land of ' Bashan unto 12 Salcah: Joel the chief, and Shapham the next, and Jaanai, and Shaphat in 13 Bashan. And their brethren of the house of their fathers were, Michael, and 14 Meshullam, and Sheba, and Jorai, and Jachan, and Zia, and Heber, seven. These are the children of Abihail the son of Huri, the son of Jaroah, the son of Gilead, 15 the son of Michael, the son of Jeshishai, the son of Jahdo, the son of Buz; Ahi 16 the son of Abdiel, the son of Guni, chief of the house of their fathers. And they dwelt in Gilead in Bashan, and in her towns, and in all the suburbs of ^m Sharon,¹ 17 upon their borders. All these were reckoned by genealogies in the days of ⁿ Jotham king of Judah, and in the days of ^o Jeroboam king of Israel.

18 The sons of Reuben, and the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, of valiant men, men able to bear buckler and sword, and to shoot with bow, and skilful in war, were four and forty thousand seven hundred and threescore, that went out 19 to the war. And they made war with the Hagarites, with ^p Jetur, and Nephish, 20 and Nodab. And ^q they were helped against them, and the Hagarites were delivered into their hand, and all that were with them: ^r for they cried to God in the battle, and he was intreated of them; because they ^s put their trust in 21 him. And they took away their cattle; of their camels fifty thousand, and of sheep two hundred and fifty thousand, and of asses two thousand, and of men an 22 hundred thousand. For there fell down many slain, because ^t the war was of God. And they dwelt in their steads until ^u the captivity.

23 And the children of the half tribe of Manasseh dwelt in the land: they increased from Bashan unto Baal-hermon and Senir, and unto mount Hermon.
24 And these were the heads of the house of their fathers, even Ephraim, and Ishi, and Eliel, and Azriel, and Jeremiah, and Hodaviah, and Jahdiel, mighty men of valour, famous men, and heads of the house of their fathers.

25 And they transgressed against the God of their fathers, and went a ^x whoring 26 after the gods of the people of the land, whom God destroyed before them. And the God of Israel stirred up the spirit of ^y Pul king of Assyria, and the spirit of ^z Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria, and he carried them away, even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, and brought them unto ^a Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the river Gozan, unto this day.

^z Jos. 21. 7, 34.

¹ Heman was grandson to Samuel (here called 'Shemuel,' which is a literal transcript of the Hebrew), the prophet and judge. As the genealogies of Heman, Asaph, and Ethan (vers. 33—47) are carried back to Levi, it may be inferred that their offices and duties in connection with the celebration of Divine worship were regarded as peculiarly important and honourable.

² Asaph and Heman were both Levites; but the one was descended from Gershon, the other from Kohath.

³ The race of Aaron all resided in the districts allotted to the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin.

⁴ Only eleven are here named: two others, Jutta and Gibeon, are mentioned in Josh. xxi. 16, 17. These had perhaps ceased to exist when this book was written. The list of Levitical cities given in the remainder of this chapter should be compared with Josh. xxi., which appears, from internal and collateral evidence, to be the most accurate text.

66 And ^a the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath had cities of their coasts 67 out of the tribe of Ephraim. ^b And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, Shechem in mount Ephraim with her suburbs; they gave also Gezer with her 68 suburbs, and ^c Jokmeam with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs, 69 and Aijalon with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs: and out of 70 the half tribe of Manasseh; Aner with her suburbs, and Bileam with her suburbs, for the family of the remnant of the sons of Kohath.

71 Unto the sons of Gershon were given out of the family of the half tribe of and Kirjathaim with her suburbs.

77 Unto the rest of the children of Merari were given out of the tribe of Zebulun, 78 Rimmon with her suburbs, Tabor with her suburbs: and on the other side Jordan by Jericho, on the east side of Jordan, were given them out of the tribe of ¹ This is one of the few facts which are recorded respecting the doings of the Israelites during their sojourn in Egypt. It appears that a body of Ephraimites, headed by the sons of Zabad, the sixth in descent from Ephraim, made an inroad into the land of the Philistines (such as the Bedouin Arabs at this day are in the habit of making), with the view of seizing the cattle of the people of Gath; but were repulsed with much slaughter, and Zabad lost all his sons.

² Some suppose that Ephraim was still living at this period; others, that the name Zabad ought to be substituted here for 'Ephraim.'

³ As the first king of Israel was a Benjamite, and part of the tribe of Benjamin adhered to Judah on the division of the kingdom, and shared afterwards in its return from Babylon, a fuller account is given of that tribe than of some others. This genealogy should be compared with that in Numb. xxvi. 38, as the term sons is here employed with the usual latitude of signification.

⁴ Probably meaning that he settled them out of the family (ver. 6). See Gen. xxv. 6.

⁵ As Hushim, and Shaharaim's offspring by her, are mentioned in ver. 11, it is supposed that 'Hodesh' (or rather Chodesh) is another name for 'Baara.'

28 Eliah, and Zichri, the sons of Jeroham. These were heads of the fathers, by their generations, chief men. These dwelt¹ in Jerusalem.

29 And at Gibeon dwelt the ^e father of Gibeon; whose ^f wife's name was Maachah: 30 and his firstborn son Abdon, and Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Nadab, and Gedor, 32 and Ahio, and ^g Zacher. And Mikloth begat ^h Shimeah. And these also dwelt 33 with their brethren in Jerusalem, over against them. And ⁱ Ner² begat Kish, and Kish begat Saul, and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchi-shua, and ^k Abinadab, 34 and ^l Esh-baal. And the son of Jonathan was ^m Merib-baal; and Merib-baal 35 begat ⁿ Micah. And the sons of Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and ^o Tarea, 36 and Ahaz. And Ahaz begat ^p Jehoadah; and Jehoadah begat Alemeth, and 37 Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza, and Moza begat Binea: ^q Rapha 38 was his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son: and Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and 39 Hanan. All these were the sons of Azel. And the sons of Eshek his brother 40 were, Ulam his firstborn, Jehush the second, and Eliphelet the third. And the sons of Ulam were mighty men of valour, archers, and had many sons, and sons' sons, an hundred and fifty. All these are of the sons of Benjamin.

9 So ^r all Israel were reckoned by genealogies; and, behold, they were written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah, ^s who were carried away to Babylon for their transgression.

1 Commentators differ in opinion as to whether the period here referred to was before or after the exile at Babylon. It appears from Neh. xi. 1, 2, that residence at Jerusalem was for some time after the return of the Jews reckoned a proof of patriotism, as, in consequence of the unsettled state of the country, the capital was a post of danger. From a comparison of that account with this, it seems probable that they both relate to the same period, namely, after the exile. See note on ch. ix. 2.

2 Saul's pedigree is carried higher in 1 Sam. ix. 1. There Kish is said to be the 'son' of Abiel; but he was his grandson, as appears from 1 Sam. xiv. 51.

3 This corresponds with the enumeration in Neh. xi. 3; only in the latter is added, 'the children of Solomon's servants.' By 'first inhabitants' is probably meant those who first returned from Babylon, and took up their abode in the cities of Judea, especially in Jerusalem. But some understand this passage as applying to the times preceding the exile, taking 'first' to mean the former or ancient inhabitants.

4 This is probably Seraiah, mentioned in Neh. xi. 11, as the names of his progenitors for five generations are the same, and the same office is assigned to him, namely, that of 'ruler of the house of God;' which perhaps means the manager of its secular, as the high priest was of its spiritual concerns.

5 Several names seem to be omitted in the genealogies of these persons, and others introduced which are omitted elsewhere.

6 The same Hebrew words are translated in Neh. xi. 14, 'mighty men of valour;' but the rendering here is no doubt the correct one, as the phrase is intended to express their capability for the temple-service, and not for warlike enterprises.

7 Comp. Neh. xii. 28, 29; where it is said, 'the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.'

19 ward: they were porters in the companies of the children of Levi. And Shallum the son of Kore, the son of Ebiasaph, the son of Korah, and his brethren, of the house of his father, the Korahites, were over the work of the service, keepers of the gates of the tabernacle: and their fathers, being over the host of the Lord, were keepers of the entry. And ^aPhinehas the son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past,¹ and the Lord was with him. And Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah was porter² of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy in their villages, whom ^bDavid and Samuel³ ^cthe seer did ordain in their set office. So they and their children had the oversight of the gates of the house of the Lord, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards. In four quarters were the porters, toward the east, west, north, and south. And their brethren, which were in their villages, were to come ^dafter seven days from time to time with them. For these Levites, the four chief porters, were in their set office, and were over the chambers [or, store-houses] and treasuries of the house of God. And they lodged round about the house of God, because the charge was upon them, and the opening thereof every morning pertained to them. And certain of them had the charge of the ministering vessels, that they should bring them in and out by tale. Some of them also were appointed to oversee the vessels, and all the instruments [or, vessels] of the sanctuary, and the fine flour, and the wine, and the oil, and the frankincense, and the spices. And some of the sons of the priests made ^ethe ointment of the spices. And Mattithiah, one of the Levites, who was the firstborn of Shallum the Korahite, had the set office ^fover the things that were made in the pans. And other of their brethren, of the sons of the Kohathites, ^g*were* over the shewbread, to prepare it every sabbath. And these are ^hthe singers,⁴ chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers were free: for they were employed in that work day and night. These chief fathers of the Levites were chief throughout their generations; these dwelt at Jerusalem.

The genealogy of Saul repeated.

35 AND in Gibeon⁵ dwelt the father of Gibeon, Jehiel, whose wife's name was 36 Maachah: and his firstborn son Abdon; then Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Ner, 37 and Nadab, and Gedor, and Ahio, and Zechariah, and Mikloth. And Mikloth 38 begat Shimeam. And they also dwelt with their brethren at Jerusalem, over 39 against their brethren. ^kAnd Ner begat Kish; and Kish begat Saul; and Saul 40 begat Jonathan, and Malchi-shua, and Abinadab, and Esh-baal. And the son of 41 Jonathan was Merib-baal: and Merib-baal begat Micah. And the sons of Micah 42 were, Pithon, and Melech, and Tahrea, ^land Ahaz. And Ahaz begat Jarah; and 43 Jarah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza; and 44 Moza begat Binea; and Rephaiah his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son. And Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan: these were the sons of Azel.

The death of Saul and Jonathan.

10 NOW ^mthe Philistines⁶ fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled from 2 before the Philistines, and fell down slain [or, wounded] in mount Gilboa. And the Philistines followed hard after Saul, and after his sons; and the Philistines 3 slew Jonathan, and ⁿAbinadab, and Malchi-shua, the sons of Saul. And the battle went sore against Saul, and the archers hit him, and he was wounded of 4 the archers. Then said Saul to his armourbearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith; lest these uncircumcised come and abuse me. But his armourbearer would not; for he was sore afraid. So Saul took a sword, and fell 5 upon it. And when his armourbearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise 6 on the sword, and died. So Saul died, and his three sons, and all his house⁷ 7 died together. And when all the men of Israel that were in the valley saw that

¹ The same order seems to have been observed after the captivity as before; hence the references to past times, which supplied the model for these arrangements.

² The Septuagint reads, 'And with him was Zechariah, the son of Meshelemiah, porter,' etc.

⁴ The Syriac reads 'keepers:' but the version in the text appears preferable. The singers were free from the laborious work of the sanctuary, having to maintain constantly the service of praise.

⁵ Vers. 35—44 are a repetition of ch. viii. 29—38.

⁷ All his sons that were in the battle were slain: see 1 Sam. xxxi. 6. Ish-bosheth, and some others who were not there, survived.

they fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, then they forsook their cities, and fled: and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to strip the 9 slain, that they found Saul and his sons fallen in mount Gilboa. And when they had stripped him, they took his head, and his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to carry tidings unto their idols, and to the people.

10 ^o And they put his armour in the house of their gods, and fastened his head in the temple of Dagon.

11 And when all Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul, 12 they arose, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and buried their bones under the oak in Jabesh, and fasted seven days.

13 So Saul died for his transgression which he committed against the LORD,
^p even against the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and also for asking 14 counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, ^q to inquire of it; and inquired not of the LORD: therefore he slew him, and ^r turned the kingdom unto David the son of ^s Jesse.

David is made king in Israel; and takes Jerusalem from the Jebusites.

11 THEN ^t all Israel gathered themselves to David unto Hebron, saying, Behold, 2 we are thy bone and thy flesh. And moreover in time past, even when Saul was king, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the LORD thy God said unto thee, Thou shalt ^u feed [or, rule] my people Israel, and thou shalt

3 be ruler over my people Israel. Therefore came all the elders of Israel to the king to Hebron; and David made a covenant with them in Hebron before the LORD; and ^x they anointed David king over Israel, according to the word of the LORD by ^y Samuel.

4 And David and all Israel ^z went to Jerusalem, which is Jebus; ^a where the Jebusites were, the inhabitants of the land. And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David, Thou shalt not come hither. Nevertheless David took the castle of

6 Zion, which is the city of David. And David said, Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be chief and captain. So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first

7 up, and was chief. And David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called it the city of ^b David. And he built the city round about, even from ^c Millo¹ round

9 about: and Joab repaired the rest of the city. So David waxed greater and greater: for the LORD of hosts was with him.

David's heroes.

10 ^d THESE also are the chief of the mighty men whom David had, who strengthened themselves with him [or, held strongly with him] in his kingdom, and with all Israel, to make him king, according to ^e the word of the LORD concerning

11 Israel. And this is the number of the mighty men² whom David had; Jashobeam, ^f an Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lifted up his spear against three 12 hundred slain by him at one time. And after him was Eleazar the son of Dodo, the Ahohite, who was ^g one of the three mighties. He was with David at ^g Pas-

13 dammim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley; and the people fled from before the Philistines.

14 And they set themselves in the midst of that parcel, and delivered it, and slew the Philistines; and the LORD saved them by a great deliverance.

15 Now three of the thirty captains ^h went down to the rock to David, into the cave of Adullam; and the host of the Philistines encamped ⁱ in the valley of 16 Rephaim. And David was then in the hold, and the Philistines' garrison was then at Beth-lehem. And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me

18 drink of the water of the well of Beth-lehem, that is at the gate! And the three brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but

19 David would not drink of it, but poured it out to the LORD, and said, My God forbid it me, that I should do this thing: shall I drink the blood of these men that have put their lives in jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it. Therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mightiest.

20 ^j And Abishai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his spear against three hundred, he slew them, and had a name among the three.

21 ^k Of the three, he was more honourable than the two; for he was their captain: howbeit he attained not to the first three.

12 NOW ^f these are they that came to David to ^g Ziklag, while he yet kept himself close because of Saul the son of Kish: and they were among the mighty men,
 2 helpers of the war: they were armed with bows, and could use both the right hand and ^h the left in hurling stones and shooting arrows out of a bow, even of 3 Saul's brethren of Benjamin.³ The chief was Ahiezer, then Joash, the sons of 4 Shemaah the Gibeathite; and Jeziel, and Pelet, the sons of Azmaveth; and 5 Berachah, and Jehu the Antothite, and Ismaiah the Gibeonite, a mighty man among the thirty, and over the thirty; and Jeremiah, and Jahaziel, and Johanan,
 6 and Josabad the Gederathite, Eluzai, and Jerimoth, and Bealiah, and Shemariah, 7 and Shephatiah the Haruphite, Elkanah, and Jesiah, and Azareel, and Joezer, and 8 Jashobeam, the Korhites, and Joelah, and Zebadiah, the sons of Jeroham of Gedor.

8 And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David into the hold to the wilderness men of might, and men of war fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler, whose faces were like the faces of ⁱ lions, and were ^h as swift as 9 the roes upon the mountains; Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Eliab the third,
 10 Mishmannah the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth, Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh, 12 Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth, Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the 14 eleventh. These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host: one of the least was over an hundred, and the greatest over a thousand [or, one that was least 15 could resist an hundred, and the greatest a thousand]. These are they that went over Jordan in the first month, when it had overflowed all his ^l banks; and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west.

16 And there came of the children of Benjamin and Judah to the hold unto David.
 17 And David went out to meet them, and answered and said unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, ^m mine heart shall be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies,⁴ seeing there is no wrong in mine hands,
 18 the God of our fathers look thereon, and rebuke it. Then ⁿ the spirit came upon ^o Amasai, who was chief of the captains, and he said, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for ^p thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

A list of those who came to David at Hebron to make him king.

23 AND these are the numbers of the bands that were ready armed to the war, and ^u came to David to Hebron, ^v to ^w turn the kingdom of Saul to him, ^x according 24 to the word of the LORD. The children of Judah that bare shield and spear were 25 six thousand and eight hundred, ready armed to the war. Of the children of 26 Simeon, mighty men of valour for the war, seven thousand and one hundred. Of 27 the children of Levi ^y four thousand and six hundred. And Jehoiada ^z was the leader of the Aaronites, and with him were three thousand and seven hundred; 28 and ^a Zadok, a young man mighty of valour, and of his father's house twenty and 29 two captains. And of the children of Benjamin, the kindred of Saul, three 30 thousand: for hitherto ^b the greatest part of them had kept the ward ^c of the house of Saul. And of the children of Ephraim twenty thousand and eight 31 hundred, mighty men of valour, famous throughout the house of their fathers.
 32 And of the half tribe of Manasseh eighteen thousand, which were expressed by name, ^d to come and make David king. And of the children of Issachar, ^e which were men that had understanding ^f of the times, to know what Israel ought to do; 33 the heads of them were two hundred; and all their brethren were at their commandment. Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, expert in war, with all 34 instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could keep ^g rank: they were not of double heart. And of Naphtali a thousand captains, and with them with shield 35 and spear thirty and seven thousand. And of the Danites expert in war twenty 36 and eight thousand and six hundred. And of Asher, such as went forth to battle, 37 expert in war, forty thousand. And on the other side of Jordan, of the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and of the half tribe of Manasseh, with all manner of instruments of war for the battle, an hundred and twenty thousand.
 38 All these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, ^h to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel were 39 of one heart to make David king. And there they were with David three days, 40 eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them. Moreover they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar and Zebulun and Naphtali, brought bread on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, and meat, meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly:
 for there was joy in Israel.

David takes the ark from Kirjath-jearim, and carries it to the house of Obed-edom.

13 AND David consulted with the captains of thousands and hundreds, and with 2 every leader. And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, let us send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are ^d left in all the land of Israel, and with them also to the priests and Levites which are in their cities and suburbs, that they may 3 gather themselves unto us: and let us bring again the ark of our God to us: ^e for 4 we inquired not at it in the days of Saul. And all the congregation said that they would do so: for the thing was right in the eyes of all the people.
 5 So ^f David gathered all Israel together, from ^g Shihor of Egypt even unto the 6 entering of Hemath, to bring the ark of God ^h from Kirjath-jearim. And David

 David was displeased because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza: wherefore 12 that place is called Perez-uzza [i. e. The breach of Uzza] to this day. And David was afraid of God that day, saying, How shall I bring the ark of God home 13 to me? So David brought not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.

David's battles with the Philistines.

8 AND when the Philistines heard that ¹⁰ David was anointed king over all Israel, all the Philistines went up to seek David. And David heard of it, and 9 went out against them. And the Philistines came and spread themselves ¹¹ in 10 the valley of Rephaim.³ And David inquired of God, saying, Shall I go up against the Philistines? and wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the 11 LORD said unto him, Go up; for I will deliver them into thine hand. So they came up to Baal-perazim; and David smote them there. Then David said, God hath broken in upon mine enemies by mine hand like the breaking forth of 12 waters: therefore they called the name of that place Baal-perazim [i. e. A place of breaches]. And when they had left their gods there, David gave a commandment, and they were burned with fire.
 13 ¹² And the Philistines yet again spread themselves abroad in the valley.
 14 Therefore David inquired again of God; and God said unto him, Go not up after them; turn away from them, ¹³ and come upon them over against the mulberry 15 trees. And it shall be, when thou shalt hear a sound of going in the tops of the mulberry trees, that then thou shalt go out to battle: for God is gone forth 16 before thee to smite the host of the Philistines. David therefore did as God commanded him: and they smote the host of the Philistines from ¹⁴ Gibeon even to Gazer.
 17 And ¹⁵ the fame of David went out into all lands; and the LORD ¹⁶ brought the

4 This psalm forms part of Psalms cv., cxvi., cvi., on which see the notes. Some think that the writer does not here give the psalm which David appointed, but portions of those which were used in his own time. But it is more likely that this was first composed by David, and afterwards wrought into later psalms. The former part, to ver. 22, refers chiefly to God's favour to the Israelites; the remainder to Messiah's reign over all nations.

1 See note on 2 Sam. vi. 17. The ark and the tabernacle had been separated ever since the time of Eli. Asaph and his brethren were attached to the ark as singers; while Heman and Jeduthun acted in the same capacity at the tabernacle (vers. 41, 43), which was now at Gibeon.

2 These words seem to be repeated, by an oversight of the transcriber, from ver. 40. They are not in the Sept.

3 That is, for the praise of God.

3 And it came to pass the same night, that the word of God came to Nathan, saying,
 4 Go and tell David my servant, Thus saith the LORD, Thou shalt not build me an 5 house to dwell in: for I have not dwelt in an house since the day that I brought 6 up Israel unto this day; but have gone from tent to tent,¹ and from one tabernacle 7 to another. Wheresoever I have walked with all Israel, spake I a word to any 8 of the judges of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people, saying, Why have 9 ye not built me an house of cedars? Now therefore thus shalt thou say unto my 10 servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, I took thee from the ^hsheepcote, 11 even from following the sheep, that thou shouldest be ruler over my people 12 Israel: and I have been with thee whithersoever thou hast walked, and have 13 cut off all thine enemies from before thee, and have made thee a name like the 14 name of the great men that are in the earth. Also I will ordain a place for my 15 people Israel, and ^kwill plant them, and they shall dwell in their place, and 16 shall be moved ^lno more; neither shall the ^mchildren of wickedness waste them
 17 any more, as at the beginning, and since the time that I commanded ⁿjudges 18 to be over my people Israel. Moreover I will subdue all thine enemies. Further-19 more I tell thee that the LORD will build thee an house. And it shall come to 20 pass, when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I
 21 will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish 22 his kingdom. He shall build me an house, and I will stablish his throne for 23 ever. ^oI will be his father, and he shall be my son: and ^pI will not take my 24 mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee: but ^qI will 25 settle him in mine house and in my kingdom for ever: and ^rhis throne shall be 26 established for evermore.

15 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

16 ^sAnd David the king came and sat before the LORD, and said, 'Who am I, O 17 LORD God, and what is mine ^uhouse, that thou hast brought me hitherto? And 18 yet this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God; for thou hast also spoken of thy 19 servant's house for a great while to come, and hast regarded me according to the 20 estate of a man of high degree, O LORD God.² What can David speak more to 21 thee for the honour of thy servant? for thou knowest thy servant. O LORD, for 22 thy ^vservant's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou done all this 23 greatness in making known all these great things. O LORD, there is ^xnone like 24 thee, neither is there any God beside thee, according to all that we have heard 25 with our ears. ^yAnd what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, 26 whom God went to redeem to be his own people, to make thee a name of great-
 27 ness and terribleness, by driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou 28 hast redeemed out of Egypt? For thy people Israel didst thou make ^zthine own 29 people for ever; and thou, LORD, becamest their God. Therefore now, LORD, let 30 the thing that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant and concerning his house 31 be established for ever, and do as thou hast said. Let it even be established, that 32 thy name may be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God of 33 Israel, even a God to Israel: and let the house of David thy servant be established 34 before thee. For thou, O my God, hast told thy servant that thou wilt build him 35 an house: therefore³ thy servant hath found in his heart to pray before thee.
 36 And now, LORD, thou art God, and hast promised this goodness unto thy servant:
 37 now therefore let it please thee [or, it hath pleased thee] to bless the house of thy 38 servant, that it may be before thee for ever: for thou blessest, O LORD, and it 39 shall be blessed for ever.

 subdued them, and took Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And he smote Moab; and the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts.

 7 chariots.

8 And when the Syrians of ^dDamascus came to help Hadarezer king of Zobah, 9 David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men. Then David put garrisons in Syria-damascus; and the Syrians became David's servants, and brought gifts. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went. And David took the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadarezer, and brought them to Jerusalem. Likewise from Tibhath, and from Chun, cities¹ of Hadarezer, brought David very much brass, wherewith Solomon made the brasen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

Now when Tou king of Hamath heard how David had smitten all the host of Hadarezer king of Zobah; he sent Hadoram his son to king David, to inquire of his welfare, and to congratulate him, because he had fought against Hadarezer, and smitten him; (for Hadarezer had war with Tou;) and with him all manner of vessels of gold and silver and brass. Them also king David dedicated unto the LORD, with the silver and the gold that he brought from all these nations; from Edom, and from Moab, and from the children of Ammon, and from the Philistines, and from Amalek.

Moreover Abishai the son of Zeruiah slew of the Edomites in the Valley of Salt eighteen thousand. And he put garrisons in Edom; and all the Edomites became David's servants.

Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

So David reigned over all Israel, and executed judgment and justice among all his people. And Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host; and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, recorder.² And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and Abimelech the son of Abiathar, were the priests; and Shaysha was scribe; and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites and the Pelethites; and the sons of David were chief about the king.

Insult of the king of Ammon; defeat of the Ammonites and Syrians; siege and capture of Rabbah; further defeats of the Philistines.

NOW it came to pass after this, that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon died, and his son reigned in his stead. And David said, I will show kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash, because his father showed kindness to me. And David sent messengers to comfort him concerning his father. So the servants of David came into the land of the children of Ammon to Hanun, to comfort him. But the princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanun, Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? are not his servants come unto thee for to search, and to overthrow, and to spy out the land? Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and shaved them, and cut off their garments in the midst hard by their buttocks, and sent them away. Then there went certain, and told David how the men were served. And he sent to meet them: for the men were greatly ashamed. And the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

And when the children of Ammon saw that they had made themselves odious to David, Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousand talents of silver to hire them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and out of Syria-maachah, and out of Zobah. So they hired thirty and two thousand chariots,³ and the king of Maachah and his people; who came and pitched before Medeba. And the children of Ammon gathered themselves together from their cities, and came to battle.

And when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the host of the mighty men. And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array before the gate of the city: and the kings that were come were by themselves in the field. Now when Joab saw that the battle was set against him before and behind, he chose out of all the choice [or, young men] of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians. And the rest of the people he delivered unto the hand of Abishai his brother, and they set themselves in array against the children of Ammon. And he said, If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will help thee. Be of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God: and let the LORD do that which is good in his sight.

So Joab and the people that were with him drew nigh before the Syrians unto the battle; and they fled before him. And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, they likewise fled before Abishai his brother, and entered into the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem.

1 In 2 Sam. x. 18 the number is 'seven hundred.'

2 This chapter contains a brief summary of the political events related in 2 Sam. xi., xii., xxi.; omitting David's personal and family history.

3 See the parallel passage, 2 Sam. xii. 31, where a Hebrew word is used differing only by a part of one letter, and signifying 'he put them;' and some manuscripts have the same reading here.

4 The word 'Satan' signifies an adversary; and evidently refers to the evil spirit, who tempts men to sin.

5 The difference between the numbers here and in 2 Sam. xxiv. 9 is not easily explained; but probably some were included in one account who were omitted in the other. Some suppose that 2 Sam. xxiv. 9 does not include the standing army of 300,000 men, as their numbers were known; but this does not quite reconcile the passages.

the angel of the LORD destroying throughout all the coasts of Israel. Now there-13 fore advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me. And David said unto Gad, I am in a great strait: let me fall now into the hand of the LORD; for very great [or, many] are his mercies: but let me not fall into the hand of man.

14 So the Lord sent pestilence upon Israel: and there fell of Israel seventy 15 thousand men. And God sent an ^m angel unto Jerusalem to destroy it: and as he was destroying, the LORD beheld, and ⁿ he repented him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed, It is enough, stay now thine hand. And the angel 16 of the LORD stood by the threshingfloor of ^o Ornan the Jebusite. And David lifted up his eyes, and ^p saw the angel of the LORD stand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem.
Then David and the elders of Israel, who were clothed in sackcloth, fell upon 17 their faces. And David said unto God, Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? even I it is that have sinned and done evil indeed; but as for these sheep, what have they done? let thine hand, I pray thee, O LORD my God, be on me, and on my father's house; but not on thy people, that they should be plagued.

18 Then the ^q angel of the LORD commanded Gad to say to David, that David should go up, and set up an altar unto the LORD in the threshingfloor of Ornan 19 the Jebusite. And David went up at the saying of Gad, which he spake in the 20 name of the LORD. And Ornan turned back, and saw the angel; and his four 21 sons with him hid themselves. Now Ornan was threshing wheat. And as David came to Ornan, Ornan looked and saw David, and went out of the threshingfloor, 22 and bowed himself to David with his face to the ground. Then David said to Ornan, Grant me the place of this threshingfloor, that I may build an altar therein unto the LORD: thou shalt grant it me for the full price: that the plague 23 may be stayed from the people. And Ornan said unto David, Take it to thee, and let my lord the king do that which is good in his eyes: lo, I give thee the oxen also for burnt offerings, and the threshing instruments for wood, and the 24 wheat for the meat offering; I give it all. And king David said to Ornan, Nay; but I will verily buy it for the full price: for I will not take that which is 25 thine for the LORD, nor offer burnt offerings without cost. So ^r David gave to 26 Ornan for the place six hundred shekels of gold¹ by weight. And David built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings, and called upon the LORD; and ^s he answered him from heaven by fire² upon the 27 altar of burnt offering. And the LORD commanded the angel; and he put up his sword again into the sheath thereof.

28 At that time when David saw that the LORD had answered him in the 29 threshingfloor of Ornan the Jebusite, then he sacrificed there. ^t For the tabernacle of the LORD, which Moses made in the wilderness, and the altar of the 30 burnt offering, were at that season in the high place at ^u Gibeon. But David could not go before it to inquire of God: for he was afraid because of the sword 22 of the angel of the LORD. Then David said, ^x This is the house of the LORD God, and this is the altar of the burnt offering for Israel.

2 AND David commanded to gather together ^y the strangers that were in the land of Israel; and he set masons to hew wrought stones to build the house of God.
3 And David prepared iron in abundance for the nails for the doors of the gates, 4 and for the joinings; and brass in abundance ^z without weight; also cedar trees in abundance: for the ^a Zidonians and they of Tyre brought much cedar wood to 5 David. And David said, ^b Solomon my son is young and tender, and the house that is to be builded for the LORD must be exceeding magnifical, of fame and of glory throughout all countries: I will therefore now make preparation for it. So David prepared abundantly before his death.

6 Then he called for Solomon his son, and charged him to build an house for the 7 LORD God of Israel. And David said to Solomon, My son, as for me, ^c it was in 8 my mind to build an house ^d unto the name of the LORD my God: but the word of the LORD came to me, saying, ^e Thou hast shed blood abundantly, and hast made great wars: thou shalt not build an house unto my name, because thou 9 hast shed much blood upon the earth in my sight. ^f Behold, a son shall be born to thee,³ who shall be a man of rest; and I will give him ^g rest from all his enemies round about: for his name shall be Solomon [i. e. peaceable], and I will 10 give peace and quietness unto Israel in his days. ^a He shall build an house¹ for my name; and ⁱ he shall be my son, and I will be his father; and I will establish 11 the throne of his kingdom over Israel for ever. Now, my son, ^h the LORD be give thee charge concerning Israel, that thou mayest keep the law of the LORD and judgments which the LORD charged Moses with concerning Israel: ⁿ be strong, and of good courage; dread not, nor be dismayed.

 14 Now, behold, in my trouble² [or, poverty] I have prepared for the house of the LORD an hundred thousand talents³ of gold, and a thousand thousand talents of silver; and of brass and iron ^o without weight; for it is in abundance: timber 15 also and stone have I prepared; and thou mayest add thereto. Moreover there are workmen with thee in abundance, hewers and workers of stone and timber [i. e. masons and carpenters], and all manner of cunning men for every manner of 16 work. Of the gold, the silver, and the brass, and the iron, there is no number.
 Arise therefore, and be doing, and ^p the LORD be with thee.
 17 David also commanded all the princes of Israel to help Solomon his son, saying, 18 Is not the LORD your God with you? ^q and hath he not given you rest on every side? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand; and the land 19 is subdued before the LORD, and before his people. Now ^r set your heart and your soul to seek the LORD your God; arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the LORD God, to ^s bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built ^t to the name of the LORD.
 23 So when David was old and full of days, he made ^u Solomon his son king over Israel.

Number and distribution of the Levites.

2 AND he gathered together all the princes of Israel, with the priests and the 3 Levites. Now the Levites were numbered from the age of ^x thirty years and upward: and their number by their polls, man by man, was thirty and eight 4 thousand.⁴ Of which, twenty and four thousand were to set forward [or, to oversee] the work of the house of the LORD; and six thousand were ^y officers and 5 judges: moreover four thousand were porters; and four thousand praised the LORD with the instruments ^z which I made, said David, to praise therewith.
 6 And ^a David divided them into courses among the sons of Levi, namely, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.
 7, 8 Of the ^b Gershonites were, ^c Laadan, and Shimei. The sons of Laadan; the 9 chief was Jehiel, and Zetham, and Joel, three. The sons of Shimei; Shelomith, and Haziel, and Haran, three. These were the chief of the fathers of Laadan.
 10 And the sons of Shimei were, Jahath, ^d Zina, and Jeush, and Beriah. These four 11 were the sons of Shimei. And Jahath was the chief, and Zizah⁵ the second: but Jeush and Beriah had not many sons; therefore they were in one reckoning, according to their father's house.

1 The circumstance that a peaceful prince was appointed to build the temple (ver. 10) reminds us that it was designed to show God's 'thoughts of peace' towards sinful man; and carries forward our thoughts to him who is styled 'the Prince of peace' (Isa. ix. 6), and is emphatically called 'our peace' (Eph. ii. 14).

2 This may refer to the general complexion of David's life, as one of conflict and endurance.

3 The ordinary calculation of the talent makes it equal to about 125 lbs. troy weight. This, however, would make the amount so immensely large, that some suppose the talent here mentioned to be either the Babylonian talent, which was probably in use among the Jews after the captivity, when the books of Chronicles were written, and the value of which was about two-thirds of the above amount; or the Syrian talent, which was only one-fifth of the Babylonian. The latter supposition produces a result which approximates to the statement of Josephus, that the amount was ten thousand talents of gold and a hundred thousand of silver. But on these and some other large numbers, see note in p. 516.

4 The Levites had quadrupled since the census in the time of Moses (see Numb. xxvi.) At that time the males above a month old amounted to 23,000; now those above thirty years old amounted to 38,000. This great increase in their number, as well as in the population of Israel, required the new organization which is described in this and the three succeeding chapters, and which was fully carried into effect after the erection of the temple. The greater part, to the number of 24,000, were engaged in the sacrificial and other duties of the temple. These served a thousand in each week; so making twenty-four courses in all. Others, to the number of 6,000, were judges and officers in the country districts; others were porters to guard the temple; and others, singers or musicians.

24 These were the sons of ^z Levi after the house of their fathers; even the chief of the fathers, as they were counted by number of names by their polls, that did the work for the service of the house of the LORD, from the age of ^a twenty years 25 and upward. For David said, the LORD God of Israel ^b hath given rest unto his 26 people, that they may dwell in Jerusalem for ever: and also unto the Levites; they shall no more ^c carry the tabernacle, nor any vessels of it for the service 27 thereof. For by the last words of David the Levites were numbered from 28 twenty⁴ years old and above: because their office was ^d to wait on the sons of Aaron for the service of the house of the LORD, in the courts, and in the chambers, and in the purifying of all holy things, and the work of the service of the house

32 unto them, continually before the LORD: and that they should ^m keep the charge

Distribution of the priests, and genealogy of the Levites.

24 NOW these are the divisions of the sons of Aaron. ^o The sons of Aaron; Nadab, 2 and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar. But ^p Nadab and Abihu died before their father, and had no children: therefore Eleazar and Ithamar executed the priest's 3 office. And David distributed them, both Zadok of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service.⁶

4 And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided. Among the sons of Eleazar there were 5 sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar according to the house of their fathers. Thus were they divided by lot,⁷ one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God, were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

6 And Shemaiah the son of Nethaneel the scribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech⁸ the son of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites: one principal household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar.

3 According to the law in Numb. xxvii. 1; xxxvi. 5—9.

4 The Levites, being now released from that which had originally been the most laborious part of their office—the transportation of the tabernacle with its furniture—were employed at the age of twenty (instead of thirty, as before) in the service of the sanctuary. The service of the temple about to be erected would require a greater number of ministers. Under Hezekiah (2 Chron. xxxi. 17), and after the captivity (Ezra iii. 8), the Levitical service began at the age fixed by David. It may be observed that the full and minute directions respecting the bearing of the sanctuary, which are given in the Pentateuch, afford one incidental proof of its antiquity; as a later authorship would have been likely to frame the law according to the practice existing at the time.

5 Some suppose this to refer to the standards of all the weights and measures which were kept at the sanctuary, that the Levites, who acted as magistrates, might try those used by the people, in order to prevent any fraud in this respect. But it more probably means, that the Levites were to take care that the full amount of offerings of every kind were duly presented.

6 To prevent all confusion, now that the priests were so much increased in number, David distributed them, as he had done the Levites, into twenty-four courses; viz., sixteen of the descendants of Eleazar, and eight of those of Ithamar.

7 Though the lot was resorted to, it did not supersede the exercise of judgment in those cases which admitted of it. The object of the lot seems to have been the determination of the order in which the courses should follow each other; which was in itself a matter of indifference, but might, if not decided in this manner, have given rise to jealousies on the question of precedence.

8 To reconcile the latter part of this verse with ver. 4, some alter and translate thus: 'And Abiathar the son of Ahimelech, and the other paternal chiefs of the priests and Levites; one paternal chief being taken for Ithamar, and two for Eleazar.'

1 As the 'course of Abia' is mentioned in Luke i. 5, it is evident that these courses of the priests were continued, though with some changes, down to that period.

2 Or, 'equally with.'

3 This does not mean military commanders. Boothroyd translates it, 'chiefs of the sacred order.' In Numb. iv. 3 the same word 'host' is applied to the whole Levitical body; and it is evidently so used here.

4 Jeduthun is probably the same as Ethan in ch. vi. 44.

5 This word is used here in the sense of uttering or sounding forth the praises of Jehovah.

6 Shimei's name, omitted here, is found in ver. 17.

7 Each master-singer had in his chorus twelve in number, who were called his 'sons' or 'brethren.'

8 This may signify that Heman was a singer of those psalms which celebrated the greatness of David and his family. Some suppose the word 'horn' to mean trumpet; others connect it with the following verse thus: 'for, to exalt his horn (i. e. to increase his power and influence), God gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.'

9 At ch. xxiii. 5 the number of musicians is given as 4000. Perhaps the 4000 (in which the 288 were doubtless included) were divided in such a manner that each of the larger courses included one of the smaller, which, as consisting of the most perfect masters, took the lead in the service.

26 CONCERNING the divisions of the porters:¹ Of the Korhites was ^k Meshe-
 2 lemiah the son of Kore, of the sons of ^lAsaph. And the sons of Meshelemiah
 3 were, Zechariah the firstborn, Jediah the second, Zebadiah the third, Jathniel 4 the fourth, Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, Elieoenai the seventh. Moreover 5 the sons of Obed-edom were, Shemaiah the firstborn, Jehozabad the second, Joah
 6 the third, and Sacar the fourth, and Nethaneel the fifth, Ammiel the sixth,
 7 Issachar the seventh, Peulthai the eighth: for God blessed² ^m him. Also unto 8 Shemaiah his son were sons born, that ruled throughout the house of their 9 father: for they were mighty men of valour. The sons of Shemaiah; Othni, 10 and Rephael, and Obed, Elzabad, whose brethren were strong men, Elihu, and 11 Semachiah. All these of the sons of Obed-edom: they and their sons and their 12 brethren, able men for strength for the service, were threescore and two of Obed-13 edom. And Meshelemiah had sons and brethren, strong men, eighteen. Also 14 ⁿ Hosah, of the children of Merari, had sons; Simri the chief, (for though he 15 was not the firstborn, yet his father made him the chief;³) Hilkiah the second, 16 Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth: all the sons and brethren of Hosah 17 were thirteen.
 18 Among these were the divisions of the porters, even among the chief men, 19 having wards one against another, to minister in the house of the Lord. And 20 they cast lots, as well the small as the great, according to the house of their 21 fathers, for every gate. And the lot eastward fell to ^oShelemiah. Then for 22 Zechariah his son, a wise counsellor, they cast lots; and his lot came out north-23 ward. To Obed-edom southward; and to his sons the house of Asuphim.⁴ To 24 Shuphim and Hosah the lot came forth westward, with the gate Shallecheth, by 25 the causeway of the going ^p up, ward against ward. Eastward were six Levites, 26 northward four a day, southward four a day, and toward Asuphim two and two.
 27 At Parbar⁵ westward, four at the causeway, and two at Parbar. These are the 28 divisions of the porters among the sons of Kore, and among the sons of Merari.
 29 And of the Levites, Ahijah was ^q over the treasures of the house of God, and 35 Gershom, the son of Moses, was ruler of the treasures. And his brethren by 36 Eliezer; Rehabiah his son, and Jeshaiah his son, and Joram his son, and Zichri 37 his son, and ^uShelomith his son. Which Shelomith and his brethren were over 38 all the treasures of the dedicated things, which David the king, and the chief 39 fathers, the captains over thousands and hundreds, and the captains of the host, 40 had dedicated. Out of the spoils won in battles did they dedicate to maintain 41 the house of the Lord. And all that Samuel ^xthe seer, and Saul the son of 42 Kish, and Abner the son of Ner, and Joab the son of Zeruiah, had dedicated; and

¹ In this chapter we have an account of the establishment of the Hebrew militia, which appears to have been begun whilst David was at Hebron (comp. ver. 7 with 2 Sam. ii. 23). It consisted of twelve legions or divisions, each containing 24,000 men (namely, twenty-four regiments of 1000 men each), making a total of 288,000. Each division was subdivided into companies, with their proper officers over them. Though the number of these divisions was the same as that of the tribes, it does not appear that the several divisions were formed exclusively from each of the tribes: their officers at least were appointed without regard to this distinction; for two of the generals were Ephraimites. Some generals seem to have had lieutenants under them (vers. 4, 6). Each division was usually on duty only for one month in the year;

although any number of them might be called out for actual service, if a war or other emergency arose.

² It appears that, although the tribe of Levi had, like the other tribes, its own patriarchal chief of prince, the race of Aaron, which formed a portion of that tribe, being superior in rank and authority to the Levites generally, were exempted from the general authority of the chief or prince of the tribe, and subjected exclusively to that of the high priest, to whom also the whole tribe of Levi were ecclesiastically subject.

³ The Septuagint has 'Eliab.' Many suppose that this was David's eldest brother.

⁴ In this enumeration Asher and Gad are omitted: the former, it has been conjectured, was included in Zebulun and Naphtali, and the latter in Reuben and Manasseh.

23 But David took not the number of them from twenty years old and under : because ^r the LORD had said he would increase Israel like to the stars of the 24 heavens. Joab the son of Zeruiah began to number, but he finished not, because ^s there fell wrath for it against Israel ; neither was the number put in the account of the chronicles of king David.

25 And over the king's treasures was Azmaveth the son of Adiel : and over the storehouses in the fields,¹ in the cities, and in the villages, and in the castles,
26 was Jehonathan the son of Uzziah : and over them that did the work of the field
27 for tillage of the ground was Ezri the son of Chelub : and over the vineyards was Shimei the Ramathite : over the increase of the vineyards for the wine cellars
28 was Zabdi the Shiphmite : and over the olive trees and the sycamore² trees that were in the low plains was Baal-hanan the Gederite : and over the cellars of oil
29 was Joash : and over the herds that fed in Sharon was Shitrai the Sharonite :
30 and over the herds that were in the valleys was Shaphat the son of Adlai : over the camels³ also was Obil the Ishmaelite : and over the asses was Jehdeiah the 31 Meronothite : and over the flocks was Jaziz the Hagerite. All these were the rulers of the substance which was king David's.

32 Also Jonathan David's uncle was a counsellor, a wise man, and a scribe [or, secretary] : and Jehiel the son of Hachmoni [or, Hachmonite] was with the king's 33 sons : and ^t Ahithophel was the king's counsellor : and ^u Hushai the Archite was 34 the king's companion : and after Ahithophel was Jehoiada the son of Benaiah, and ^x Abiathar : and the general of the king's army was ^y Joab.

28 AND David assembled all the princes of Israel, ^z the princes of the tribes, and ^a the captains of the companies that ministered to the king by course, and the captains over the thousands, and captains over the hundreds, and ^b the stewards over all the substance and possession [or, cattle] of the king, and of his sons, with the officers, and with ^c the mighty men, and with all the valiant men, unto Jerusalem.

8 at this day. Now therefore in the sight of all Israel the congregation of the LORD, and in the audience of our God, keep and seek for all the commandments of the LORD your God : that ye may possess this good land, and leave it for an inheritance for your children after you for ever.

¹ The 'storehouses in the fields' were probably large pits, lined and covered with straw, in which grain of various kinds was stowed ; a large stone being placed at the top, and over that a mound of earth. Pits of this kind are discovered in Palestine, and are still in use among the Moors.

² That is, the sycamore-fig tree, which grows abundantly in Egypt and Syria, and is mentioned in Luke xix. 4. It is sometimes confounded with the 'sycamine' (Luke xvii. 6), which is better known by us as the mulberry tree.

⁴ All this was clearly and exactly represented to his mind by Divine inspiration (vers. 12, 19), just as Moses had received the plan of the tabernacle ; and thus the temple was built under the same heavenly guidance as the tabernacle. As the temple was to possess not only convenience for worship, but spiritual significance, it was not to be left to human art or invention, but to be framed according to Divine institution.

 and of all the chambers round about, ^x of the treasuries of the house of God, and 13 of the treasuries of the dedicated things: also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for 14 all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD. He gave of gold by weight for things of gold, for all instruments of all manner of service; silver also for all instruments of silver by weight, for all instruments of every kind of service:
 15 even the weight for the candlesticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candlestick, and for the lamps thereof: and for the candlesticks of silver by weight, both for the candlestick, and also for the lamps thereof, 16 according to the use of every candlestick. And by weight he gave gold for the tables of shewbread, for every table; and likewise silver for the tables of silver: 17 also pure gold for the fleshhooks, and the bowls, and the cups: and for the golden basins he gave gold by weight for every basin; and likewise silver by 18 weight for every basin of silver: and for the altar of incense refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of the chariot¹ of the ^y cherubim, that spread out 19 their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD. All this, said
*David,*² the LORD made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all 20 And David said to Solomon his son, ^a Be strong and of good courage, and do it:

 fear not, nor be dismayed: for the LORD God, even my God, will be with thee;
^b he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for 21 the service of the house of the LORD. And, behold, ^c the courses of the priests and the Levites, even they shall be with thee for all the service of the house of God: and there shall be with thee for all manner of workmanship ^d every willing skilful man, for any manner of service: also the princes and all the people will be wholly at thy commandment.

29 Furthermore David the king said unto all the congregation, Solomon my son, whom alone God hath chosen, is yet ^e young and tender, and the work is great:
 2 for the palace is not for man, but for the LORD God. Now I have prepared with all my might for the house of my God the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of brass, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood; ^f onyx stones, and stones to be set, glistening stones, and of divers colours, and all manner of precious stones, and marble stones 3 in abundance. Moreover, because I have set my affection to the house of my God, I have of mine own proper good, of gold and silver, which I have given to the house of my God, over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house, 4 even three thousand talents of gold,³ of the gold of ^g Ophir, and seven thousand 5 talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses withal: the gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the LORD?

6 Then ^h the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with ⁱ the rulers of the king's work, 7 offered willingly, and gave for the service of the house of God of gold five thousand talents and ten thousand drams,⁴ and of silver ten thousand talents, and of 8 brass eighteen thousand talents, and one hundred thousand talents of iron. And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the 9 house of the LORD, by the hand of ^k Jehiel the Gershonite. Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly, because with perfect heart they ^l offered willingly to the LORD: and David the king also rejoiced with great joy.

² The words 'said David' are not in the original, but are supplied by our translators; and some expositors regard this verse as a continuation of the narrative which begins at ver. 11, reading it thus: 'From the hand of Jehovah upon him (i. e. through the wisdom imparted to him by Jehovah), he explained everything in writing, all the works of the pattern.' In ver. 11 we are informed that David gave Solomon a pattern or plan of the temple: ver. 19 tells us that he added explanations in writing.

The writer of this book gave the amount in this coin probably because it was best known to his contemporaries.

Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name. But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for ° all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee. For ° we are strangers¹ before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: ° our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding. O LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and prepare [or, establish²] their heart unto thee: and ° give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart, to keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy statutes, and to do all these things, and to build the palace, for the which ° I have made provision. And David said to all the congregation, Now bless the LORD your God. And all the congregation blessed the LORD God of their fathers, and bowed down their heads, and worshipped the LORD, and the king. And they sacrificed sacrifices unto the LORD, and offered burnt offerings unto the LORD, on the morrow after that day, even a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their drink offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel: and did eat and drink before the LORD on that day with great gladness.

AND they made Solomon the son of David king the second time,² and ° anointed him unto the LORD to be the chief governor, and Zadok to be priest.

23 Then Solomon sat on the throne of the LORD as king instead of David his father, and prospered; and all Israel obeyed him. ² If this means that Solomon was anointed a second time, this must have been done on account of the first anointing having been in haste, upon the occasion of Adonijah's rebellion (1 Kings i. 39). It appears doubtful whether this more regular and formal inauguration of Solomon was upon the occasion of the great assembly mentioned just before, or after the death of his father;

but as the removal of Abiathar from the priesthood, and the appointment of Zadok as sole high priest, took place after David's death (see 1 Kings ii. 27, and note), some have thought that this event also occurred after that date.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES is a continuation of the preceding, and gives the history of the kingdom of David from the death of that monarch until its overthrow by Nebuchadnezzar. It thus comprises nearly the same period as the two books of The Kings, with which it has many points of agreement; differing chiefly in this, that while in them the histories of Judah and Israel are mixed together, this book treats almost exclusively of David's royal descendants, and contains much relating to them which is not found elsewhere.

This book may be divided into two parts:—

I. The history of ALL ISRAEL under Solomon; comprising Solomon's sacrifice at Gibeon, his prayer, and choice of wisdom; his wealth and grandeur (ch. i.) The building and furnishing of the temple (ii.—v.) Solomon's dedication-prayer, and God's answer thereto (vi., vii.) Solomon's buildings, officers, and commerce (viii.) The queen of Sheba's visit; Solomon's wealth and greatness (ix.)

II. The history of the KINGDOM OF JUDAH after the separation of the ten tribes; including Rehoboam's accession, and the revolt of the ten tribes (ch. x.) Rehoboam's government and success; his degeneracy, and the invasion of the king of Egypt (xi., xii.) Reign of Abijam (xiii.); of Asa (xiv.—xvi.) Good reign of Jehoshaphat (xvii.—xx.) Wicked reigns of Jehoram and Ahaziah (xxi., xxii.) Reign of Joash (xxiii., xxiv.); of Amaziah (xxv.); of Uzziah (xxvi.); of Jotham (xxvii.); and of Ahaz (xxviii.) Hezekiah's good reign and reformatations; and the deliverance of Jerusalem from Sennacherib (xxix.—xxxii.) Manasseh's wickedness, captivity, and repentance; and Amon's wicked reign (xxxiii.) Josiah's good reign, and zeal for reformation (xxxiv., xxxv.) Reigns of Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah; destruction of the city and temple; captivity of the people (xxxvi. 1—21). Proclamation of Cyrus permitting the return of the Jews (xxxvi. 23, 24).

Solomon's sacrifice at Gibeon; his prayer for wisdom; and God's promises to him.

- 1 AND ^a Solomon the son of David was strengthened in his kingdom, and ^b the 2 LORD his God was with him, and ^c magnified him exceedingly. Then Solomon spake unto all Israel, to ^d the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and to the 3 judges, and to every governor in all Israel, the chief of the fathers. So Solomon, and all the congregation with him, went to the high place that was at ^e Gibeon;
for there was the tabernacle of the congregation of God, which Moses the servant 4 of the LORD had made in the wilderness. ^f But the ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim to the place which David had prepared for it:
5 for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem. Moreover ^g the brasen altar, that ^h Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, he put [or, was there] before the tabernacle of the LORD: and Solomon and the congregation sought unto it.
6 And Solomon went up thither to the brasen altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and ⁱ offered a thousand burnt offerings upon it.
7 ^k In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and said unto him, Ask what I
8 shall give thee. And Solomon said unto God, Thou hast showed great mercy
9 unto David my father, and hast made me ^l to reign in his stead. Now, O LORD
God, let thy promise unto David my father be established: ^m for thou hast made 10 me king over a people like the dust of the earth in multitude. ⁿ Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may ^o go out and come in before this people: for who can judge this thy people, that is so great?
11 ^p And God said to Solomon, Because this was in thine heart, and thou hast not asked riches, wealth, or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, that thou 12 mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king: wisdom and knowledge is granted unto thee; and I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour, such as ^q none of the kings have had that have been before thee, neither shall there any after thee have the like.
13 Then Solomon came from his journey ¹ to the high place that was at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned over Israel.

Solomon's wealth and commerce.

- 14 ^r AND Solomon gathered chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he placed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.
15 ^s And the king made silver and gold at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycamore trees that are in the vale for abundance.
16 ^t And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: ² the king's 17 merchants received the linen yarn at a price. And they fetched up, and brought forth out of Egypt a chariot for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so brought they out horses for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, by their means.

Solomon's arrangements with Hiram, and other preparations for the erection of the temple.

- 2 AND Solomon ^u determined to build an house for the name of the LORD, and 2 an house for his kingdom. And ^x Solomon told out threescore and ten thousand men to bear burdens, and fourscore thousand to hew in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred ³ to oversee them.
3 And Solomon sent to ^y Hiram the king of Tyre, saying, ^z As thou didst deal with David my father, and didst send him cedars to build him an house to dwell 4 therein, even so deal with me. Behold, ^a I build an house to the name of the LORD my God, to dedicate it to him, and ^b to burn before him sweet incense, and for

7 Send me now therefore a man cunning to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in iron, and in purple, and crimson, and blue, and that can skill to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah and in Jerusalem, ^g whom David my father did provide. ^h Send me also cedar trees, fir trees, and ⁱ algum trees, out of Lebanon: for I know that thy servants can skill to cut timber in Lebanon; and, behold, my servants shall be with thy servants, even to prepare me timber in abundance: for the house which I am about to build shall be wonderful great. ^k And, behold, I will give to thy servants, the hewers that cut timber, twenty thousand measures of beaten wheat, and twenty thousand measures of barley, and twenty thousand baths of wine, and twenty thousand baths of oil.²

11 Then Hiram the king of Tyre answered in writing, which he sent to Solomon, ^l Because the LORD hath loved his people, he hath made thee king over them.

12 Hiram said moreover, ^m Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, ⁿ that made heaven and earth, who hath given to David the king a wise son, endued with prudence and understanding, that might build an house for the LORD, and an house for his kingdom. And now I have sent a cunning man, endued with understanding, of 16 ^p my lord hath spoken of, let him send unto his servants: ^q and we will cut wood out of Lebanon, as much as thou shalt need: and we will bring it to thee in floats by sea to ^r Joppa; ⁴ and thou shalt carry it up to Jerusalem.

17 ^s And Solomon numbered all the strangers⁵ that were in the land of Israel, after the numbering wherewith ^t David his father had numbered them; and they were

18 found an hundred and fifty thousand and three thousand and six hundred. And he set ^u threescore and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and four-score thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers to set the people a work.

3 THEN ^x Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at ^y Jerusalem in mount Moriah,⁶ where the LORD appeared unto David his father, ^z in the place that David had prepared in the threshingfloor of ^a Ornan the Jebusite. 7 gold was gold of Parvaim.¹¹ He overlaid also the house, the beams, the posts, and the walls thereof, and the doors thereof, with gold; and graved cherubim on the walls.

8 And he made the most holy house, the length whereof was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits: and

1 Solomon is careful to set before Hiram right ideas of Jehovah. 'Let it not be supposed that He, like the gods of the Gentiles, dwells in temples made with hands: this house, however magnificent, cannot be a habitation for Him; and is intended only that his priests and worshippers may have a fit place wherein to conduct his service.'

2 See note on 1 Kings v. 11.

3 In the Hebrew it is 'Hiram-Abi;' and at ch. iv. 16, 'Hiram-Abiv.' It is probably a proper name, the 'Abi' being added to distinguish him from other Hurams.

4 Now called Yaffa; a large sea-port on the Mediterranean.

5 The remnant of the Canaanites. See 1 Kings ix. 20, 21.

6 It is generally supposed (and Josephus says the same) that this was the spot to which Abraham went to offer up Isaac. See Gen. xxii. 2.

7 The 'first' means the measure in use in Solomon's time, as distinguished probably from the Babylonian measure used after the captivity.

8 If this is correct, the 'porch' must have formed a lofty tower, four times as high as the rest of the temple. But some ancient versions omit the 'hundred.'

9 Probably the pilasters were made in the form of palm-trees.

10 Or, 'with beautiful precious stones.'

11 This is thought by some to be the same as Ophir; by others, a general term for Eastern regions. Others take 'gold of Parvaim' to mean fine gold.

of the nails was fifty shekels of gold. And he overlaid the upper chambers with gold.

10 ^c And in the most holy house he made two cherubim of image work,¹ and over-
11 laid them with gold. And the wings of the cherubim were twenty cubits long: one wing of the one cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house: and the other wing was likewise five cubits, reaching to the wing of the other
12 cherub. And one wing of the other cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house: and the other wing was five cubits also, joining to the wing of the 13 other cherub. The wings of these cherubim spread themselves forth twenty cubits: and they stood on their feet, and their faces were inward² [or, toward the 14 house]. And he made the ^f vail of blue, and purple, and crimson, and fine linen, and wrought cherubim thereon.

15 Also he made before the house ^s two pillars of thirty and five cubits high, and 16 the chapiter that was on the top of each of them was five cubits. And he made chains, as in the oracle, and put them on the heads of the pillars; and made ^h an 17 hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chains. And he ⁱ reared up the pillars before the temple, one on the right hand, and the other on the left; and called the name of that on the right hand Jachin [i. e. He shall establish], and the name of that on the left Boaz [i. e. In it is strength].

4 Moreover he made ^h an altar of brass, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof.³

2 ^j Also he made a molten sea of ten cubits from brim to brim, round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it
3 round about. ^m And under it was the similitude of oxen,⁴ which did compass it round about: ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen
4 were cast, when it was cast. It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them,
5 and all their hinder parts were inward. And the thickness of it was an hand-breadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies; and it received and held ⁿ three⁵ thousand baths.

6 He made also ^o ten lavers, and put five on the right hand, and five on the left, to wash in them: such things as they offered for the burnt offering they washed in them; but the sea was for the priests to wash in.

7 ^p And he made ten candlesticks of gold ^q according to their form, and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 ^r He made also ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left. And he made an hundred basins [or, bowls] of gold.

9 Furthermore ^s he made the court of the priests, and the great court, and doors
10 for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass. And ^t he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 And ^u Hiram made the pots, and the shovels, and the basins. And Hiram finished the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God;
12 to wit, the two pillars, and ^v the pommels, and the chapiters which were on the top of the two pillars, and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the 13 chapiters which were on the top of the pillars; and ^w four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths; two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two 14 pommels of the chapiters which were upon the pillars. He made also ^x bases, and 15 lavers [or, caldrons] made he upon the bases; one sea, and twelve oxen under it.
16 The pots also, and the shovels, and the fleshhooks, and all their instruments, did 17 ^y Hiram his father make to king Solomon for the house of the Lord of bright brass. ^z In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the clay ground between Succoth and Zeredathah.

18 ^a Thus Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance: for the weight of 19 the brass could not be found out. And ^b Solomon made all the vessels that were for the house of God, the golden altar also, and the tables whereon ^c the shew-20 bread was set; moreover the candlesticks with their lamps, that they should 21 burn ^d after the manner before the oracle, of pure gold; and ^e the flowers, and the 22 lamps, and the tongs, made he of gold, and that perfect gold; and the snuffers, and the basins, and the spoons, and the censers, of pure gold: and the entry⁶ of

O LORD God of Israel, c there is no God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; which keepest covenant, and showest mercy unto thy servants, that walk 15 before thee with all their hearts: d thou which hast kept with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him; and spakest with thy mouth, and 16 hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day. Now therefore, O LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, e There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit upon the throne of Israel; f yet so that thy children take heed to their way to walk in my law, 17 as thou hast walked before me. Now then, O LORD God of Israel, let thy word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto thy servant David.

18 But will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? g behold, heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house which I 19 have built! Have respect therefore to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and the prayer, which thy 20 servant prayeth before thee: that thine eyes may be open upon this house day and night, upon the place whereof thou hast said that thou wouldest put thy name there; to hearken unto the prayer which thy servant prayeth toward [or, 21 in] this place. Hearken therefore unto the supplications of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, which they shall make [Heb. pray] toward this place: hear thou from thy dwelling place, even from heaven; and when thou hearest, forgive.

22 If a man sin against his neighbour, and an oath be laid upon him to make him 23 swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house; then hear thou from heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, by requiting the wicked, by recom-pensing his way upon his own head; and by justifying the righteous, by giving him according to his righteousness.

24 And if thy people Israel be put to the worse [or, be smitten] before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee; and shall return and confess thy name, 25 and pray and make supplication before thee in [or, toward] this house; then hear thou from the heavens, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest to them and to their fathers.

26 When the h heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; yet if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn 27 from their sin, when thou dost afflict them; then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, when thou hast taught them the good way, wherein they should walk; and send rain upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance.

28 If there i be dearth in the land, if there be pestilence, if there be blasting, or mildew, locusts, or caterpillars; if their enemies besiege them in the cities of 29 their land; whatsoever sore, or whatsoever sickness there be: then what prayer or what supplication soever shall be made of any man, or of all thy people Israel, when every one shall know his own sore and his own grief, and shall spread forth 30 his hands in [or, toward] this house: then hear thou from heaven thy dwelling place, and forgive, and render unto every man according unto all his ways whose heart thou knowest; (for thou only h knowest the hearts of the children of men:)
31 that they may fear thee, to walk in thy ways, so long as they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

32 Moreover concerning the stranger, l which is not of thy people Israel, but is come from a far country for thy great name's sake, and thy mighty hand, and thy 33 stretched out arm; if they come and pray in this house; then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; that all people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as doth thy people Israel, and may know that this house which I have built is called by thy name.

34 If thy people go out to war against their enemies by the way that thou shalt send them, and they pray unto thee toward this city which thou hast chosen, and 35 the house which I have built for thy name; then hear thou from the heavens their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their cause [or, right].

angry with them, and deliver them over before their enemies, and they carry 37 them away captives unto a land far off or near; yet if they bethink themselves in the land whither they are carried captive, and turn and pray unto thee in the 39 name: then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, their prayer and their supplications, and maintain their cause [or, right], and forgive thy people which have sinned against thee.

40 Now, my God, let, I beseech thee, thine eyes be open, and let thine ears be 41 attent unto the prayer that is made in this place. Now¹ therefore arise, O LORD God, into thy ^oresting place,² thou, and the ark of thy strength: let thy priests, O LORD God, be clothed with salvation, and let thy saints ^prejoice in 42 goodness. O LORD God, turn not away the face of thine anointed: remember the mercies of David thy servant.

7 Now when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of the 2 LORD filled the house. And the priests could not enter into the house of the 3 LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house. And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, saying, For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

4, 5 Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD. And king Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty and two thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep: so the king and all the people dedicated the house
6 of God. And the priests waited on their offices: the Levites also with instruments of music of the LORD, which David the king had made to praise the LORD, because his mercy endureth for ever, when David praised by their ministry; and 7 the priests sounded trumpets before them, and all Israel stood. Moreover Solomon hallowed the middle of the court was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings, because the brasen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt offerings, and the meat offerings, and the fat.

8 Also at the same time Solomon kept the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath unto the river
9 of Egypt. And in the eighth day they made a solemn assembly: for they kept 10 the dedication of the altar seven days, and the feast seven days. And on the three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent the people away into their tents, glad and merry in heart for the goodness that the LORD had showed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

11 Thus Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house: and all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

God's answer to Solomon's prayer.

12 AND the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, I have heard thy prayer, and have chosen this place to myself for an house of sacrifice.
13 If I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour
14 the land, or if I send pestilence among my people; if my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their 15 sin, and will heal their land. Now mine eyes shall be open, and mine ears
16 attent³ unto the prayer that is made in this place. For now have I chosen and sanctified this house, that my name may be there for ever: and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

17 And as for thee, if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and shalt observe my 18 statutes and my judgments; then will I stablish the throne of thy kingdom, according as I have covenanted with David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man to be ruler in Israel.

19 But if ye turn away, and forsake my statutes and my commandments, which I have set before you, and shall go and serve other gods, and worship them;
20 then will I pluck them up by the roots out of my land which I have given them; and this house, which I have sanctified for my name, will I cast out of my sight,

1 This verse and the next are in substance a quotation from Psa. cxxxii., which was probably composed upon this occasion: see note on its title.

2 The ark of the covenant had often removed, even after its arrival in Canaan. See Josh. vi. 4—6; viii. 33;

xviii. 1; 1 Sam. iv. 4, 11; vi. 12; vii. 1; 2 Sam. vi. 2—10, 17; xv. 24, 25; 1 Chron. xvii. 5.

3 Much of the answer, as recorded here, is in the very terms of Solomon's prayer. Comp. ver. 15 with ch. vi. 40, and ver. 18 with ch. vi. 16.

21 and will make it to be a proverb and a byword among all nations. And this house, which is high, shall be an astonishment to every one that passeth by it; so that he shall say, 'Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and unto 22 this house? And it shall be answered, Because they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on other gods, and worshipped them, and served them: therefore hath he brought all this evil upon them.

Solomon's buildings, officers, and trade; and his provision for the temple services.

8 AND 'it came to pass at the end of twenty years, wherein Solomon had built 2 the house of the LORD, and his own house, that the cities¹ which Hiram had restored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.

3, 4 And Solomon went to Hamath-zobah, and prevailed against it. 'And he built Tadmor² in the wilderness, and all the store cities, which he built in 5 Hamath. Also he built Beth-horon the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, 6 fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars; and Baalath,³ and all the store cities that Solomon had, and all the chariot cities, and the cities of the horsemen, and all that Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion.

7 "As for all the people that were left of the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the 8 Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel, but of their children, who were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel
9 consumed not, them did Solomon make to pay tribute until this day. But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work; but they were 10 men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen. And these were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even ^xtwo hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people.

11 And Solomon ^ybrought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of the city of David unto the house that he had built for her: for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are holy, whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.

12 Then Solomon offered burnt offerings unto the LORD on the altar of the LORD,
13 which he had built before the porch, even after a certain rate ^zevery day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts, ^athree times in the year, even in the feast of unleavened
14 bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles. And he appointed, according to the order of David his father, the ^bcourses of the priests to their service, and ^cthe Levites to their charges, to praise and minister before the priests, as the duty of every day required: the ^dporters also by their courses
15 at every gate: for so had David the man of God⁴ commanded. And they departed not from the commandment of the king unto the priests and Levites concerning 16 any matter, or concerning the treasures. Now all the work of Solomon was prepared unto the day of the foundation of the house of the LORD, and until it was finished. So the house of the LORD was perfected.

17 Then went Solomon to ^eEzion-geber, and to ^fEloth, at the sea side in the land 18 of Edom. ^gAnd Hiram sent him by the hands of his servants ships, and servants that had knowledge of the sea; and they went with the servants of Solomon to Ophir,⁵ and took thence four hundred and fifty talents of gold, and brought them to king Solomon.

The queen of Sheba's visit.

9 AND ^hwhen the queen of Sheba⁶ heard of the fame of Solomon, she came to prove Solomon with hard questions at Jerusalem, with a very great company, and camels that bare spices, and gold in abundance, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her
2 heart. And Solomon told her all her questions: and there was nothing hid from Solomon which he told her not.

3 And when the queen of Sheba had seen the wisdom of Solomon, and the house
4 that he had built, and the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel; his cupbearers also, and their

 5 was no more spirit in her. And she said to the king, It was a true report which I heard in mine own land of thine acts [or, sayings], and of thy wisdom:
 6 howbeit I believed not their words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it:
 and, behold, the one half of the greatness of thy wisdom was not told me: for 7 thou exceedest the fame that I heard. Happy are thy men, and happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom.
 8 Blessed be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee to set thee on his throne,¹ to be king for the LORD thy God: because thy God loved Israel, to establish them for ever, therefore made he thee king over them, to do judgment and 9 justice. And she gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices great abundance, and precious stones: neither was there any such spice as the queen of Sheba gave king Solomon.

10 And the servants also of Hiram, and the servants of Solomon, ⁱwhich brought 11 gold from Ophir, brought ^kalgun trees and precious stones. And the king made of the algum trees terraces [or, stairs] to the house of the LORD, and to the king's palace, and harps and psalteries for singers: and there were none such seen before in the land of Judah.
 12 And king Solomon gave to the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside² that which she had brought unto the king. So she turned. and went away to her own land, she and her servants.

Solomon's wealth, wisdom, greatness, and death.

13 NOW the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred 14 and threescore and six talents of gold; beside that which chapmen³ and merchants brought. And all the kings of Arabia and governors of the country brought gold and silver to Solomon.

15 And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred 16 shekels of beaten gold went to one target. And three hundred shields made he of beaten gold: three hundred shekels of gold went to one shield. And the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

17 Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure 18 gold. And there were six steps to the throne, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne, and stays [Heb. hands] on each side of the sitting 19 place, and two lions standing by the stays: and twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps. There was not the like made in any 20 kingdom. And all the drinking vessels of king Solomon were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold: none were of 21 silver; it was not any thing accounted of in the days of Solomon. For the king's ships went to Tarshish⁴ with the servants of Hiram: every three years once came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

22 And king Solomon passed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.
 23 And all the kings of the earth sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his 24 wisdom, that God had put in his heart. And they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

25 And Solomon ^lhad four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen; whom he bestowed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

26 ^mAnd he reigned over all the kings ⁿfrom the ^oriver even unto the land of the 27 Philistines, and to the border of Egypt. ^pAnd the king made silver in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycamore trees that are in the 28 low plains in abundance. ^qAnd they brought unto Solomon horses out of Egypt, and out of all lands.

29 ^rNow the rest of the acts of Solomon, first and last, are they not written in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the prophecy of ^sAhijah the Shilonite, 30 and in the visions of ^tIddo the seer against Jeroboam the son of Nebat? ^uAnd 31 Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel forty years. And Solomon slept with his fathers, and he was buried in the city of David his father: and Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

¹ It is called God's throne, because Jehovah was king of Israel, and the kings were his deputies or vicegerents.

² The reading in the parallel passage, 1 Kings x. 13, is obviously more correct; viz., 'beside what Solomon gave her of his royal bounty:' meaning, probably, valuable presents which Solomon made to her, in addition to peculiar productions of Canaan which she had asked for.

³ This word is used of the men whom Moses sent to 'spy out' the land. It probably means here adventurers.

Rehoboam succeeds Solomon; the ten tribes revolt from him.

10 AND¹ * Rehoboam went to Shechem: for to Shechem were all Israel come to make him king.

* see parallel, 1 Ki. 12. 1—19.

2 And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was in Egypt, ²whither he had fled from the presence of Solomon the king, heard it, that ² 1 Ki. 11. 40.

3 Jeroboam returned out of Egypt. And they sent and called him. So Jeroboam

4 and all Israel came and spake to Rehoboam, saying, Thy father made our yoke grievous: now therefore ease thou somewhat the grievous servitude of thy

5 father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will serve thee. And he said unto them, Come again unto me after three days. And the people departed.

6 And king Rehoboam took counsel with the old men that had stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, saying, What counsel give ye me to

7 return answer to this people? And they spake unto him, saying, If thou be kind to this people, and please them, and speak good words to them, they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he forsook the counsel which the old men gave him, and took counsel with the young men that were brought up with him, that stood before him.

9 And he said unto them, What advice give ye that we may return answer to this people, which have spoken to me, saying, Ease somewhat the yoke that thy

10 father did put upon us? And the young men that were brought up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou answer the people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it somewhat lighter for us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my 11 father's loins. For whereas my father put a heavy yoke upon you, I will put more to your yoke: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

12 So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the 13 king bade, saying, Come again to me on the third day. And the king answered

14 them roughly; and king Rehoboam forsook the counsel of the old men, and answered them after the advice of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

portion have we in David? and we have none inheritance in the son of Jesse: every man to your tents, O Israel: and now, David, see to thine own house. So 17 all Israel went to their tents. But as for the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent Hadoram that was over the tribute; and the children of Israel stoned him with stones, that he died. But king Rehoboam Rehoboam's measures for strengthening his kingdom, and his success.

5 AND Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built² cities for defence in Judah.

7 He built even Beth-lehem, and Etam, and Tekoa, and Beth-zur, and Shoco, and

9 Adullam, and Gath, and Mareshah, and Ziph, and Adoraim, and Lachish, and 10 Azekah, and Zorah, and Aijalon, and Hebron, which are in Judah and in 11 Benjamin fenced cities. And he fortified the strongholds, and put captains in 12 them and store of victual, and of oil and wine. And in every several city he put shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong, having Judah and Benjamin on his side.

² That is, he enlarged or fortified them.

13 And the priests and the Levites that were in all Israel resorted to him out of 14 all their coasts. For the Levites left ^etheir suburbs and their ^fpossession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem: for ^gJeroboam and his sons had cast them off¹ 15 from executing the priest's office unto the LORD: ^hand he ordained him priests for the high places, and for ⁱthe devils,² and for ^kthe calves which he had made.
16 ^lAnd after them out of all the tribes of Israel such as set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel came to Jerusalem, to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their 17 fathers. So they ^mstrengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong,³ three years: for three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.⁴

18 And Rehoboam took him Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David 19 to wife, and Abihail⁵ the daughter of Eliab the son of Jesse; which bare him 20 children; Jeush, and Shamariah, and Zalam. And after her he took ⁿMaachah the daughter of Absalom; which bare him Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and 21 Shelomith. And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and his concubines: (for he took eighteen wives, and threescore con-22 cubines; and begat twenty and eight sons, and threescore daughters.) And Rehoboam ^omade Abijah the son of Maachah the chief, to be ruler among his 23 brethren: for he thought to make him king. And he dealt wisely, and dispersed⁶ of all his children throughout all the countries of Judah and Benjamin, unto every fenced city: and he gave them victual in abundance. And he desired many wives.

Rehoboam and his people, forsaking the law of God, are punished by Shishak's invasion.

12 AND ^pit came to pass, when Rehoboam had established the kingdom, and had strengthened himself, ^qhe forsook the law of the LORD, and all Israel with him.

2 ^rAnd it came to pass, that in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, because they had transgressed against the 3 LORD, with twelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt; ^sthe Lubims,⁷ 4 the Sukkiims,⁸ and the Ethiopians.⁹ And he took the fenced cities which pertained to Judah, and came to Jerusalem.

5 Then came ^tShemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and to the princes of Judah, that were gathered together to Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, ^u"Ye have forsaken me, and therefore have I also left you themselves; and they said, ^yThe LORD is righteous.

and my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak.

1 Jeroboam would doubtless have been glad to obtain the sanction of the Levites to his calf-worship: so that their expulsion from office is an attestation of their fidelity to the worship of Jehovah in circumstances which formed a strong temptation to apostasy.

2 The Hebrew word means 'hairy ones;' and is often used for he-goats. It probably refers to the Egyptian goat-god, or other similar deities—a form of idolatry which Jeroboam would be likely to introduce in connection with that of the calves. See note on Lev. xvii. 7.

3 It appears that most of the pious Israelites joined him, out of every tribe, as well as the whole tribe of Levi, who were deprived of their functions in the kingdom of Israel. Thus Jeroboam's religious apostasy, and his idolatrous practices, greatly weakened his own kingdom, and increased the power and prosperity of his rival.

4 Rehoboam seems to have paid some attention to religion as long as his throne appeared to be in danger; but he cast it off when he thought he had nothing to fear from Jeroboam (ch. xii. 1).

5 As Eliab was David's eldest brother, probably Abihail was his grand-daughter, if not a degree still further removed.

6 Probably to prevent domestic feuds, which might have arisen had they all remained at Jerusalem; and to extend the influence of the royal family over the whole land, in accordance with Oriental customs and policy. For the same reason, probably, he desired, or rather demanded, many wives for his sons as well as for himself.

7 These were the Libyans of north-eastern Africa. They probably furnished many of the chariots used on this occasion: for Herodotus (iv. 189) states that the Greeks learned from them the method of yoking four horses to a chariot.

8 The Septuagint renders this 'Troglodytæ,' a name given to them by the Greeks, because they dwelt in caves. They inhabited the mountains on the western coast of the Red Sea.

9 Heb., 'Cushim;' a people coming probably from Nubia, on the south of Egypt.

10 They were thus taught how much better it was to live under the wholesome restraints of Jehovah's laws than under the reckless exactions of an invader.

11 One of the large palaces at Karnak, in Egypt, was partly built by Shishak, or Sheshonk; and on a wall, which was recently standing, a sculpture was discovered representing that monarch dragging the representatives of conquered kingdoms, one of whom has hieroglyphics upon his shield, which are supposed to refer to the kingdom of Judah; but this is far from being certain.

- treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he took all: he carried away also the shields of gold which Solomon had ^d made.
- 10 Instead of which king Rehoboam made shields of brass, and committed them ^e to the hands of the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house.
- 11 And when the king entered into the house of the LORD, the guard came and
- 12 fetched them, and brought them again into the guard chamber. And when he humbled himself, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, that he would not destroy him altogether: and also in Judah things went well [or, and yet in Judah there were good things^f].
- 13 So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned: for ^g Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, ^h the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naamah an
- 14 Ammonitess. And he did evil, because he prepared [Heb. fixed] not his heart to seek the LORD.
- 15 ⁱ Now the acts of Rehoboam, first and last, are they not written in the book of Shemaiah the prophet, ^k and of Iddo the seer concerning genealogies? ^l And
- 16 there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually. And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David: and ^m Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

The reign of Abijah; his victory over Jeroboam.

- 13 NOW ⁿ in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam began Abijah to reign over
- 2 Judah. He reigned three years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was
- 3 ^o Michaiah the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah. ²
- 3 And there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam. And Abijah set the battle in array with an army of valiant men of war, even four hundred thousand chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him with eight hundred thousand chosen men, being mighty men of valour.
- 4 And Abijah stood up upon mount ^p Zemaraim, which is in mount Ephraim, and
- 5 said, Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel; ought ye not to know that the LORD God of Israel ^q gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, ³ even to
- 6 him and to his sons ^r by a covenant of salt? ⁴ Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath ^s rebelled against
- 7 his lord. And there are gathered unto him ^t vain men, the children of Belial, ⁵ and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when
- 8 Rehoboam was young and tender hearted, and could not withstand them. And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which
- 9 Jeroboam ^u made you for gods. ^v Have ye not cast out the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? ^w so that whosoever cometh to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are no

- 13 But Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind them: so they
- 14 were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them. And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and they cried unto the
- 15 LORD, and the priests sounded with the trumpets. Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God ^e smote
- 16 Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah. And the children of Israel
- 17 fled before Judah: and God delivered them into their hand. And Abijah and

⁴ Heb., 'the Cushite' (and so in ver. 12) ; a name applicable to all the descendants of Cush the son of Ham. 'Zerah' is supposed by some to be Osorkon, the successor of Shishak ; both of whom are thought to have been Nubians. But as they were of a dynasty which came from the north-east of Egypt, it is most probable that they belonged to the Cushites who dwelt on the eastern side of Egypt, and who were connected with those of the Sinaitic peninsula.

⁵ The majority of this vast multitude were not soldiers in the modern European sense of the term, maintained and disciplined to war as a profession, but simply men armed for the occasion. Larger armies than these are mentioned in history. The army of Tamerlane is said to have amounted to 1,600,000 men, and that of his antagonist Bajazet to 1,400,000.

4 without law. But ^h when they in their trouble did turn unto the LORD God of 5 Israel, and sought him, he was found of them. And ⁱ in those times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but great vexations 6 were upon all the inhabitants of the countries. ^h And nation was destroyed of nation, and city of city: for ^l God did vex them with all adversity. Be ye strong 7 therefore, and let not your hands be weak: for your work shall be rewarded.
 8 And when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of ¹ Oded the prophet, he took courage, and put away the abominable idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of the cities ^m which he had taken from mount Ephraim, and 9 renewed the altar of the LORD, that was before the porch of the LORD. And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and ⁿ the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: for they fell to him out of Israel in abun-10 dance, when they saw that the LORD his God was with him. So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the 11 reign of Asa. ^o And they offered unto the LORD the same time, of ^p the spoil ² 12 which they had brought, seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep. And they ^q entered into a covenant to seek the LORD God of their fathers with all 13 their heart and with all their soul; ^r that whosoever would not seek the LORD God of Israel ^s should be put to death, whether small or great, whether man or 14 woman. And they swore unto the LORD with a loud voice, and with shouting, 15 and with trumpets, and with cornets. And all Judah rejoiced at the oath: for they had sworn with all their heart, and ^t sought him with their whole desire; and he was found of them: and the LORD gave them rest round about.
 16 And also concerning ^u Maachah the ^x mother of Asa the king, he removed her from being queen, because she had made an idol in a grove: and Asa cut down 17 her idol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the brook Kidron. But ^y the high places were not taken away out of Israel. ³ Nevertheless the heart of Asa was 18 perfect all his days. And he brought into the house of God the things that his father had dedicated, and that he himself had dedicated, silver, and gold, and 19 vessels. And there was no more war unto the five and thirtieth ⁴ year of the reign of Asa.

*Baasha's invasion; Asa, seeking the aid of the Syrians, is reproved by a prophet;
 Asa's disease and death.*

16 IN the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa, ^z Baasha king of Israel came up against Judah, and built Ramah, ⁵ ^a to the intent that he might let none go out 2 or come in to Asa king of Judah. Then Asa brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the LORD and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-3 hadad king of Syria, that dwelt at Damascus, saying, There is a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent thee silver and gold; go, break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that 4 he may depart from me. And Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of his armies against the cities of Israel; and they smote Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-maim, and all the store cities of Naphtali.
 5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it, that he left off building of Ramah, 6 and let his work cease. Then Asa the king took all Judah; and they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was building; and he built therewith Geba and Mizpah.
 7 And at that time ^b Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah, and said unto him, ^c Because thou hast relied on the king of Syria, and not ^d relied on the LORD thy 8 God, therefore is the host of the king of Syria escaped out of thine hand. ⁶ Were not ^e the Ethiopians and ^f the Lubims a huge host, with very many chariots and horsemen? yet, ^g because thou didst rely on the LORD, he delivered them into 9 thine hand. ^h For the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them ⁱ whose heart is perfect toward him. Herein ^h thou hast done foolishly: therefore from henceforth ⁱ thou shalt have wars.
 10 Then Asa was wroth with the seer, and ^m put him in a prison house; for he was in a rage with him because of this thing. And Asa oppressed some of the 4 As Baasha died in the twenty-sixth year of Asa's reign, this must be an error of the transcribers. Josephus mentions this war as occurring near the end of Baasha's life; some therefore read twenty-fifth for 'thirty-fifth' in this verse, and twenty-sixth for 'thirty-sixth' in the next.

5 As Ramah lay half-way between Jerusalem and Beth-el, it is probable that Baasha had recovered Beth-el, which Abijah had taken from Jeroboam (ch. xiii. 19).

6 The meaning probably is, that Baasha would have called the Syrians to his aid.

11 ⁿ And, behold, the acts of Asa, first and last, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

12 And Asa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign was diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great:¹ yet in his disease he ^o sought not to the LORD, but to the physicians. ^p And Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the 14 one and fortieth year of his reign. And they buried him in his own sepulchres, which he had made for himself in the city of David, and laid him in the bed which was filled ^q with sweet odours and divers kinds of spices prepared by the ^r 'apothecaries' art: and they made ^s a very great burning for him.

Jehoshaphat's good and prosperous reign.

17 AND 'Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead, and strengthened himself ² against Israel. And he placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah, and in the cities of Ephraim, ^u which Asa his father had taken. And the LORD was with Jehoshaphat, because he walked in ⁴ the first ways of his father David,² and sought not unto Baalim; but sought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not after ⁵ ^x the doings of Israel. ^y Therefore the LORD stablished the kingdom in his hand; and all Judah ^z brought to Jehoshaphat presents; ^a and he had riches and ⁶ honour in abundance. And his heart was ^b lifted up in the ways of the LORD: moreover ^c he took away the high places and groves out of Judah.

7 Also in the third year of his reign he sent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nethaneel, and to Michaiah, ^d to teach in the cities of Judah. And with them he sent Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nethaniah, and Zebadiah, and Asahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Elishama and Jehoram, ^e priests. ^f And they taught in Judah, and had the book of the law of the LORD with them, and went about³ throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people.

10 And ^g the fear of the LORD fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah, so that they made no war against Jehoshaphat. Also some of the Philistines ^h brought Jehoshaphat presents, and tribute silver; and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand and seven hundred rams, and seven ¹² thousand and seven hundred he-goats. And Jehoshaphat waxed great exceeding- ¹³ ingly; and he built in Judah castles [or, palaces], and cities of store. And he had much business in the cities of Judah: and the men of war, mighty men of valour, were in Jerusalem.

14 And these are the numbers of them according to the house of their fathers: Of Judah, the captains of thousands; Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of ¹⁵ valour three hundred thousand.⁴ And next to him was Jehohanan the captain, ¹⁶ and with him two hundred and fourscore thousand. And next him was Amasiah the son of Zichri, ¹⁷ who willingly offered himself unto the LORD; and with him two hundred thousand mighty men of valour. And of Benjamin; Eliada a ¹⁸ mighty man of valour, and with him armed men with bow and shield two hundred thousand. And next him was Jehozabad, and with him an hundred and ¹⁹ fourscore thousand ready prepared for the war. These waited on the king, beside ⁱ those whom the king put in the fenced cities throughout all Judah.

1 Some render this, 'his disease moved upwards;' supposing it to have been gout, which, attacking the stomach, became fatal.

2 'David' is omitted in the Septuagint and a few Hebrew manuscripts; and the internal evidence confirms this reading. Such a phrase as 'the first ways of David' occurs nowhere else; but, as applied to Asa, there is evident propriety in making a distinction as to his conduct between the earlier and the latter parts of his reign.

3 Great reformatations and revivals of religion have generally been effected by missionary agency of this kind; and this course is sanctioned by the example of Christ and his apostles. Josiah did well by causing the law to be read to such of the people as could be assembled at Jerusalem (see ch. xxxiv. 30); but Jehoshaphat is the only king whom we find sending instruction to their homes.

4 See note in p. 516.

⁷ prophets four hundred men, and said unto them, ^r Shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, ^s Go up; for God will deliver it into the king's hand.

6 But Jehoshaphat said, 'Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might inquire of him? And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet ^u one man, by whom we may inquire of the LORD: but I ^v hate him; for he never prophesied ^a good unto me, but always evil: the same is Micaiah the son of Imla. And Jehoshaphat said, ^v Let not the king say so.

8 And the king of Israel called for one of his officers, and said, Fetch quickly Micaiah the son of Imla. And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah ^a sat either of them on his throne, ^a clothed in their robes, and they sat in a void place [or, floor] at the entering in of the gate of Samaria; ^b and all the prophets prophesied before them. And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah had made him ^c horns of iron, and said, ^d Thus saith the LORD, With these thou shalt push Syria until they be consumed. And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

12 And the messenger that went to call Micaiah spake to him, saying, ^e Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king with one assent; let thy word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and speak thou good. And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, ^f even what my God saith, that will I speak.

14 And when he was come to the king, the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And he said, ^g Go ye up, and prosper, and they shall be delivered ¹ into your hand. And the king said to him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou say nothing but the truth to me in the name of the LORD? Then he said, I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountains, as sheep that have no shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master; let them return therefore every man to his house in peace. And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, ^h Did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good unto me, but evil? Again he said, Therefore hear the word of the LORD; ⁱ I saw ² the LORD sitting upon his throne, and ^h all the host of heaven standing on his right hand, and on his left. And the LORD said, 'Who shall entice Ahab king of Israel, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one spake saying after this manner, and another saying after that manner. Then there came out a ^m spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will entice him.

21 And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: go out, and do even so. Now, therefore, behold, ⁿ the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil against thee.

23 Then Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah came near, and ^o smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee? And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see on that day when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyself.

25 Then the king of Israel said, Take ye Micaiah, and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son; and say, Thus saith the king, ^p Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction and with water of affliction, until I return in peace. And Micaiah said, ^q If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD spoken by me. And he said, ^r Hearken, all ye people.

28 So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead. And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, ^s I will disguise myself, and will go to the battle; but put thou on thy robes. So the king of Israel disguised himself; and they went to the battle. Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, Fight ye not with small or great, save only with the king of Israel. And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel. Therefore they compassed about him to fight: but 'Jehoshaphat cried out, and ^t the LORD helped ³ him; and ^r God moved them to depart from him.

32 For it came to pass, that, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, they turned back again from pursuing him. ^u And a certain man drew a bow at a venture, and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness: therefore he said to his chariot man, Turn thine hand, that with Ahab, and was severely chastised for it (see note on 1 Kings xxii. 2), he was still a sincerely pious man, and as such under God's peculiar protection.

34 thou mayest carry me out of the host; for I am wounded. And the battle increased that day: howbeit the king of Israel stayed himself up in his chariot against the Syrians until the even: and about the time of the sun going down ^z he died.

19 And Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem. And Jehu the son of Hanani ^a the seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and ^b love them that hate the LORD? therefore is ^c wrath upon thee from before the LORD. Nevertheless there are ^d good things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast ^e prepared thine heart to seek God.

Jehoshaphat's wise internal government, and provision for the administration of justice.

4 AND Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem. And he went out again through the people from Beer-sheba to mount Ephraim, and ^f brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

5 And he set judges in the land throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city, and said to the judges, Take heed what ye do: for ^g ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, ^h who is with you in the judgment. Wherefore now ⁱ let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take heed and do it: for ^k there is no iniquity with the LORD our God, nor ^l respect of persons, nor taking of gifts.

8 Moreover in Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat ^m set of the Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for the judgment of the LORD, and for controversies, when they returned to Jerusalem. And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do ⁿ in the fear of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

10 ^o And what cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, between blood and blood, ¹ between law and commandment, statutes and judgments, ye shall even warn them that they trespass not against the LORD, and so ^p wrath come upon ^q you, and upon your brethren: this do, and ye shall not

11 trespass. And, behold, Amariah the chief priest is over you ^r in all matters of the LORD; and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the king's matters: ² also the Levites shall be officers before you. Deal courageously, and the LORD shall be ^s with the good.

Invasion of Moabites and others; Jehoshaphat's prayer; Jahaziel's prophecy of deliverance, and its fulfilment.

20 IT came to pass after this also, that the children of Moab, ³ and the children of Ammon, and with them other beside the Ammonites, ⁴ came against Jehoshaphat to battle. Then there came some that told Jehoshaphat, saying, There cometh a great multitude against thee from beyond the sea ⁵ on this side Syria; and,

3 behold, they be ^t in Hazazon-tamar, which is ^u En-gedi. And Jehoshaphat feared, and set himself to ^x seek the LORD, and ^y proclaimed a fast throughout all Judah.

4 And Judah gathered themselves together, to ask help of the LORD: even out of all the cities of Judah they came to seek the LORD.

5 And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the LORD, before the new court, and said, ⁶ O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou ^z God in heaven? and ^a rulest not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? and ^b in thine hand is there not power and might, so that none is able

7 to withstand thee? Art not thou ^c our God, who ^d didst drive out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and ^e gavest it to the seed of Abraham ^f thy friend for ever? And they dwelt therein, and have built thee a sanctuary therein

9 for thy name, saying, ^g If, when evil cometh upon us, as the sword, judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we stand before this house, and in thy presence, (for thy ^h name is in this house,) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear

1 This phrase is evidently taken from Deut. xvii. 8: it occurs nowhere else; and appears to refer to cases involving life or death.

2 'The matters of the Lord,' and 'the king's matters,' are supposed by some to mean ecclesiastical and civil causes. Others regard the former as being cases explicitly provided for in the law of God as given by Moses, and the latter as being such as had been left to the judgment of the sovereign.

3 Compare with this whole narrative Psalms xlvii., xlviii., lxxxiii., which appear to have been written on this occasion; Psa. lxxxiii. being a prayer for deliverance from this imminent danger; and Psa. xlvii., xlviii.

being songs of thanksgiving for the entire overthrow of the invaders. This confederacy against Jehoshaphat was originated by the descendants of Lot; but several other nations joined in it: see Psa. lxxxiii. 8.

4 The Targum and some editions of the Hebrew Bible have 'Edomites,' which is probably the correct reading; also in the next verse 'Edom' instead of 'Aram' (i. e. Syria). The clause should be translated, 'and with them some of the Edomites came,' etc. These readings are supported by vers. 10, 22, 23.

5 The Dead Sea.

6 This prayer is partly derived from the prayer of Solomon at the dedication of the temple: see refs.

they reward us, ^l to come to cast us out of thy possession, which thou hast given 12 us to inherit. O our God, wilt thou not ^m judge them? for we have no might against this great company that cometh against us; neither know we what to do:
but ⁿ our eyes are upon thee.

13 And all Judah stood before the LORD, ^o with their little ones, their wives, and their children.

14 Then upon Jahaziel the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, ^p came the Spirit of the LORD 15 in the midst of the congregation; and he said, Hearken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat, Thus saith the LORD unto you, ^q Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for ^r the 16 battle is not yours, but God's. To-morrow go ye down against them: behold, they come up by the cliff of Ziz: ¹ and ye shall find them at the end of the brook

17 [or, valley], before the wilderness of Jeruel. ^s Ye shall not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, stand ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to-morrow go out against 18 them: ^t for the LORD will be with you. And Jehoshaphat ^u bowed his head with his face to the ground: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell 19 before the LORD, worshipping the LORD. And the Levites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the Korhites, stood up to praise the LORD

God of Israel with a loud voice on high.

20 And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of Tekoa. And as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; ^x Believe in the LORD your God, so shall ye be 21 established; ^y believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper. And when he had consulted with the people, he appointed singers unto the LORD, ^z and that should praise the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say,

^a Praise the LORD; ^b for his mercy endureth for ever.

22 And when they began to sing and to praise, ^c the LORD set ambushments ² against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against 23 Judah; and they were smitten [or, they smote one another]. For the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped to destroy another.

24 And when Judah came toward the watch tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude, and, behold, ^d they were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and 25 none escaped. And when Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away the spoil of them, they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies, ³ and precious jewels, which they stripped off for themselves, more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the spoil, it was 26 so much. And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of Berachah [i. e. blessing ^e]; for there they blessed the LORD: therefore the name of the same place was called, The valley of Berachah, unto this day.

27 Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the forefront of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy; for the LORD had 28 ^f made them to rejoice over their enemies. And they came to Jerusalem with ^g psalteries and harps and trumpets unto the house of the LORD. And ^h the fear of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries, when they had heard that the 30 LORD fought against the enemies of Israel. So the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet: for his ⁱ God gave him rest round about.

The general character of Jehoshaphat's reign; his unsuccessful alliance with Ahaziah.

31 ^j AND Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah: he was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his 32 mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi. And he walked in the way of Asa his father, and departed not from it, doing that which was right in the 33 sight of the LORD. Howbeit ^k the high places were not taken away: for as yet the people had not ^l prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers.

1 This is a steep and difficult zigzag path cut in the face of the rock. It is the only pass from En-gedi towards Jerusalem, and it is the route taken by the Arabs in their marauding expeditions at the present day.

2 The text is somewhat obscure; but it seems that the men placed in ambush against the army of Judah, either by mistake or designedly, attacked their own allies, and that this led to mutual distrust in the whole army: so that the Ammonites and Moabites united against the Edomites, and nearly destroyed them; and then, quarrelling among themselves, destroyed one another.

3 Instead of 'dead bodies,' some manuscripts and versions have 'garments;' the two words being somewhat similar in Hebrew.

in the book of Jehu the son of Hanani, ^m who is mentioned¹ in the book of the kings of Israel.

35 And after this ⁿ did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah king
36 of Israel, who did very wickedly: and he joined himself with him to make ships 37 to go to Tarshish:² and they made the ships in Ezion-gaber. Then Eliezer the son of Dodavah of Mareshah prophesied against Jehoshaphat, saying, Because thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah, the LORD hath broken thy works. ^o And the ships were broken, that they were not able to go ^p to Tarshish.

21 Now ^q Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David.

The wicked reign of Jehoram; revolt of the Edomites, and irruptions of the Philistines and Arabians.

2 AND Jehoram his son reigned in his stead. And he had brethren the sons of Jehoshaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and 3 Shephatiah: all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel.³ And their father gave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, and of precious things, with fenced cities in Judah: but the kingdom gave he to ^r Jehoram; because he was 4 the firstborn. Now when Jehoram was risen up to the kingdom of his father, he strengthened himself, and slew⁴ all his brethren with the sword, and divers also of the princes of Israel.

5 ^s Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned 6 eight years in Jerusalem. And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab: for he had the daughter of ^t Ahab to wife: and he 7 wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD. Howbeit the LORD would not destroy the house of David, because of the covenant that he had made with David, and as he promised to give a light to him and to his ^u sons for ever.

8 ^v In his days the Edomites revolted from under the dominion of Judah, and 9 made themselves a king. Then Jehoram went forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he rose up by night, and smote the Edomites which 10 compassed him in, and the captains of the chariots. So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did Libnah revolt from under his hand; because he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers.

11 Moreover he made high places in the mountains of Judah, and caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to ^x commit fornication, and compelled Judah thereto.

12 And there came ^y a writing to him from Elijah⁵ the prophet, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of David thy father, Because thou hast not walked ^z in the ways

13 of Jehoshaphat thy father, ^a nor in the ways of Asa king of Judah, but hast walked ^b in the way of the kings of Israel, and hast ^c made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to ^d go a whoring, like to the ^e whoredoms of the house of Ahab, and also hast ^f slain thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better 14 than thyself: behold, with a great plague will the LORD smite thy people, and 15 thy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods: and thou shalt have great sickness by ^g disease of thy bowels, until thy bowels fall out by reason of the sickness day by day.

16 Moreover the LORD ^h stirred up against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines, 17 and of the Arabians, that were near the Ethiopians: and they came up into Judah, and brake into it, and ⁱ carried away all the substance that was found in the king's house, and ^k his sons also, and his wives; so that there was never a 18 son left him, save ^l Jehoahaz, the youngest of his sons. ^m And after all this the 19 LORD smote him ⁿ in his bowels with an incurable disease. And it came to pass, that in process of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness: so he died of sore diseases. And his people made no burning for 20 him, like ^o the burning of his fathers. Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem eight years, and departed ^p without being desired. ^q Howbeit they buried him in the city of David, ^r but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

² In 1 Kings xxii. 48 the reading is, 'ships of Tarshish to go to Ophir.' See notes on 1 Kings ix. 26, 28; x. 22.

³ An error in transcribing, for 'king of Judah.'

⁴ The murderous spirit of ambition is amply attested by all history. It is not unusual for despots in the East to put to death all who might be competitors for the throne, or dangerous to their power. Thus Pygmalion of Tyre, who was apparently a contemporary of Jehoram, and a kinsman of his wife Athaliah, murdered his own brother-in-law, whose wealth and influence excited his cupidity and fear. The wickedness of Jehoram is expressly traced (ver. 6) to his connection with the family of Ahab, who married a Tyrian princess.

⁵ It is commonly supposed that Elijah's ascension had taken place several years before. It may be that God had revealed to the prophet the king's future course, and had instructed him to write this message, that it might be delivered at the proper time. Some conjecture that the name 'Elisha' should be read for 'Elijah.'

Ahaziah's wicked reign; Athaliah destroys the royal family, but Joash is preserved.

22 AND the inhabitants of Jerusalem made ¹Ahaziah his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had slain all the ²eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned. ³Forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was ⁴Athaliah the daughter of Omri. He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab: for his mother was his counsellor to do wickedly. Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD like the house of Ahab: for they were his counsellors after the death of his father to his destruction. He walked also after their counsel, and ⁵went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram. ⁶And he returned to be healed in Jezreel because of the wounds which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria.

And ⁷Azariah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick. And the destruction of Ahaziah ⁸was of God by coming to Joram: for when he was come, he ⁹went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, ¹⁰whom the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab. And it came to pass, that, when Jehu was ¹¹executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and ¹²found the princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them. ¹³And he sought Ahaziah: ¹⁴and they caught him, (for he was hid in Samaria,) and brought him to Jehu: and when they had slain him, they buried him: Because, said they, he is the son of Jehoshaphat, who ¹⁵sought the LORD with all his heart.

¹⁶So the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom. ¹⁷But when Athaliah the mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she arose and ¹⁸destroyed all the seed royal of the house of Judah. But ¹⁹Jehoshabeath, the daughter of the king, took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, and put him and his nurse in a bedchamber. So Jehoshabeath, the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of Jehoiada the priest, (for she was the sister of Ahaziah,) hid him from Athaliah, so that she slew him not. ²⁰And he was with them hid in the house of God six years: and Athaliah reigned over the land.

Joash is crowned, and established on the throne.

23 AND ¹in the seventh year Jehoiada² strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jeroham, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and ³Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into covenant with him. And they went about in Judah, and gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, and the chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem. And all the congregation made a covenant with the king in the house of God. And he said unto them, Behold, the king's son shall reign, as the LORD hath ⁴said of the sons of David. ⁵This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you ⁶entering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites, shall be porters of the doors; and a third part shall be at the king's house; and a third part at the gate of the foundation: and ⁷all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD. But let none come into the house of the LORD, save the priests, and ⁸they that minister of the Levites; they shall go in, for they are holy: but all the people shall keep the watch of the LORD. And the Levites shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and whosoever else cometh into the house, he shall be put to death: but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out. ⁹So the Levites and all Judah did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest ¹⁰dismissed not ¹¹the courses. Moreover Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds spears, and bucklers, and shields, that had been king David's, ¹²which were in the house of God. And he set all the people, every man having

² The Arabs took Jehoram's family captive, probably with the hope of obtaining a ransom for them: but some band of men in their camp slew them; thus defeating their purpose, whilst accomplishing God's design.

³ In 2 Kings viii. 26 it is 'twenty-two years.' But, as his father was only forty at his death (ch. xxi. 20), even this seems too great an age for his youngest son. The Septuagint has 'twenty.'

⁴ This should be 'Ahaziah,' as appears from the context; and it is so in the Sept. and some Hebrew manuscripts.

12 Now when Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the 13 king, she came to the people into the house of the LORD: and she looked, and, behold, the king stood at his pillar at the entering in, and the princes and the trumpets by the king: and all the people of the land rejoiced, and sounded with trumpets, also the singers with instruments of music, and ^r such as taught to sing 14 praise. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, Treason! Treason! Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth of the ranges: and whoso followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, Slay her not in the house 15 of the LORD. So they laid hands on her; and when she was come to the entering ^r of the horse gate by the king's house, they slew her there.

16 And Jehoiada made a covenant between him, and between all the people, and 17 between the king, that they should be the LORD's people. Then all the people went to the house of Baal, and brake it down, and brake his altars and his images 18 in pieces, and ^s slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. Also Jehoiada appointed the offices of the house of the LORD by the hand of the priests the Levites, whom David had ^t distributed in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt offerings of the LORD, as it is written in the ^u law of Moses, with rejoicing 19 and with singing, as it was ordained by David. And he set the ^x porters at the gates of the house of the LORD, that none which was unclean in any thing should 20 enter in. ^y And he took the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king from the house of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the 21 king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom. And all the people of the land rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had slain

And when they had finished it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, ¹whereof were made vessels¹ for the house of the LORD, even vessels to minister, and to offer withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver. 7 But there came a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee; for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of 8 Ephraim. But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong for the battle: God shall make 9 thee fall before the enemy: for God hath ^r power to help, and to cast down. And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army of Israel? And the man of God answered, ^s The 10 LORD is able to give thee much more than this. Then Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go home again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled against Judah, and they returned home in great anger.

^r ch. 20. 6.^s Pro. 10. 22.

11 And Amaziah strengthened himself, and led forth his people, and went to ^t the Valley of Salt, and smote of the children of Seir ten thousand. And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock,¹ that they all were broken in pieces.

^t see parallel, 2 Ki. 14. 7.

13 But the soldiers of the army which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria even unto Beth-horon, and smote three thousand of them, and took much spoil.

14 Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that ^u he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be ^x his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burned incense unto 15 them. Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after ^y the gods of the people, which ^z could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

^u see ch. 28. 23.^x Ex. 20. 3, 5.^y Ps. 96. 5.^z ver. 11.

16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbear; why shouldest thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbore, and said, I know that God hath ^a determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

^a 1 Sam. 2. 25.

17 Then ^b Amaziah² king of Judah took advice, and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us see one another in the face. And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The thistle [or, thorn] that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast 19 that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle. Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites; and thine heart lifteth thee up to boast: abide now at home; why shouldest thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even 20 thou, and Judah with thee? But Amaziah would not hear; for ^c it came of God, that he might deliver them into the hand of their enemies, because they ^d sought 21 after the gods of Edom. So Joash the king of Israel went up; and they saw one another in the face, both he and Amaziah king of Judah, at Beth-shemesh, which 22 belongeth to Judah. And Judah was put to the worse before Israel, and they 23 fled every man to his tent. And Joash the king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Joash, the son of ^e Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh, and brought him to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim 24 to the corner gate, four hundred cubits. And he took all the gold and the silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of God with Obed-edom, and the treasures of the king's house, the hostages also, and returned to Samaria.

^b see parallel, 2 Ki. 14. 8—14.^c ch. 22. 7; 1 Ki. 12. 15.^d ver. 14.^e see ch. 21. 17; 22. 1, 6.

25 ^f And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years. Now the rest of the acts of Amaziah, first and last, behold, are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and 27 Israel? Now after the time that Amaziah did turn away from following the LORD they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to Lachish:
28 but they sent to Lachish after him, and slew him there. And they brought him upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in the city of ^g Judah.

^f see parallel, 2 Ki. 14. 17—20.^g that is, the city of David, as it is 2 Ki. 14. 20.

26 THEN all the people of Judah took ^h Uzziah, who was sixteen³ years old, and made him king in the room of his father Amaziah. He built Eloth, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

^h see parallel, 2 Ki. 14. 21, 22; and 15. 1—4, where he is called Azariah.

3 Sixteen years old was Uzziah when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jecoliah of Jerusalem.
4 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that 5 his father Amaziah did. And ⁱ he sought God in the days of Zechariah, who ^k had understanding in the visions of God: and as long as he sought the LORD, God made him to prosper.

4:5

- 6 And he went forth and ¹warred against the Philistines, and brake down the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities ⁷about Ashdod, and among the Philistines. And God helped him against ⁸the Philistines, and against the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal, and the Mehunims.
- 8 And the Ammonites ⁹gave gifts to Uzziah: and his name spread abroad even to the entering in of Egypt; for he strengthened himself exceedingly.
- 9 Moreover Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the ¹⁰corner gate, and at the valley gate, and at the turning of the wall, and fortified them. Also he built towers ¹¹in the desert, and digged many wells [or, cut out many cisterns]: for he had much cattle, both in the low country, and in the plains: husbandmen also, and vine dressers in the mountains, and in Carmel [or, fruitful fields]: for he loved husbandry.
- 11 Moreover Uzziah had an host of fighting men, that went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account by the hand of Jeiel the scribe and Maaseiah the ruler, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains.
- 12 The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valour were 13 two thousand and six hundred. And under their hand was an army, three hundred thousand and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with 14 mighty power, to help the king against the enemy. And Uzziah prepared for them throughout all the host shields, and spears, and helmets, and ¹⁵habergeons, and bows, and slings to cast stones. And he made in Jerusalem engines, ²invented by cunning men, to be on the towers and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal. And his name spread far abroad; for he was marvellously helped, till he was strong.
- 16 But ³when he was strong, his heart was ⁴lifted up to his destruction: for he transgressed ⁵against the LORD his God, and ⁶went into the temple of the LORD ⁷to burn incense upon the altar of incense. And ⁸Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the LORD, that were valiant men: 18 and they withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It ⁹appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the LORD, but to the ¹⁰priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be for thine honour from the LORD God.
- 19 Then Uzziah was wroth, and had a censer in his hand to burn incense: and while he was wroth with the priests, ²the leprosy even rose up in his forehead 20 before the priests in the house of the LORD from beside the incense altar. And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous in his forehead, and they thrust him out from thence; yea, himself 21 ¹hasted also to go out, because the LORD had smitten him. ²And Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a ³several house, being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the LORD: ⁴and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land.
- 22 Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did ⁵Isaiah the prophet, the 23 son of Amoz, write. ⁶So Uzziah slept ⁷with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they said, He is a leper: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

Jotham's prosperous reign; his defeat of the Ammonites.

- 27 JOTHAM ¹was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jerushah, the 2 daughter of Zadok. And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit he entered ⁷not into the 3 temple of the LORD. And ⁸the people did yet corruptly. He built the high gate of the house of the LORD, and on the wall of Ophel ⁹[or, the tower ¹⁰] he built much.

¹ The mention of wells, cattle, etc., shows that these towers were built to shelter his shepherds and their flocks in times of danger, as well as his husbandmen and vine-dressers.

² These were probably similar to those used by the Greeks and Romans under the names of catapultæ and balistæ. Uzziah's engineers are supposed to have been the inventors of these machines, which Pliny distinctly states to have been of Syrian origin.

³ He was elated by his prosperity; and instead of giving God the glory, assumed a lordship over things sacred, in imitation perhaps of neighbouring sovereigns; and thus incurred the severe chastisement which confined him for life.

⁴ This was a very remarkable punishment. Aspiring to undue honour, he was smitten with a degrading disease. Invading the priests' office, he was subjected to their control, and ejected from his kingly functions. Intruding into the holy place, he was expelled even from the outer court.

⁵ The prophecies in the first six chapters of Isaiah were probably delivered in the latter part of Uzziah's reign.

⁶ See note on 2 Kings xv. 7.

⁷ This probably means that he imitated his father in all that was good, but did not, like him, profanely enter the temple.

⁸ Ophel is the lower ridge south of the temple, between the valley of the Kedron and the Tyropæon. Jotham's buildings enlarged as well as strengthened the city.

4 Moreover he built cities in the mountains of Judah; and in the forests he built 5 castles and towers.¹ He fought also with the king of the Ammonites, and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year an hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. So much did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second 6 year, and the third. So Jotham became mighty, because² he prepared [or, established] his ways before the LORD his God.

7 Now the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways, lo, they are 8 written in the book of the kings³ of Israel and Judah. He was five and twenty 9 years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. And Jotham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

Reign of Ahaz; his wickedness; and his chastisements by the Syrians, Israelites, Edomites, and Philistines.

28 AHAZ ^kwas twenty years⁴ old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the 2 LORD, like David his father: for he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, 3 and made also 'molten images for ^mBaalim. Moreover he burnt incense [or, offered sacrifice] in ⁿthe valley of the son of Hinnom, and burnt ^ohis children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen whom the LORD had cast out 4 before the children of Israel. He sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 Wherefore ^pthe LORD his God delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they ^qsmote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to Damascus. And he was also delivered into the 6 hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter. For ^rPekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah an hundred and twenty thousand in one day, which were all valiant men; ^sbecause they had forsaken the LORD God of their 7 fathers. And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was next to the king.
8 And the children of Israel carried away captive of their 'brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, ^ubecause the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that ^xreacheth up unto heaven.
10 And now ye purpose to keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for ^ybondmen and bondwomen unto you: but are there not with you, even with you, 11 sins against the LORD your God? Now hear me therefore, and deliver the captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: ^zfor the fierce 12 wrath of the LORD is upon you. Then certain of the heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, stood up against 13 them that came from the war, and said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the LORD already, ye intend to add more to our sins and to our trespass: for our trespass is great, and 14 there is fierce wrath against Israel. So the armed men left the captives and the 15 spoil before the princes and all the congregation. And the men ^awhich were expressed by name⁵ rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil clothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and ^bgave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, ^cthe city of palm trees, to their brethren: ⁶ then they returned to Samaria.⁷

16 ^dAt that time did king Ahaz send unto the kings⁸ of Assyria to help him.
17 For again the Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away captives.

¹ To protect the people against marauders.

² The connection between Jotham's might and his piety is very observable.

³ This must refer to a more detailed history than our 'Book of The Kings;' for in that there is less concerning Jotham's reign than in the Chronicles. It is supposed that the first portion of the prophecy of Micah (ch. i., ii.) was delivered in the reign of Jotham.

⁴ The Septuagint has 'twenty-five years,' which is more probable.

⁵ Rather, 'the men of name,' i. e. the leaders.

⁶ This beautiful and touching incident has no parallel in the histories of the wars of heathen nations, or perhaps even of such as are nominally Christian.

⁷ It was probably after this that the kings of Israel and Syria made their joint invasion of Judah, for the purpose of deposing the house of David from the throne; which forms the subject of Isa. vii., viii., ix. 1—7.

⁸ Or, as in 2 Kings xvi. 7, 'the king;' who was Tiglath-pileser.

18 ^c The Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken Beth-shemesh, and Ajalon, and Gederoth, and Shoho with the villages thereof, and Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and 19 the villages thereof: and they dwelt there. For ^f the LORD brought Judah low because of Ahaz king of ^g Israel; for he ^h made Judah naked,¹ and transgressed 20 sore against the LORD. And ⁱ Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria came unto him, 21 and distressed him,² but strengthened him not. For Ahaz took away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

22 And in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: this 23 is that king Ahaz.³ For ^k he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him: and he said, Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that ^l they may help me. But they ^m were the ruin of 24 him, and of all Israel. And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, ⁿ and cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, ^o and shut up the doors⁴ of the house of the LORD, and he ^p made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places to burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

26 ^q Now the rest of his acts and of all his ways, first and last, behold, they are 27 written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel. And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jerusalem: ^r but they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel.⁵ And Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

Hezekiah succeeds his father; restores the worship of God, and offers great sacrifices of atonement.

29 HEZEKIAH ^s began to reign when he was five and twenty years old, and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Abijah, 2 the daughter of ^t Zechariah. And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father had done.

3 He in the first year of his reign, in the first month, ^u opened the doors of the 4 house of the LORD,⁶ and repaired them. And he brought in the priests and the 5 Levites, and gathered them together into the east street, and said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites, ^v sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness⁷ out of the holy place.

6 ^w For our fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and ^z have forsaken him, and have ^a turned away their faces from 7 the habitation of the LORD, and turned their backs. ^b Also they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burned incense nor 8 offered burnt offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel. Wherefore the ^c wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them 9 to trouble, ^d to astonishment, and to ^e hissing, as ye see with your eyes. For, lo, ^f our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons and our daughters and our 10 wives are in captivity for this. Now it is in mine heart to make ^g a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us. My 11 sons, be not now negligent: for the LORD hath ^h chosen you to stand before him, to serve him, and that ye should minister unto him, and burn incense [or, offer sacrifice].

12 Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the Kohathites: and of the sons of Merari; Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Jehalelel: and of the Gershonites; Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah: and of the sons of Elizaphan; Shimri, and 14 Jeiel: and of the sons of Asaph; Zechariah, and Mattaniah: and of the sons of Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: and of the sons of Jeduthun; Shemaiah, and 15 Uzziel. 2 Although the king of Assyria helped Ahaz against the Syrians (2 Kings xvi. 9), he gave him no assistance against the Edomites and the Philistines; and he distressed him by taking his treasures.

3 The Septuagint joins this to the next verse: 'And king Ahaz said, I will seek the gods of Damascus which smite me.' This appears to be the sense of the text.

4 The temple continued shut up till the beginning of the next reign: see ch. xxix. 3.

5 Here, as in ch. xxi. 2, 'Israel' is put for Judah.

6 This was an auspicious commencement of Hezekiah's reign, and an encouraging pledge of what his after course was to be. As the temple at Jerusalem was the religious centre of the nation, to which the affections of every pious Jew were drawn; so the conduct of the kings of Judah, with respect to this sacred edifice, affords a good criterion of their real character.

7 This term designates everything which had been employed in, or connected with, idolatrous worship.

went into the inner part of the house of the LORD, to cleanse it, and brought out all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad into the 17 brook Kidron. Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to the porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.¹
 18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and the altar of burnt offering, with all the vessels thereof, 19 and the shewbread table, with all the vessels thereof. Moreover all the vessels, which king Abaz in his reign did ^mcast away² in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.
 20 Then Hezekiah the king rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and 21 went up to the house of the LORD. And they brought seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for a ⁿsin offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah.³ And he commanded the priests the sons 22 of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the LORD. So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and ^osprinkled it on the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they 23 killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar. And they brought forth the he-goats for the sin offering before the king and the congregation; and they laid their ^phands upon them: and the priests killed them, and they made ^qreconciliation with their blood upon the altar, ^rto make an atonement for all Israel:⁴ for the king commanded that the burnt offering and the ^ssin offering should be made for all Israel. And he set the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, ^uaccording to the commandment of David, and of ^xGad the king's seer, and Nathan the prophet:
 26 ^yfor so was the commandment of the LORD by his prophets. And the Levites stood with the instruments ^zof David, and the priests with ^athe trumpets. And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt offering upon the altar. And when the burnt offering began, ^bthe song of the LORD began also with the trumpets, and 28 with the instruments ordained by David king of Israel. And all the congregation worshipped, and the singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded: and all this 29 continued until the burnt offering was finished. And when they had made an end of offering, ^cthe king and all that were present with him bowed themselves, and 30 worshipped. Moreover Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD ^dwith the words of David, and of Asaph the seer. And they sang praises with gladness,⁵ and they bowed their heads and worshipped.
 31 Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye have consecrated yourselves unto the LORD, come near and bring sacrifices and ^ethank offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank offerings; and as 32 many as were of a free heart burnt offerings. And the number of the burnt offerings, which the congregation brought, was threescore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt offering to the 33 LORD. And the consecrated things were six hundred oxen and three thousand 34 sheep. But the priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt offerings: wherefore ^ftheir brethren the Levites did help them,⁶ till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves: ^gfor the Levites were more ^hupright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.
 35 And also the burnt offerings were in abundance, with ⁱthe fat of the peace offerings, and ^jthe drink offerings for every burnt offering. So the service of the 36 house of the LORD was set in order. And Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people: for the thing was done suddenly.

¹ First the priests and Levites together cleansed the courts of the priests and of the people, which occupied eight days; and then the priests cleansed the interior of the temple (which the Levites were not allowed to enter), and brought all the dirt and rubbish to the porch, whence it was carried away by the Levites to the brook Kidron: this occupied eight days more.

² Instead of 'cast away,' the Sept. has 'profaned.'

³ These sacrifices were unusually numerous, because they were offered on account of multiplied sins of a wilful and aggravated kind. The sin-offerings were presented first for the kingdom, i. e. for the king and the royal family; secondly, for the sanctuary, which had been polluted, and the priests, who had been negligent and unholy; and finally for Judah—for the whole mass of the people, who, following these examples, had committed every kind of wickedness.

⁴ Including the ten tribes, though sunk still deeper than Judah in apostasy and idolatry: thus preparing the way for the large-hearted plan which Hezekiah immediately afterwards carried out. See ch. xxx.

⁵ Not only was the right ceremonial observed, but it seems to have been accompanied with right affections of the heart. The gladness of these services forcibly suggests the importance of a cheerful Christianity.

⁶ Peace-offerings, and some others, the Levites might flay and dress; but the whole burnt-offerings (i. e. those which were entirely consumed on the altar) could be offered only by the priests, except in a case of necessity such as that mentioned here.

Hezekiah causes a great passover to be celebrated for all Israel and Judah, and the idols and high places to be destroyed.

- 30 AND Hezekiah sent to all Israel¹ and Judah, and wrote letters also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel. For the king had taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover in the second² month.³ For they could not keep it⁴ at that time,⁵ because the priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem. And the thing pleased the king and all the congregation. So they established a decree to make proclamation throughout all Israel, from Beer-sheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done it of a long time in such sort as it was written.
- 6 So the posts went with the letters from the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, ^o turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you, that are escaped out of the hand of ^p the kings of Assyria. And be not ye ^q like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the LORD God of their fathers, who therefore ^r gave them up to desolation, as ye see. Now be ye not ^s stiffnecked, as your fathers were, but ^t yield yourselves unto the LORD, and enter into his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever: and serve the LORD your God, ^u that the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you. For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find ^v compassion before them that lead them captive, ^w so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is ^x gracious and merciful, and ^y will not turn away his face from you, if ye ^z return unto him.
- 10 So the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh even unto Zebulun: but ^a they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them. Nevertheless ^b divers of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun⁴ humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem. Also in Judah ^c the hand of God was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king and of the princes, ^d by the word of the LORD.
- 13 And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great congregation. And they arose and took away the ^e altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron. Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth ^f day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites were ^g ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt offerings into the house of the LORD. And they stood in their place after their manner, according to the law of Moses the man of God: ^h the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites.
- 17 For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified: ⁱ therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD. For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, ^j yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written. But Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one that ^k prepareth his heart to seek God, the LORD God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary.⁵ And the LORD hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed⁶ the people.
- 21 And the children of Israel that were present at Jerusalem kept ^l the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great gladness: and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with loud instruments unto the LORD.

1 This is the first recorded attempt on the part of any king of Judah to bring back the people of the ten tribes to the true faith. It does not appear that either Hoshea or Hezekiah regarded this act of obedience to Jehovah as inconsistent with the allegiance of the people to their temporal sovereign.

2 According to the law, the passover was to be celebrated on the fourteenth day of the first month; but, if any man was unclean at that time, he might keep it in the second month (Numb. ix. 10, 11). This was the case now: see ver. 3.

3 Or rather 'at the time;' that is, the time fixed by the law; for they did keep it in the second month.

4 Those who came to Jerusalem from the kingdom of Israel appear to have belonged, for the most part, to the tribes which were at a distance from the boundary of the two kingdoms: on which account they had probably less of national jealousy than others who lived nearer the frontier of Judah.

5 From this and many similar passages we learn that even under the Mosaic dispensation, God regarded more the state and dispositions of the heart than the external purity of the worshipper.

6 Or, 'was propitious to the people;' that is, accepted them; for there is no reason to suppose that they had been visited with any bodily disease.

22 And Hezekiah spake ^pcomfortably unto all the Levites ^qthat taught the good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace offerings, and ^rmaking confession to the LORD God of their fathers.¹

8 of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh month. And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they blessed the LORD, and his people Israel.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

10 And Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him, and said, ^l'Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty: for the LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.'⁷

14 house of God. And Kore the son of Imnah the Levite, the porter toward the east, was over the freewill offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the 15 LORD, and the most holy things. And next him were Eden, and Miniamin, and

¹ This was the right way to teach the Israelites the evils of idolatry. They had never spent such happy days under the influence of Jeroboam's political religion, or in the worship of Baal. When they had felt the blessedness of the service of God, the idols and their altars were soon destroyed. See ch. xxxi. 1.

² This does not mean that they observed seven other days of unleavened bread; but that they offered sacrifices, with praises and thanksgivings, seven other days.

³ As the people in general, and especially those who came out of the kingdom of Israel, might be unprepared for the expense attending these sacrifices, Hezekiah and his princes supplied them with cattle. This open-handed liberality happily illustrates the generous influence of true religion.

⁴ Particularly because now, for the first time since the reign of Solomon, many from among the ten tribes came up to join in celebrating the passover.

⁵ Hezekiah took upon himself the expense of all these sacrifices. Some think that this had been done before by the kings who adhered to the worship of Jehovah.

⁶ This shows how negligent the people had been in presenting the offerings which the law prescribed.

⁷ The liberality of the king and people not only provided well for the priests, but seems to have also inspired the priests with the same disposition.

Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in ^uthe cities of the priests, in ^{their} set office [or, trust^o], to give to their brethren by courses, as well to the 16 great as to the small: beside their genealogy¹ of males, from three years old and upward, even unto every one that entereth into the house of the LORD, his 17 daily portion for their service in their charges according to their courses; both to the genealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites 18 ^ufrom twenty years old and upward, in their charges by their courses; and to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their set office [or, trust] they 19 sanctified themselves in holiness: also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were in ^uthe fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were ^uexpressed by name, to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.
 20 And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and ^swrought that which was 21 good and right and truth before the LORD his God. And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law,² and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart, and prospered.

Sennacherib's invasion and siege of Jerusalem; the destruction of his army.

32 AFTER ^uthese things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought to win them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed
 3 to fight against Jerusalem,³ he took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city: and they did 4 help him. So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why 5 should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water? Also ^uhe strengthened himself, ^uand built up all the wall that was broken, and raised it up to the towers,⁴ and another wall without, and repaired ^uMillo in the city of David, and 6 made darts [or, swords; or, weapons] and shields in abundance. And he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him in the street⁵ 7 of the gate of the city, and spake comfortably to them, saying, ^uBe strong and courageous, ^ube not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the 8 multitude that is with him: for ^bthere be more with us than with him: with him is an ^carm of flesh; but ^dwith us is the LORD our God to help us, and ^eto fight our battles. And the people rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

9 ^fAfter this⁶ did Sennacherib king of Assyria send his servants to Jerusalem, (but he himself laid siege against Lachish, and all his power with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying, 10 ^gThus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide in 11 the siege [or, in the strong hold] in Jerusalem? Doth not Hezekiah persuade you to give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, ^hThe LORD 12 our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria? ⁱHath not the same Hezekiah taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall worship before one altar, and burn incense upon 13 it? Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? ^kWere the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver 14 their lands out of mine hand? Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of 15 mine hand, that your God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand? Now therefore ^llet not Hezekiah deceive you nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers: how much less shall 16 your God deliver you out of mine hand? And his servants spake yet more against the LORD God, and against his servant Hezekiah.

¹ This seems to signify that shares were given, not to the priests and Levites alone, but also to their male children, of three years old and upwards, when they were brought to the temple. Some suppose the passage to mean, that such Levites under twenty years of age as came to do any service were entitled to a full daily portion, independently of that which belonged to their fathers.

² It may be inferred from Prov. xxv. 1, that Hezekiah employed some skilful scribes to multiply accurate copies of the sacred writings.

³ In this account of the Assyrian invasion we have a fuller description than in 2 Kings xviii. of Hezekiah's preparations for defence, by inclosing the water-courses and strengthening the fortifications; with the addition of his pious and encouraging addresses to the people, leading them to trust in God.

Wicked reign of Manasseh; his captivity, repentance, and subsequent reformation.

- 33 MANASSEH ^m was twelve years old when he began to reign, and he reigned ⁿ fifty and five years in Jerusalem: but did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, like unto the ^o abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel. For he built again the high places which Hezekiah his father had ^p broken down, and he reared up altars for Baalim, and ^q made groves, and worshipped ^r all the host of heaven, and served them. Also he built altars in the house of the LORD, whereof the LORD had said, ^s In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever. And he built altars for all the host of heaven ^t in the two courts of the house of the LORD. ^u And he caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom. ^v Also he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and ^w dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards. He wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to

¹ It is supposed that Hezekiah covered the fountain of Gihon, on the west of Jerusalem, and conveyed its waters by subterranean channels into the city; so as to cut off the supply from a besieging army, and to preserve it for the inhabitants. And it is a remarkable fact, that, though the citizens of Jerusalem have been frequently reduced by siege to the extremity of famine, they do not appear ever to have wanted water, whilst the besiegers have been brought into the greatest distress on this account.

² The Chaldee and several Hebrew manuscripts insert the words 'of the king' after 'princes.' Boothroyd translates the passage, 'the ambassadors, the princes of the king of Babylon.' Babylon was now under the rule of Merodach Baladan. See note on 2 Kings xx. 12.

7 anger. And ^a he set a carved image, the idol which he had made, in the house of God, of which God had said to David and to Solomon his son, In ^a this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put 8 my name for ever: ^b neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; so that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law and the statutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moses.

9 So Manasseh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, and to do worse than the heathen whom the Lord had destroyed before the children of 10 Israel. And the Lord spake to Manasseh, and to his people: but they would 11 not hearken. ^c Wherefore the Lord brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria, ¹ which took Manasseh ^d among the thorns, ² and ^e bound 12 him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon. And ^f when he was in affliction, he besought the Lord his God, and ^g humbled himself greatly before the God of 13 his fathers, and prayed unto him: and he was ^h intreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh ⁱ knew that the Lord he was God.

14 Now after this he built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of ^k Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in at the fish gate, and compassed ^l about Ophel [or, the tower], and raised it up a very great height, and put 15 captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah. And he took away ^m the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the Lord, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the Lord, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out 16 of the city. And he repaired the altar of the Lord, and sacrificed thereon ⁿ peace offerings and ^o thank offerings, and commanded Judah to serve the Lord God of 17 Israel. ^p Nevertheless the people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the Lord their God only.

18 ^q Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and his prayer ³ unto his God, and the words of ^r the seers that spake to him in the name of the Lord God of Israel,
19 behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel. His prayer also, and how God was intreated of him, ^s and all his sins, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, ^t before he 20 was humbled: behold, they are written among the sayings of ^u the seers. ^v So Manasseh slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house: and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

Amon's wicked reign.

21 ^x AMON was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned
22 two years in Jerusalem. But he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, as did Manasseh his father: for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images
23 which Manasseh his father had made, ^y and served them; and humbled not himself before the Lord, ^z as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but 24 Amon trespassed more and more. ^a And his servants conspired against him, and 25 slew him in his own house. But the people of the land slew all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.

34 JOSIAH ^a was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in

3 the right hand, nor to the left. For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet young, he began to ^b seek after the God of David his father: and in the twelfth year he began ^c to purge Judah and Jerusalem ^d from the high places, and
4 the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images. ^e And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the images, that were on high above them, he cut down; and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, ^f and strowed it upon the

1 This was Esar-haddon, the son and successor of Sennacherib.

2 The Syriac and Arabic read, 'took Manasseh alive,' or 'among the living;' the Hebrew words being so much alike that a transcriber might easily mistake the one for the other.

3 A prayer of ancient date has come down to us, purporting to be this prayer of Manasseh. It abounds in pious sentiments; but, not having been found in Hebrew, nor cited by the more eminent fathers, nor contained in any of the catalogues of Scripture drawn up by ancient councils, it has been properly classed among the apocryphal writings.

4 Amon, having his father's example before him, with astonishing perverseness copied his vices, but did not imitate his repentance.

6 priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem. And so did he in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their 7 mattocks round about. And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had ^abeaten the graven images into powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

^a Deu. 9. 21.

8 Now ¹in the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land, and the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his
9 God. And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered ^bthe money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and they returned to Jerusalem.²

^b see parallel, 2 Ki. 22. 3—20.

10 And they put it in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the 11 LORD, to repair and amend the house: even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and to floor the houses³
12 which the kings of Judah had destroyed. And the men did the work faithfully: and the overseers of them were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward; and other of the Levites, all that could skill of instruments of music.
13 Also they were over the bearers of burdens, and were overseers of all that wrought the work in any manner of service: ⁴and of the Levites there were scribes, and officers, and porters.

^c see 2 Ki. 12. 4, etc.

14 And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, Hilkiah the priest ^mfound a book of the law of the LORD given by Moses.
15 And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.
16 And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back
17 again, saying, All that was committed to thy servants, they do it. And they have gathered together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

^d 1 Chr. 23. 4, 5.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me 19 a book. And Shaphan read it before the king. And it came to pass, when the 20 king had heard the words of the law, that he rent⁴ his clothes. And the king commanded Hilkiah, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and ⁿAbdon the son of 21 Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying, Go, inquire of the LORD for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.

^m 2 Ki. 22. 8, etc.

22 And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of ^oTikvath, the son of ^pHasrah, keeper of the wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the college [or, second part]:)

ⁿ or, Achbor, 2 Ki. 22. 12.

23 and they spake to her to that effect. And she answered them, Thus saith the 24 LORD God of Israel, Tell ye the man that sent you to me, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king 25 of Judah: because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and shall not be quenched.

^o 2 Ki. 22. 14.
^p or, Harhas.

26 And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to inquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel concerning the words which 27 thou hast heard; Because thine heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before God, when thou heardest his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humbledst thyself before me, and didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee also, saith the LORD. Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace, neither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the same. So they brought the king word again.

29 ^qThen the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and 30 Jerusalem. And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests, and the Levites, and all the people, great and small: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant that was found in the house of the LORD.

- 31 And the king stood in ^rhis place, and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the
- 32 covenant which are written in this book. And he caused all that were present in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem did
- 33 according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers.

And Josiah took away all the ^sabominations out of all the countries that per-tained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God. And all his days they departed not from following the LORD, the God of their fathers.

Josiah keeps a great passover; opposes the king of Egypt, and is slain in battle.

- 35 MOREOVER ^uJosiah kept a passover unto the LORD in Jerusalem: and they
- 2 killed the passover on the ^xfourteenth day of the first month. And he set the priests in their ^ycharges, and ^zencouraged them to the service of the house of the
- 3 LORD, and said unto the Levites ^athat taught all Israel, which were holy unto the LORD, ^bPut the holy ark ¹^cin the house which Solomon the son of David king of Israel did build; ^d*it shall not be* a burden upon your shoulders: serve
- 4 now the LORD your God, and his people Israel, and prepare yourselves by the ^ehouses of your fathers, after your courses, according to the ^fwriting of David king of Israel, and according to the ^gwriting of Solomon his son. And ^hstand in the holy place according to the divisions of the families of the fathers of your
- 6 brethren the people, and after the division of the families of the Levites. So kill the passover, and ⁱsanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.
- 7 And Josiah ^kgave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand,
- 8 and three thousand bullocks: these were of the king's substance. And ^lhis princes gave willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: Hilki-ah and Zechariah and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover offerings two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three
- 9 hundred oxen. Conaniah also, and Shemaiah and Nethaneel, his brethren, and Hashabiah and Jeiel and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, gave unto the Levites for passover offerings five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.
- 10 So the service was prepared, and the priests ^mstood in their place, and the Levites in their courses, according to the king's commandment. And they killed the passover, and the priests ⁿsprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites ^oflayed them. And they removed the burnt offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people, to offer unto the LORD, as it is written ^pin the book of Moses. And so did they with the oxen.
- 13 And they ^qroasted the passover with fire according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings ^rsod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and divided them speedily among all the people.
- 14 And afterward they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: because the priests the sons of Aaron were busied in offering of burnt offerings and the fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests
- 15 the sons of Aaron. And the singers the sons of Asaph were in their place, according to the ^scommandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer;² and the porters ^twaited at every gate; they might not depart from their service; for their brethren the Levites prepared for them. So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Josiah. And the children of Israel that were present kept the passover at that time, and the feast of ^uunleavened bread seven days.
- 18 And ^xthere was no passover³ like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.
- 20 ^yAfter all this, when Josiah had prepared the temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Charchemish⁴ by Euphrates: and Josiah went out

⁶ We gain much insight into the awful corruption of the people at this period from the prophecies of Ezekiel, who had been carried captive to Chaldea, and received there, for the special benefit of his fellow-exiles, revelations of the impending doom of the holy city and the reasons of God's displeasure, accompanied with disclosures of His ultimate purposes of mercy towards His people: see Ezekiel, ch. viii., x., xi. At the same time, the prophet Jeremiah, living in the midst of his people, warned them against vainly hoping (as the false prophets encouraged them to do) for the preservation of Jerusalem; assured them that the king and his court, the city and its wicked inhabitants, were doomed to total ruin, and that the living germ of Hebrew nationality was with the captives in Babylon; cautioned them against indulging the hope of a speedy restoration, by telling them that the captivity should last for seventy years (Jeremiah, ch. xix., xxiv., xxv., xxvii., xxix.); predicted their certain restoration at the appointed time, and the great blessings which God had in reserve for them hereafter (ch. xxx.—xxxiii.); and, further, foretold the utter overthrow of Babylon, which was then in the plenitude of her power (ch. l., li.)

And ^kthem that had escaped from the sword ^lcarried he away to Babylon; ^mwhere they were servants to him and his sons until the reign of the kingdom of Persia: to fulfil the word of the LORD by the mouth of ⁿJeremiah, until the land ^ohad enjoyed her sabbaths: ²for as long as she lay desolate ^pshe kept sabbath, to fulfil threescore and ten years.

1 There is reason to believe that, during these national judgments, the most religious portion of the Hebrews were preserved and carried into exile; while the idolatrous and profane were for the most part destroyed. See Ezek. ix. 2—6; xiv. 13—21.

2 Those arrears of rest which had been accumulating by the neglect of the sabbatic year—an institution which served perhaps beyond any other to test the faith and obedience of the people; but which they, in their impiety and covetousness, had neglected. The land of Judah was not colonized by foreigners, as that of Samaria had been; so that there was nothing to prevent its entire re-occupation by the Jews at the appointed time.

3 The Book of the Chronicles closes with ver. 21. Vers. 22, 23, which record transactions many years afterwards, seem to have been copied from Ezra, ch. i. 1—3.

NOTE ON THE EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE CAPTIVITY.

THE captivity in Babylon was a very remarkable dispensation of Providence. The people of Israel, in the times of the Judges, had often been subjugated by their enemies; and the ark, the symbol of God's presence, had once been carried away for a short time into the land of the Philistines. But this captivity was attended with much heavier calamities: the whole land was now desolated by war; the ark was destroyed, the temple burned to the ground, and Jerusalem laid in ruins; while the people were delivered into the hands of barbarous enemies, and large numbers of them were transported to a distant and heathen country. It is not easy to conceive what must have been the feelings of distress and amazement of the faithful servants of God whose lot was cast in these dark and calamitous times. But in the 'Lamentations' of the prophet Jeremiah, who lived and acted in the midst of these scenes, there is a faithful and heart-touching delineation of this visitation and of its results. See also Psalms lxxiv., lxxix., cii., cxxxvii., which appear to have been written about this time.

Yet, painful as these events were, they were wonderfully overruled for the further development of the purposes of God, and the advancement of true religion in the world. The captivity of the Jews in Babylon seems to have entirely cured them of the sin of idolatry, to which they had been for ages so much addicted; a result which all previous warnings, entreaties, corrections, and judgments had failed to produce. It also tended greatly to prepare the way for the coming of Christ, and the dispensation of the gospel, by causing the dispersion of the Jews throughout a great part of the known world; for the scattered Jews, carrying with them the Holy Scriptures which contained the prophecies of the Messiah, became the means of diffusing some knowledge of the true religion, and of raising a general expectation of the coming of the Saviour.

These events further conduced to this end by diminishing the glory and proving the imperfect nature of the Jewish dispensation. For, through the destruction of the temple, and the removal of the Jews from their own land, it became impracticable to them to observe the laws respecting the offering of sacrifices, and other Divine institutions: and this showed the necessity of introducing a new dispensation, which should be adapted not to one particular land, but to the whole world.

These occurrences were also of great importance as presenting a striking fulfilment of prophecy. Long before the overthrow of the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah, their relative destinies had been foretold. At the time of their separation, no human calculation could have determined which of the two would be the more stable or prosperous. That of Israel seemed rather to have the advantage, considering her greater extent and population. But the voice of prophecy soon decided the question. In the days of Jeroboam, Ahijah declared that God would 'root up Israel,' and 'scatter them beyond the river' (1 Kings xiv. 15). Hosea, Amos, and Isaiah, all announce the earlier downfall and the utter desolation of Israel. Israel was to be 'broken within threescore and five years,' and to 'cease from being a people' (Isa. vii. 6—8); and the Assyrian power was foreshown to be the instrument of this Divine judgment (Hos. xi. 5, etc.).

The captivity of Judah was first expressly foretold in the reign of Hezekiah, after his ostentatious display of his wealth and magnificence to the Babylonian ambassadors (2 Kings xx. 17, 18; 2 Chron. xxxii. 27). And the fulness of the predictions on this subject is very remarkable. They not only describe the calamity which was about to overwhelm the Jewish people, but they disclose the reasons and purposes of God's providence in bringing it to pass. They represent it as a judicial visitation for an amount of sin and corruption not otherwise to be purged away; and as mercifully designed, not for destruction, but for discipline and reformation. They foretell, also, its duration, which they limit to seventy years; its issue; and the course of events by which it would be terminated.

The restoration of Judah—an event so little to be expected in the ordinary course of things—was foretold as plainly as the exile. See Isa. xiv. 3; xlv. 26—28; xlv. 1—4, 13; Jer. xxv. 9—13; xxix. 10—14; l. 4, 5; li.; Ezek. xi. 16, 17; xii. 15; xx. 34, etc. See also Lev. xxvi.; Deut. xxviii., xxix.; where, at a much earlier date, the nature and course of this and other Divine judgments had been particularly pointed out.

It is further worthy of notice, how greatly the light of Divine revelation was augmented at this period. While the people of God were sinking into the deepest depression, the disclosures of prophecy respecting all the great subjects which it embraced were becoming clearer and fuller. At the very time when heathen powers seemed to triumph the most in trampling upon the chosen people, the voice of prophecy was making its most copious and explicit announcements concerning those very nations: showing God's overruling power over them; proving them to be the instruments of his providence, and marking the appointed periods of the rise and fall of many among them. By these means, under the perplexing circumstances of heathen triumph, when the sufferings and fears of God's people were at their greatest height, their minds were directed and comforted. See Isa. xiii. —xxi., xxiii., xlv., xlvii.; Jer. xli.—li.; Ezek. xxv.—xxxii.; Dan. iv., vii.—xii., etc.

But, above all, greatly enlarged revelations were made, at this period, concerning the new dispensation—the spiritual kingdom of God—which was to be founded by the Messiah. The fullest and most expressive announcements of gospel blessings were made just when the earthly kingdom was approaching its downfall. Thus, when the first and temporary dispensation began to be shaken, the objects and promises of the second and permanent one began to be substituted in its place; the new kingdom and new covenant were set forth to view, and the glorious benefits to be bestowed upon men, through the redemption of Christ, were placed in a clearer light than ever before. See especially Isa. ii., xi., lii.—lv.

Concurrently with this, it will be seen that the prophets bring the idea of religion nearer to the gospel standard, by explaining the inferior value of the ceremonial law, and giving notice of its future abrogation (Mic. vi. 6, 8; Hos. vi. 6): thus preparing the way for the introduction of the more spiritual economy, which sets the ritual law wholly aside, and establishes the moral law in its fullest extent. This exposition of the principle of religion by the prophets was peculiarly seasonable at this time, when the observance of the ritual was rendered difficult or impracticable. When their heathen enemies were about to spoil their land, when access to the temple would be denied them, and the temple itself destroyed, the servants of God were taught that the personal religion which was still left to them was that which He had always preferred (Isa. lxvi. 1, 2; Jer. vii. 22, 23); they were trained to maintain the knowledge and service of God without the aid of their political constitution and ceremonial worship; and they were encouraged by the promise that, in their exiled and scattered state, God himself would be their sanctuary (Ezek. xi. 16). Thus, amidst the judgments of the land, when all was confusion and anarchy, and the public ordinances of religion were impeded, or wholly taken away, its essential principles were more completely developed.

THE BOOK OF EZRA.

EZRA was one of the Jewish exiles at Babylon, where he was probably born. He was of the race of Aaron, and descended from the high priest who was slain at the capture of Jerusalem (2 Kings xxv. 18—21). His eminent learning and piety, and his consequent high consideration among his countrymen, peculiarly fitted him for the important duties which he was called upon to discharge.

This book is not a regular and continuous history, but consists of two entirely distinct portions, separated from each other by a considerable interval of time. The former (ch. i.—vi.) contains an account of the first return of the Jewish exiles under the leadership of Zerubbabel, and of the rebuilding of the temple. This work, which was begun under the authority of Cyrus in the year 536 B. C., was afterwards suspended for a long period, owing to the powerful opposition of the Samaritans and the indifference of the Jews, and was not completed till twenty years after its commencement, in the sixth year of Darius Hystaspis, which was the seventieth year after the destruction of the temple by the Chaldeans.

Of the transactions of the succeeding sixty years we have here no record. But the second portion of this book (ch. vii.—x.) is a personal narrative, in which Ezra relates his journey to Jerusalem, accompanied by a large body of his countrymen, and invested with ample authority from the king of Persia to restore the worship of God, and to settle the government of the people according to their own laws. To this is added an account of his zealous and successful exertions for their reformation.

The deliverance of the Jews from Babylon, and their return to the land of promise, which, though full of joy, was attended with considerable difficulty and danger, is spoken of by the prophets as a wonderful interposition of Divine Providence, in some respects similar to their former deliverance from Egypt. And it is an event of permanent and universal interest, showing that though God's church be cast down, it is not cast off; though his people be corrected, they are not abandoned; though thrown into the furnace that the dross may be separated, they are not lost there.

Although, in the remainder of the Old Testament annals, the chosen people appear no more as an independent nation, but as a comparatively feeble remnant, living under the control and protection of a foreign power; yet their history is still seen to be indissolubly connected with all the merciful purposes of God towards the human race (see the prophecies of Haggai and Zechariah); and the restoration of their institutions, temple, and worship was evidently an event of the highest importance, as tending to keep alive the expectation of those great realities of which these were the types, and to prepare the way for the further manifestation of God's grace in the person and work of Christ.

Some portions of this book (chiefly documentary) are chiefly in the Chaldee dialect.

The contents of this book are as follows:—

I. THE RETURN OF THE FIRST COMPANY OF JEWS FROM BABYLON, AND THE REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE: comprising the proclamation of Cyrus (ch. i.): a list of those who returned with Zerubbabel; with their offerings to the temple (ii.): the setting up of the altar, and the commencement of the temple (iii.): the opposition of the Samaritans, and suspension of the building (iv.): the prophesying of Haggai and Zechariah; recommencement of the building; visit of the governors, and their letter to Darius; the king's favourable decree; completion and dedication of the temple (v., vi.)

II. EZRA'S JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM WITH A LARGE COMPANY, AND THE REFORMATIONS WHICH HE EFFECTED: including Ezra's commission from Artaxerxes, and his journey to Jerusalem with his companions (vii., viii.): intermarriages of the Jews with their heathen neighbours; Ezra's distress, and prayer; the repentance and reformation of the people (ix., x.)

The proclamation of Cyrus authorizing the return of the Jews and the rebuilding of the temple.

1 NOW in the first year of Cyrus¹ king of Persia, that the word of the LORD^a by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia,^b that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD God of heaven^c hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth;² and he hath^d charged me³ to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house⁴ of the LORD God of Israel, (^e he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem.

4 And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, beside^f the freewill offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem.

5 Then rose up the chief of the fathers⁵ of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit^g God had raised,⁶ to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem. And all they that were about them strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, beside all that was willingly⁷ offered.

7 ^h Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the LORD,⁸ which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods; even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath the treasurer, and numbered them untoⁱ Sheshbazzar,⁹ the prince of Judah. And this is the number of them: thirty chargers of gold, a thousand^j chargers of silver, nine and twenty knives, thirty basins of gold, silver basins of a second sort four hundred and ten, and other vessels a thousand. All the vessels of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred.¹⁰ All these did^m Sheshbazzar bring up with them of the captivity that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem.

1 Cyrus had led the united army of Persia and Media against Babylon; and, on the capture of the city, he had added the Babylonian empire to the more Eastern one of the Medes and Persians. He appears to have given the administration to Darius the Mede, whom some suppose to have been his uncle, Cyaxares. After the short reign of Darius, Cyrus came to Babylon, and in the first year of his reign there he issued this edict.

2 The empire of Cyrus was of vast extent; reaching on the east to the Indus, on the north to the Euxine Sea, on the west to Egypt and the island of Cyprus, and on the south to the Persian Gulf and to Ethiopia.

3 This referred probably to the prophecy of Isaiah (ch. xlv. 26—28; xlv. 1, 12, 13), which, about 170 years before, had expressly mentioned Cyrus as the deliverer of Israel. See notes on those passages. It is supposed that these and other predictions were brought to the knowledge of Cyrus by Daniel, whose venerable age and high reputation, as well as his eminent station, would tend to procure a favourable reception for his communication.

4 This was to be their chief object in returning to the land of their fathers (see the prophecies of Haggai); and as it was prosecuted or neglected, their prosperity grew or declined.

5 Many of the Jews had obtained in Chaldea comfortable and advantageous settlements, which led them to prefer remaining there. Josephus says that the proclamation of Cyrus was sent to the descendants of the ten tribes living in Media under his dominion; and as it comprehended the whole nation, it is probable that the first caravan which went to Jerusalem comprised persons from all the tribes (see 1 Chron. ix. 3). Others, also, it is likely, hearing of the safety and prosperity of their brethren in Judea, followed their example, and took up their abode in their respective tribes. For, notwithstanding the preoccupation of Samaria by foreign colonists, it is certain that many belonging to the kingdom of Israel returned and settled in Galilee, and other northern districts of Palestine. See ch. ii. 70; vi. 17.

6 The language implies that He who 'stirred up the spirit of Cyrus' to give them permission (ver. 1), also 'stirred up the spirit of the people;' for the Hebrew word is the same in both cases.

7 This seems to be explained by the last clause of ver. 4. A liberal contribution was made for the use of the travellers, over and above the free-will offerings for the temple. It is evident that many of the people who returned to their own land were poor, and needed the help of their brethren who remained in the East.

8 Some of the vessels of the temple had been cut in pieces by the Chaldeans (2 Kings xxiv. 13); but many had been preserved through all the succeeding revolutions, and were now restored. The liberality of Cyrus is more fully shown in the recital of his decree given in the subsequent one of Darius Hystaspis, in ch. vi. 3—6.

9 Sheshbazzar is probably the Chaldean name of Zerubbabel. See ch. ii. 2; v. 14—16; Zech. iv. 9, 10.

10 After specifying the most important articles, the total number is here given, without all the details.

11 The genealogies, after the captivity, had both a civil and a religious importance; as proving the rights of the different families to their respective inheritances, and as furnishing evidence of the descent of the Messiah from David and from Judah. In ch. vii. of the book of Nehemiah, we have another copy of this register. The sum total is the same in both; but the particulars of the two differ, and each falls far short of the whole amount.

12 Judea had become one of the provinces of the Persian empire. See ch. v. 8; Neh. i. 3.

13 These were the chiefs who were to conduct the people. Zerubbabel, who was the son of Shealtiel and grandson of Jehoiachin, was the prince; and Jeshua, the grandson of Seraiah, who was slain by Nebuchadnezzar, was the high priest.

² About 4,000 priests went to Jerusalem upon this occasion: a very large number in proportion to the rest of the community. But these priests appear to have belonged to four only out of the twenty-four courses into which they had been divided; the rest either being extinct or remaining behind. But these four were subdivided in such a manner that the twenty-four courses were made up again; and they kept up their original titles.

³ The Nethinims are supposed to have been of the race of the Gibeonites, who were spared by Joshua: see Josh. ix. 22—27. They performed the meaner services of the temple. See ch. viii. 20; 1 Chron. ix. 2.

⁴ These were probably the descendants of artificers who were employed in building the first temple; and who, becoming proselytes, were, with their posterity, retained for the purpose of keeping it in repair.

⁵ The persons here mentioned were probably Israelites—descendants of the ten tribes—who, having been carried into exile long before the captivity of Judah, had lost their genealogies, and so could not claim any certain possession in the land, as those could who were able to show to what city and family they belonged.

 till there stood up a priest with ^b Urim and with Thummim.
 64 ^c The whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred 65 and threescore, beside their servants and their maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and there were among them two 66 hundred singing men and singing women. Their horses were seven hundred thirty 67 and six; their mules, two hundred forty and five; their camels, four hundred thirty and five; their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty.³
 68 ^d And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the house⁴ of the LORD which is at Jerusalem, offered freely for the house of God to set it up in 69 his place: they gave after their ability unto the ^e treasure of the work threescore and one thousand drams of gold, and five thousand pounds of silver, and one hundred priests' garments.
 70 ^f So the priests, and the Levites, and some of the people, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims, dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

The altar is set up, and the sacrifices and festivals observed; the rebuilding of the temple is commenced.

3 AND when the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in the cities,⁵ the people gathered themselves together ^g as one man to Jerusalem.
 2 Then stood up ^h Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and Zerubbabel the son of ⁱ Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded⁶ the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt offerings thereon, as it is ^j written in the law of Moses the man of God.
 3 And they set the altar upon his bases; for fear was upon them because⁷ of the people of those countries: and they offered burnt offerings thereon unto the 4 LORD, even ^m burnt offerings morning and evening. ⁿ They kept also the feast of tabernacles, ^o as it is written, and ^p offered the daily burnt offerings by number, 5 according to the custom, as the duty of every day required; and afterward offered the ^q continual burnt offering, both of the new moons, and of all the set feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that willingly offered a free-6 will offering unto the LORD. From the first day of the seventh month began they to offer burnt offerings unto the LORD. But the foundation of the temple 7 of the LORD was not yet laid. They gave money also unto the masons, and to the carpenters; and ^r meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar trees from Lebanon to the sea of ^s Joppa, ^t according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.
 8 Now in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; ^u and appointed the Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house 9 of the LORD. Then stood ^v Jeshua with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of ^w Judah, together, to set forward the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.
 10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, ^z they set the priests in their apparel with ^a trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with cymbals, to praise the LORD, after the ^b ordinance of David king of Israel.

1 These descendants of Barzillai (2 Sam. xvii. 27) seem to have valued their relationship to him more than their connection with the priesthood; and thus their children were deprived of its privileges, which they now desired.

2 This is the title given to Zerubbabel and Nehemiah as the Persian governors of Judea: see Neh. vii. 65—70; viii. 9; x. 2. By the sentence of the Tirshatha, Barzillai's descendants were not to be restored to the priesthood without a Divine oracle to declare whether they were of the race of Aaron or not.

3 The small proportion of servants, and of animals for the journey, shows that most of the Israelites who returned to Palestine belonged to the poorer class.

4 That is, to the site of the former temple.

5 It appears that the special providence of God, in fulfilment of his promises, had prevented the land of Judah from experiencing the fate of Samaria, which, after the expulsion of the ten tribes, had been planted with heathen colonists (2 Kings xvii.), whose presence excluded the Israelites from much of their land.

6 The first care of the Jews on their return was the institution of religious worship.

7 Some translate this, 'although fear was upon them;' but our version gives a very consistent sense. They looked to Jehovah for protection, and therefore proceeded immediately to rebuild his altar.

11 ^c And they sang together by course in praising and giving thanks unto the LORD; ^d because he is good, ^e for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people ^f shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, because the 12 foundation of the house of the LORD was laid. ^g But many of the priests and Levites and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house, when the foundation of this ¹ house was laid before their eyes, wept with 13 a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy: so that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people:
 for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise ² was heard afar off.

The opposition of the Samaritans, and the suspension of the building of the temple.

4 NOW when ^h the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the children
 2 of the captivity builded the temple unto the LORD God of Israel; then they came to Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and said unto them, ⁱ Let us build with you: for we ³ seek your God, as ye do; and we do sacrifice unto him ^k since 3 the days of ^l Esar-haddon king of ^m Assur, which brought us up hither. But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, ⁿ Ye have nothing to do with us ⁴ to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the LORD God of Israel, as ^o king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

4 Then ^p the people of the land weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and 5 ^q troubled them in building, and hired counsellors against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of Persia.

6 And in the reign of ^r Ahasuerus, ⁵ in the beginning of his reign, wrote they 7 unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem. And in the days of Artaxerxes wrote Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their companions, unto Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the writing of the letter was 8 written in the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue. ⁶ Rehum

1 Though the second temple was as large as the first, if not larger, yet it could not approach the magnificence of that upon which all the wealth of David and Solomon had been expended (see Hag. ii. 3); and—what was much more important—it wanted some of those extraordinary marks of the Divine presence and favour which constituted the chief glory of the former temple; especially the ark of the covenant, with the mercy-seat upon it, and the holy fire on the altar. But the prophet Haggai was commissioned to comfort the people by the assurance, that these deficiencies should be abundantly compensated by the coming of the Messiah, and his presence in this house (Hag. ii. 2—9).

2 The Orientals express their joy and grief by loud outcries. Some of the psalms are supposed to have been written about this period, particularly Ps. cvii., cxv., cxvi., cxvii., and some others of those entitled 'Song of Degrees.' See note on title of Ps. cxx.

3 These were descendants of the heathen colonists who had been sent into the country by the Assyrian kings, and of the few Israelites who had been left in the land. See 2 Kings xvii. 24—41, and notes.

4 As the Samaritans did not worship Jehovah alone, but joined false gods with him, they could not be admitted to the pure worship of his people.

5 This is not a proper name, but a royal title, supposed to mean the lion-king. It is probable that the king here styled 'Ahasuerus' was Cambyzes, and that Artaxerxes (ver. 7) was Smerdis the Magian. Some, however, think the former to have been Xerxes (the invader of Greece), and the latter, his successor, Artaxerxes Longimanus; in which case vers. 6—24 should be taken as a parenthesis, relating fresh interruptions at a later period, when the Jews were beginning to fortify the city.

6 This probably means that the letter was written both in Syrian letters or characters and in the Syrian language. The reason for stating distinctly both the character and the language may have been, that the Jews, during the captivity, had begun to use the Chaldee character in writing Hebrew; so that a letter written at this time in Chaldee letters would not necessarily be in the Chaldee language.

7 The letters, decrees, etc., recited in this and the two following chapters, are given not in Hebrew, but in Chaldee. They were probably transcribed by Ezra from public records; and are interesting specimens of the form and style of the official correspondence and state orders of that period.

8 These were the titles and name of the Assyrian viceroy who had the charge of settling the Cuthæan colonies in Palestine. See 2 Kings xvii. 24.

9 Rather, 'and so on,' meaning et cetera: and so ver. 11.

10 As the greater part of those who returned from Babylon were of the tribe of Judah, the name 'Jews' (or Judahites) was now given to the whole nation, although there were many belonging to the ten tribes among them; and the land was for a time called 'Judea,' though this appellation afterwards came to be restricted to the southern part of Palestine.

ⁱ toll, tribute, and custom, and so thou shalt endamage the revenue of the kings.
 14 Now because we have maintenance from the king's palace,¹ and it was not meet for us to see the king's dishonour, therefore have we sent and certified the king;
 15 that search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers: so shalt thou find in the book of the records, and know that this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful unto kings and provinces, and that they have moved sedition within the 16 same of old time: ²for which cause was this city destroyed. We certify the king that, if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means thou shalt have no portion on this side the river.

17 Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their companions that dwelt in Samaria, and unto the 18 rest beyond the river, Peace, and at such a time. The letter which ye sent unto 19 us hath been plainly read before me. And I commanded, and search hath been made, and ³it is found that this city of old time hath made insurrection against 20 kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein. There have been mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which have ⁴ruled over all countries ⁵beyond 21 the river; ⁶and toll, ⁷tribute, and custom, was paid unto them. Give ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded,
 22 until another commandment shall be given from me. Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 Now when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, they went up in haste to Jerusalem
 24 unto the Jews, and made them to cease by force and power. Then ceased the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. So it ⁸ceased unto the ⁹second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.³

The recommencement of the temple; visit and inquiry of the governor; letter to the Persian court; decree of Darius; completion and dedication of the temple.

5 THEN the prophets, ¹⁰Haggai the prophet, and ¹¹Zechariah the son⁴ of Iddo, prophesied unto the Jews that were in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of the 2 God of Israel, even unto them. Then rose up ¹²Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem: and with them were the prophets of God helping them.

3 At the same time came to them ¹³Tatnai,⁵ governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and said thus unto them, ¹⁴'Who hath
 4 commanded you to build this house, and to make up this wall? ¹⁵Then said we⁶ unto them after this manner, What are the names of the men that make this
 5 building? But ¹⁶the eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews,⁷ that they could not cause them to cease, till the matter came to Darius: and then they returned ¹⁷answer by letter concerning this matter.

6 The copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, ¹⁸and his companions the Apharsachites, which were on this side
 7 the river, sent unto Darius the king. They sent a letter unto him, wherein was written thus;

8 Unto Darius the king, all peace. Be it known unto the king, that we went into the province of Judea, to the house of the great God, which is builded with great stones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth fast on, and 9 prospereth in their hands. Then asked we those elders, and said unto them thus,
 10 ¹⁹'Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls? We asked their names also, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the 11 men that were the chief of them. And thus they returned us answer, saying, We

3 Through the power and influence of enemies, as well as the indifference and worldly-mindedness of the Jews themselves (see Hag. i. 2—9), the rebuilding of the temple was suspended during the reigns of Cambyzes and the Magian Smerdis; but in the second year of Darius Hystaspis it was resumed, and was then finished in four years, nineteen years after its commencement. See Zech. viii. 9; Hag. ii. 18.

4 That is, descendant; for he was the grandson of Iddo. See Zech. i. 1. See also the preface to Haggai, and ch. i., ii. These two prophets were raised up at this critical period to arouse the people to a sense of their duty, and to encourage them by assurances of Divine help and of the future glory of the temple; and their writings are intimately connected with this portion of history.

5 This was about fifteen years after the former letter (ch. iv. 7—16). In the interval there had been a change of governors. Tatnai and his associates seem to have discharged their duty with great fairness and candour; giving an impartial statement of the case, very different from that which had been made by their predecessors in office (ch. iv.) Their visit to Jerusalem was probably caused by some representation which had been addressed to them by the Samaritans. The 'companions' appear to have been some of the chief men who formed the council of the governor.

6 This evidently means Tatnai and his companions (see ver. 10). The Septuagint, with which the Syriac and Arabic versions agree, uses the third person, 'And they said unto them,' etc.

7 God, in his providence, had given them a better governor, so that their enemies were restrained from violence, and the Jews were encouraged.

are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and build the house that was builded these many years ago, which a great king of Israel builded ^r and set up.

12 But ^s after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, ^t he gave them into the hand of ^u Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who

13 destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon. But in the first year of ^x Cyrus the king of Babylon, the same king Cyrus made a decree to build

14 this house of God. And ^y the vessels also of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon, those did Cyrus the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto one, ^z whose name was Sheshbazzar, whom he had made governor [or, deputy]; and said unto him, Take these vessels, go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house

16 of God be builded in his place. Then came the same Sheshbazzar, and ^a laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem: and since that time even 17 until now hath it been in building, and ^b yet it is not finished. Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, ^c let there be search made in the king's treasure house, ¹ which is there at Babylon, whether it be so ^d that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

6 Then Darius the king made a decree, ^e and search was made in the house of the 2 rolls, where the treasures were laid up in Babylon. And there was found at Achmetha² in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written:

3 ^f In the first year of Cyrus the king, the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid; ^g the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits;

4 ^h with three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber: and let ⁱ the expences

5 be given out of the king's house: and also let ^k the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, ^l which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and brought again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house

6 of God. ^m Now therefore,³ Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and your companions the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from

7 thence: let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews

8 and the elders of the Jews build this house of God in his place. Moreover I make a decree what ye shall do to the elders of these Jews for the building of this house of God: that of the king's goods, even of the tribute beyond the river,

9 forthwith expences be given unto these men, that they be not hindered. And that which they have need of, both young bullocks, and rams, and lambs, for the burnt offerings of the God of heaven,⁴ wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the priests which are at Jerusalem, let it be given them day by

10 day without fail: ⁿ that they may offer sacrifices of sweet savours unto the God

11 of heaven, and ^o pray for the life of the king, and of his sons. Also I have made a decree, that ^p whosoever shall alter this word, let timber be pulled down from his house, and being set up, let him be hanged thereon; ^q and let his house be 12 made a dunghill⁵ for this. And the God that hath caused his ^r name to dwell there destroy all kings and people, that shall put to their hand to alter and to destroy this house of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius have made a decree; let it be done with speed.

13 Then Tatnai, governor on this side the river, Shethar-boznai, and their companions, according to that which Darius the king had sent, so they did speedily.

14 And ^s the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered⁶ through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah the son of Iddo. And they builded, and ^t finished it, according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and ^u according to the commandment of ^x Cyrus, and ^y Darius, and ^z Artaxerxes⁷ king of Persia.

1 The 'rolls' or records of the kingdom were carefully preserved in a part of the 'treasure-house': see next verse.

2 Achmetha was the chief city of Media. It was the summer residence of the Persian monarchs; being selected for that purpose, to avoid the heat of the plain of the Tigris, where Susa, the seat of the winter palace, was situated (Neh. i. 1). It was called Ecbatana by the Greeks; and its site is now occupied by the city of Hamadan.

3 The recital of the decree of Cyrus concludes with the preceding verse: in this begins that of Darius Hystaspis, founded upon it. The circumstances connected with the elevation of Darius to the throne doubtless had some effect in leading him to reverse the policy of Smerdis, and to pursue as far as possible that of Cyrus.

4 This decree of Darius seems to imply his conviction that the God of the Jews was the true God. See especially ver. 12. The ancient Persian religion was very far from sanctioning the gross idolatries of other nations.

5 As a mark of ignominy. For the same reason the Romans pulled down the houses of criminals.

6 They were encouraged and stimulated to exertion.

7 See note on ch. vii. 1.

15 And this house was finished on the third day of the month Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

16 And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of the 17 children of the captivity, kept ^a the dedication of this house of God with joy,¹ and ^b offered at the dedication of this house of God an hundred bullocks, two hundred

Jerusalem; ^e as it is written in the book of Moses.²

Ezra's journey to Jerusalem, with a commission from the king and a large company of Jews.

7 NOW after these things, in the reign of ^a Artaxerxes⁵ king of Persia, Ezra ^o the 2 son of Seraiah,⁶ the son of Azariah, the son of Hilkiah, the son of Shallum, the 3 son of Zadok, the son of Ahitub, the son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son
4 of Meraioth,⁷ the son of Zerahiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki, the son of 5 Abishua, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the chief 6 priest: this Ezra went up from Babylon; and he was ^p a ready scribe⁸ in the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given: and the king granted him 7 all his request, ^q according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him. ^r And there went up⁹ some of the children of Israel, and of the priests, and ^s the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and ^t the Nethinims, unto Jerusalem, in the 8 seventh year of Artaxerxes the king. And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth 9 month, which was in the seventh year of the king. For upon the first day of the first month began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, ^u according to the good hand of his God upon him.
10 For Ezra had ^v prepared his heart to ^w seek the law of the LORD, and to do it, and to ^x teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

11 Now this is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even a scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

12 Artaxerxes, ^a king of kings,¹⁰ unto Ezra the priest, a scribe of the law of the 13 God of heaven, perfect peace, ^b and at such a time. I make a decree, that all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests and Levites, in my realm which 14 are minded of their own freewill to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee. Foras-much as thou art sent of the king, and of his ^c seven counsellors, to inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of thy God which is in thine 15 hand; and to carry the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have

¹ It is highly probable that Psalms cxlvi.—cl. were composed on this occasion, or about this period. In the Septuagint they are called the psalms of Haggai.

² Moses had given laws respecting the ministry of the priests and Levites, and the celebration of God's worship at the place which he should choose; but the courses of the priests and Levites were appointed by David.

³ Either proselytes from heathenism, or descendants of the Jews who were left in the land at the time of the captivity.

⁴ That is, the king of Persia, as Assyria now formed part of his dominions: see note on ch. i. 1.

⁵ This was Artaxerxes Longimanus, the son and successor of Xerxes I. The history now passes on to a period about sixty years after the temple had been finished, as related in ch. vi. During the interval, Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Haggai, and Zechariah, had in all probability died; and although the temple was built and the worship restored, the civil and ecclesiastical state of the Jews was still very unsettled, until Ezra came with a new body of settlers, and a commission to restore the ancient national institutions. It is probable that the events related in the book of Esther occurred during the interval. If this were so, Ezra's commission, and Nehemiah's position and influence at court (see Neh. ch. i.), may perhaps be attributed in part to Esther, who is supposed to have been the mother of Artaxerxes. See the preface to the book of Esther.

⁶ Seraiah was high priest when Jerusalem was taken by the Chaldeans. See 2 Kings xxv. 18. Ezra probably was his great grandson, belonging to a younger branch of the family.

⁷ In this genealogy, between Azariah and Meraioth, six generations are omitted, which are found in 1 Chron. vi. 7. Enough is given here to prove the descent of Ezra from the line of Eleazar, Aaron's eldest son.

⁸ That is, learned in the law of Moses, and well qualified to instruct others.

⁹ This was the second great company that returned from Babylon. They went in circumstances much more encouraging than the former; for now the temple had been rebuilt, and the worship of God restored.

¹⁰ Perhaps this means, 'having many tributary kings' under him. But the form of the title preserved by the Greek historians ('the Great King') intimates that it is only a superlative, like 'the heaven of heavens.'

16 freely offered unto the God of Israel, ^d whose habitation is in Jerusalem, ^e and all the silver and gold that thou canst find in all the province of Babylon, with the freewill offering of the people, and of the priests, ^f offering willingly for the house
 17 of their God which is in Jerusalem: that thou mayest buy speedily with this money bullocks, rams, lambs, with their ^g meat offerings and their drink offerings, and ^h offer them upon the altar of the house of your God which is in Jerusalem.
 18 And whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest
 19 of the silver and the gold, that do after the will of your God. The vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, those deliver thou 20 before ⁱ the God of Jerusalem. And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, ^k bestow it out of 21 the king's treasure house. And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are ^l beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done
 22 speedily, unto an hundred talents of silver, and to an hundred measures of wheat, and to an hundred baths of wine, and to an hundred baths of oil, and ^m salt with-
 23 out prescribing how much. Whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the house of the God of heaven: for ⁿ why should there
 24 be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons? Also we certify you, that touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom,
 25 upon them.¹ And thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God, that is in thine hand, ^o set magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are beyond the 26 them not.² And ^p whosoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king, let judgment be executed speedily upon him, whether it be unto death, or to banishment, or to confiscation of goods, or to imprisonment.
 27 ^r Blessed be the LORD God of our fathers, ^s which hath put such a thing as this in the king's heart, to beautify the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem:
 28 and ^t hath extended mercy unto me before the king, and his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes. And I was strengthened as ^u the hand of the LORD my God was upon me, and I gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me.
 8 These are now the chief of their fathers, and this is the genealogy ^x of them
 2 that went³ up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king. Of the sons of Phinehas; Gershom: of the sons of Ithamar; Daniel: of the sons of 3 David; ^y Hattush. Of the sons of Shechaniah, of the sons of ^z Pharosh; Zechariah: and with him were reckoned by genealogy of the males an hundred and fifty.
 4 Of the sons of Pahath-moab; Elihoenai the son of Zerariah, and with him two 5 hundred males. Of the sons of Shechaniah; the son of Jahaziel, and with him 6 three hundred males. Of the sons also of Adin; Ebed the son of Jonathan, and 7 with him fifty males. And of the sons of Elam;⁴ Jeshaiiah the son of Athaliah, 8 and with him seventy males. And of the sons of Shephatiah; Zebadiah the son
 9 of Michael, and with him fourscore males. Of the sons of Joab; Obadiah the son 10 of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males. And of the sons of Shelomith; the son of Josiphiah, and with him an hundred and threescore males.
 11 And of the sons of Bebai; Zechariah the son of Bebai, and with him twenty and 12 eight males. And of the sons of Azgad; Johanan the son of Hakkatan, and with 13 him an hundred and ten males. And of the last⁵ sons of Adonikam, whose names are these, Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with them threescore males.
 14 Of the sons also of Bigvai; Uthai, and ^a Zabbud, and with them seventy males.
 15 And I gathered them together to the river that runneth to Ahava; and there 16 abode we in tents three days: and I viewed the people, and the priests, and found there none of the ^b sons of Levi.⁶ Then sent I for Eliezer, for Ariel, for Shemaiah, and for Elnathan, and for Jarib, and for Elnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Meshullam, chief men; also for Joiarib, and for Elnathan, ¹ By thus exonerating from taxation all who officiated or assisted in the temple-worship, the Persian monarch showed the favour with which he regarded the Jews. In their present circumstances, this exemption was a seasonable and important encouragement.

² The king authorized Ezra, as governor of the Jews who lived west of the Euphrates, to appoint subordinate officers, and to provide for the instruction of the people in the law of God; and he even permitted him to seek the conversion of the Gentiles.

³ The number of male adults (for such those here numbered appear to have been) amounts only to 1754 persons; but the whole body who accompanied Ezra, including women and children, would, according to the usual proportions, consist of nearly seven thousand.

⁴ Many from the families mentioned here had previously gone up with Zerubbabel. See ch. ii.

⁵ These are probably called 'the last,' because part of the family had returned to Judea before, and all who remained now followed.

⁶ That is, none who were simply Levites; for there were several priests.

- 17 ^c men of understanding. And I sent them with commandment unto Iddo the chief at the place Casiphia,¹ and I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren ^d the Nethinims, at the place Casiphia, that they should bring
- 18 unto us ministers for the house of our God. And by ^e the good hand of our God upon us they ^f brought us a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel; and Sherebiah, with his sons and his brethren,
- 19 eighteen; and Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiiah of the sons of Merari, his brethren and their sons, twenty; ^g also of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.
- 21 Then I ^h proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might ⁱ afflict ourselves before our God, to seek of him a ^k right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance. For ^l I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy² in the way: because we had spoken unto the king, saying, ^m "The hand of our God is upon all them for
- 22 ⁿ good that seek him; but his power and his wrath is ^o against all them that
- 23 ^p forsake him. So we fasted³ and ^q besought our God for this: and he was ^r intreated of us.
- 24 Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and
- 25 ten of their brethren with them, and weighed unto them ^s the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king,
- 26 and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered: I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver
- 27 vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents; also twenty basins of
- 28 gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of fine copper, precious as gold. And I said unto them, Ye are ^t holy unto the LORD; the vessels are ^u holy also; and the silver and the gold are a freewill offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.
- 29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of
- 30 the house of the LORD. So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto the house of our God.
- 31 Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and ^v the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way.
- 32 And we ^w came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days. Now on the fourth
- 33 day was the silver and the gold and the vessels ^x weighed in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the son of Uriah the priest; and with him was
- 34 Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of Binnui, Levites; by number and by weight of every one: and all the weight was written at that time.
- 35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, ^y offered burnt offerings unto the God of Israel, twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he-goats for a
- 36 sin offering: all this was a burnt offering unto the LORD. And they delivered the king's ^z commissions unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river: and they furthered the people, and the house of God.

Intermarriages of the Jews with heathens; Ezra's distress and prayer; repentance and reformation of the people.

- 9 NOW when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, have not ^a separated themselves from the people of the lands, ^b doing according to their abominations,⁴ even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the
- 2 Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites. For they have ^c taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons: so that the ^d holy seed⁵ have

1 It is uncertain where Casiphia was situated, or who 'Iddo the chief' was; but the place was probably at no great distance from Ahava. Some render the passage thus: 'I told them what they should say to Iddo and Achio, who were appointed in the place Casiphia;' and they suppose this to have been a seminary for the education of priests and Levites.

2 The journey from Babylon to Judea has always been extremely dangerous to travellers; the country being infested by roving Arab tribes, who live by plunder; and they were probably not ignorant of the immense amount of treasure which the Jews were now carrying.

3 With humble confessions of their own unworthiness, solemnly putting the whole company under the gracious protection of God. See note on title of Psal. cxxi.

4 This expression commonly signifies in Scripture the worship of idols; but here it signifies intermarriage with foreigners, which had always led to idolatry. This is given as the reason for the prohibition in almost every place where it is repeated. See Deut. vii. 3, 4, etc.

5 So the Israelites were called, because of God's covenant with them, by which they were separated from all other nations, specially set apart to himself, and entrusted with peculiar religious privileges.

^s mingled themselves with the people of those lands: yea, the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass. And when I heard this thing, ^h I rent my garment and my mantle, and ⁱ plucked off the hair of my head and of my beard,¹ and sat down ^h astonished. Then were assembled unto me every one that ^t trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonished until the ^m evening sacrifice.

And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my heaviness [or, affliction]; and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and ⁿ spread out my hands unto the LORD my God, and said,

O my God, I am ^o ashamed² and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for ^p our iniquities are increased over our head, and our trespass [or, guiltiness] is ^q grown up unto the heavens. Since the days of our fathers have ^r we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities ^s have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to ^t confusion of face, as it is this day. And now for a little space ^u grace hath been showed from the LORD our God, to leave us ^x a remnant³ to escape, and to give us ^y a nail⁴ in his ^z holy place, that our God may ^a lighten our eyes, and give us a little ^b reviving in our bondage. ^c For we were bondmen; ^d yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but ^e hath extended mercy unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, ^f to set up the house of our God, and to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us ^g a wall⁵ in Judah and in Jerusalem. And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments, which thou hast commanded by thy servants the prophets, saying, ^h The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the ⁱ filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from one end to another with their uncleanness: now therefore ^k give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, ^l nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever: that ye may be strong, ^m and eat the good of the land, and ⁿ leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever. And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God ^o hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve, and hast given us such deliverance as this; should we ^p again break thy commandments, and ^q join in affinity with the people of these abominations, wouldst not thou be ^r angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping? O LORD God of Israel, ^s thou art righteous: for⁶ we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are ^t before thee ^u in our trespasses: for we cannot ^x stand before thee because of this.

Now ^y when Ezra had prayed, and when he had confessed, weeping and casting himself down ^z before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel a very great congregation of men and women and children: for the people wept very sore. And Shechaniah⁷ the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, We have ^a trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: ^b yet now there is hope⁸ in Israel concerning this thing. Now therefore let us make ^c a covenant with our God to put away⁹ all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my lord, and of those that ^d tremble at ^e the commandment of our God; and let it be done according to the law. Arise; for this matter belongeth unto thee: ^f we also will be with thee: ^g be of good courage, and do it.

Then arose Ezra, and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel, ^h to swear that they should do according to this word. And they swore. Then 1 These were the customary tokens of deep grief and displeasure.

2 Ezra was not personally guilty in this matter; but he spoke and acted as the representative of the whole people.

3 The returned exiles were but a remnant of the whole nation, the bulk of the people still remaining in their dispersions; and those who returned were in an impoverished and abject state, compared with their ancestors.

4 This may refer either to the nails or pins by which the Oriental tents were fastened to the ground, or to the nails fixed in the walls of houses at the time of their erection, which were used for the purpose of suspending vessels or clothes, and were as permanent as the house itself. See Isa. xxii. 23, 24.

5 The term here translated 'wall' signifies the fence of a sheep-fold; and here figuratively represents their establishment again in their own land.

6 These words may be rendered, 'though we remain;'

but probably Ezra means to acknowledge that God had fulfilled his part of the covenant, and that the people's guilt was on this account the more heinous.

7 Shechaniah appears not to have been implicated himself; but his father and others of his near relations were. See ver. 26.

8 Encouragement may be fitly given to the greatest sinners when their sin is seen and lamented, and decisive steps are taken towards a reformation.

9 This measure, though apparently a severe one, especially as affecting the children, was evidently necessary to prevent the influx of idolatry. These cases differ greatly from those for which a milder rule was laid down by the Apostle Paul (1 Cor. vii. 12, 13); for the Jew who married a heathen wife did so in direct violation of his own law; whereas the parties referred to in the New Testament had married as heathens, but one of them had subsequently been converted to Christianity.

Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into the chamber of Johanan the son of Eliashib: and *when*¹ he came thither, he did eat no bread, nor drink water: for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away. And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem unto all the children of the captivity, that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem; and *that*² that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be forfeited, and himself separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away. Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem within three days. It was the ninth month,² and the twentieth day of the month; and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling because of this matter, and for the great rain. And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and have taken strange wives,³ to increase the trespass of Israel. Now therefore make confession unto the LORD God of your fathers, and do his pleasure: and separate yourselves from the people of the land,⁴ and from the strange wives.

Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do. But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without, neither is this a work of one day or two: for we are many that have transgressed in this thing [or, we have greatly offended in this thing]. Let now our rulers of all the congregation stand,³ and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God for this matter be turned from us. Only Jonathan the son of Asahel and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah were employed about this matter: and Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite helped them. And the children of the captivity did so.

And Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month to examine the matter. And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month. And among the sons of the priests⁴ there were found that had taken strange wives: namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren; Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah. And they gave their hands⁵ that they would put away their wives; and being guilty, they offered a ram of the flock for their trespass. And of the sons of Immer; Hanani, and Zebadiah. And of the sons of Harim; Maaseiah, and Elijah, and Shemaiah, and Jehiel, and Uzziash. And of the sons of Pashur; Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethaneel, Jozabad, and Elasa. Also of the Levites; Jozabad, and Shimei, and Kelaiah, (the same is Kelita,) Pethahiah, Judah, and Eliezer. Of the singers also; Eliashib: and of the porters; Shallum, and Telem, and Uri. Moreover of Israel:⁶ of the sons of Parosh; Ramiah, and Jeziah, and Malchiah, and Miamin, and Eleazar, and Malchijah, and Benaiah. And of the sons of Elam; Mattaniah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jeremoth, and Eliah. And of the sons of Zattu; Elioenai, Eliashib, Mattaniah, and Jeremoth, and Zabad, and Aziza. Of the sons also of Bebai; Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai. And of the sons of Bani; Meshullam, Malluch, and Adaiah, Jashub, and Sheal, and Ramoth. And of the sons of Pahath-moab; Adna, and Chelal, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, Bezaleel, and Binnui, and Manasseh. And of the sons of Harim; Eliezer, Ishijah, Malchiah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, Benjamin, Malluch, and Shemariah. Of the sons of Hashum; Mattenai, Mattathah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh, and Shimei. Of the sons of Bani; Maadai, Amram, and Uel, Benaiah, Bedeiah, Chelluh, Vaniah, Meremoth, Eliashib, Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaasau, and Bani, and Binnui, Shimei, and Shelemiah, and Nathan, and Adaiah, and Machnadebai, Shashai, Sharai, Azareel, and Shelemiah, Shemariah, Shallum, Amariah, and Joseph. Of the sons of Nebo; Jeiel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jadau, and Joel, Benaiah. All these had taken strange wives:⁷ and some of them had wives by whom they had children.

NOTE ON EZRA.

EZRA continued his labours at Jerusalem for some years; and appears in the next book zealously co-operating with Nehemiah in promoting the reformation of the people. He is said to have lived one hundred and twenty years, attaining the same age as Moses; and he stands next to the great lawgiver, in the estimation of Jewish writers, for the services which he rendered to the religious interests of the nation. They state that, with the assistance of others also versed in the sacred writings, and under the guidance of the Spirit of God, Ezra collected all the existing books of Scripture; disposed them in proper order; corrected errors which had crept in through the inadvertence of copyists; changed some names of places which had become obsolete; made explanatory and other additions which the lapse of time had rendered necessary; and transcribed the whole into the Chaldee, or square character: and that, having thus settled the canon of Scripture, he sent it forth in a perfectly accurate form, from which the copies now extant were afterwards made with great care. The prophecy of Malachi, and a few passages in other books, must have been inserted subsequently to his time, probably by a succession of pious and learned men, till about the time of Simon the Just, who was made high priest about the year 300 B.C.; after which nothing was added to the sacred books of the Old Testament.

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH.

THIS book, which in the ancient canon was joined with the preceding, and is sometimes called the Second Book of Ezra, takes up the history of the Jews about twelve years after the close of the former; and records the improvements in Jerusalem, and reformatations among the people, which were carried on by Nehemiah. By him the greater part of this book was evidently written; and the rest, in which he is spoken of in the third person (ch. viii.—x.), is, with great probability, ascribed to Ezra.

As the numerous states subject to the great Oriental despots might often be at war among themselves—little notice being taken of their affairs at court, unless the revenue or authority or personal partialities of the monarch were interfered with—the Jews felt themselves insecure, so long as the walls of the city remained in ruins. It was, in part, to effect their restoration that Nehemiah was raised up by God. Though a Jew and a captive, he held one of the most honourable and confidential offices at the court of Persia, being the king's cup-bearer. But his own prosperity and wealth did not cause him to be unmindful of the afflicted condition of his countrymen. Hearing of their state, he made it the subject of earnest prayer; and, after four months, his sorrow of heart being seen in the sadness of his countenance, an opportunity was afforded him of presenting his suit to the king, who appointed him governor of Jerusalem, with a commission to rebuild the walls, and provide for the welfare of his people (ch. i., ii. 1—8).

The rebuilding of the city wall was accomplished in about two months; notwithstanding many discouragements and difficulties, caused chiefly by the leading men in the rival and unfriendly colony of Samaria, who, by scoffs and threats and various stratagems, did their utmost to stop the work. In addition to these dangers from without, Nehemiah also encountered troubles and hindrances from his own people, arising out of the general distress existing among them, which was aggravated by the cruel exactions and oppressions of the great men. These grievances were redressed on the earnest remonstrance of Nehemiah, who had himself set a noble example of disinterestedness. It appears also that some of the chief men in Jerusalem were in conspiracy with foreigners against him (ch. ii. 9—20; iii.—vi.) Thus the wall was built in 'troubled times' (Dan. ix. 23); and its completion was afterwards joyously celebrated by a solemn dedication (ch. xii. 27—43).

Nehemiah then turned his attention to other measures for the public good. He appointed some necessary officers (ch. xii. 44—47; xiii. 13); and excited among the people more interest and zeal in religion, by the public reading and exposition of the law, by an unexampled celebration of the feast of tabernacles and the observance of a national fast, and by inducing the people to enter into a solemn covenant 'to walk in God's law,' especially by avoiding intermarriages with the heathen, duly observing the sabbath, and contributing to the support of the temple (ch. viii.—x.)

The inhabitants of the city being as yet too few for its defence and prosperity, Nehemiah brought one family out of every ten in the country to take up their abode in the ancient capital, which then presented so few inducements to the settler, that 'the people blessed all the men that willingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem' (ch. vii. 4; xi. 1—19). In all these important proceedings he appears to have enjoyed the assistance of Ezra.

After about twelve years, Nehemiah returned to Babylon. He subsequently went back to Jerusalem, and exerted himself to promote the further reformation of his countrymen, particularly by the correction of abuses which had crept in during his absence (ch. xiii.) His whole administration probably lasted about thirty-six years.

Nehemiah receives information concerning his countrymen; his distress, and prayer.

And it came to pass in the month Chisleu,² in the twentieth³ year, as I was in 2 Shushan⁴ the palace, that ^b Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were 3 left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem. And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are ^c in great affliction and ^d reproach: ^e the wall of Jerusalem also ^f is broken down,⁵ and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

2 The third month of the civil year, answering to parts of our November and December.

3 That is, in the twentieth year of the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus (see note on Ezra vii. 1); the tenth year after Ezra's journey to Jerusalem.

4 Or Susa, on the Choaspes, in the hot plains of the Tigris, the winter residence of the Persian kings. Ruins found at a place called Shus are supposed to mark its site.

5 As we have no account in the book of Ezra of the wall being rebuilt, it is most probable that it was still in the state in which it had been left at the destruction of the city by the Chaldeans (see 2 Kings xxv. 10). The former commissions of Zerubbabel and Ezra (Ezra i.; vii. 11—28) did not extend to the fortification of the city.

4 And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I ^ssat down and wept, and 5 mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven, and said,¹
 I beseech thee, ^hO Lord God of heaven, the great and terrible God, ⁱthat keepeth 6 covenant and mercy for them that love him and observe his commandments: let thine ear now be attentive, and ^jthine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, ^kday and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and ^lconfess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned.
 7 ^mWe have dealt very ⁿcorruptly against thee, and have ^onot kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant 8 Moses. ^pRemember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, ^q*If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the* 9 nations: but if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them;
^r*though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet*
^s*will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I* 10 have chosen to set my name there. Now these are thy servants and thy people, whom ^tthou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong ^uhand.
 11 O Lord, I beseech thee, ^vlet now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who ^wdesire to fear thy name: and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and ^xgrant him mercy in the sight of this man. For I was the king's ^ycupbearer.²

Nehemiah, having obtained a commission from the king, goes to Jerusalem; and encourages the people to rebuild the walls.

2 AND it came to pass in the month Nisan,³ in the twentieth year of ^fArtaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and ^gI took up the wine, and gave it unto 2 the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence. Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is 3 nothing else but ^hsorrow of heart.⁴ Then I was very sore afraid, and said unto the king, ⁱLet the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when ^jthe city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?
 4 Then the king said unto me, ^kFor what dost thou make request? So I prayed 5 to the God of heaven. And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.
 6 And the king said unto me, (the queen⁵ also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send 7 me; and I set him ^ma time. Moreover I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may 8 convey me over till I come into Judah; and a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained ⁿto the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, ^oaccording to the good hand of my God upon me.
 9 Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. Now the king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with me.
 10 When Sanballat⁶ the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of ¹ We have here (vers. 5—11) the substance of Nehemiah's constant supplications.

² The office of cup-bearer was one of great honour and confidence, as well as of considerable profit and influence. The person who held it being in constant attendance on the king, had opportunities of preferring petitions and obtaining favours. Nehemiah appears to have been enabled from his own resources to sustain his government at Jerusalem with great dignity and hospitality, without laying any burden on the people: see ch. v. 14—18. Many of the Jews were advanced to places of trust and authority under the Babylonian and Persian monarchs; and so were able to assist and protect their brethren.

³ The seventh month, answering to our March or April; so that four months had elapsed since Nehemiah had learned the afflicted condition of his countrymen at Jerusalem. This may have been his first attendance since that time on the king in private. See ver. 6, and note.

⁴ Or, 'wickedness of heart.' The king might have imputed his melancholy to discontent or disaffection; hence, probably, Nehemiah's great alarm.

⁶ Sanballat is supposed to have been a Moabite of Horonaim, a city of Moab; Tobiah the Ammonite had been a slave. The Moabites and Ammonites had been subdued and carried captive by the kings of Babylon; and it is probable that Sanballat and Tobiah, and Geshem the Arabian (ver. 19), held appointments under the king of Persia, as governors over the remnant of these nations and the Samaritans, who were all very hostile to the Jews.

my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither was there any beast with me, save the 13 beast that I rode upon. And I went out by night ⁷ by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon well, and to the dung port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were ⁸ broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with 14 fire. Then I went on to the ⁹ gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool:¹ but 15 there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass. Then went I up in the night by the ⁴ brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley, and so returned.

16 And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to 17 the rest that did the work. Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire:
 come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more ^u a 18 reproach. Then I told them of ^x the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they ^y strengthened their hands for this good work.

19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian, heard it, they ^z laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and 20 said, What is this thing that ye do? ^a will ye rebel against the king?² Then answered I them, and said unto them, ^b The God of heaven, ^c he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: ^d but ye have no portion, nor right, nor memorial, in Jerusalem.

The rebuilding of the walls and gates of the city.

3 THEN ^e Eliashib the high priest rose up with his brethren the priests, ^f and they builded the sheep gate; they ^g sanctified it,³ and set up the doors of it;
^h even unto the tower of Meah they sanctified it, unto the tower of ⁱ Hananeel.
 2 And next unto him builded ^k the men of Jericho. And next to them builded Zaccur the son of Imri.

3 ^l But the fish gate did the sons of Hassenaah build, who also laid the beams

5 And next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana. And next unto them the Tekoites repaired; but their nobles put not their necks to ⁿ the work of their Lord.

6 Moreover ^o the old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof,

7 and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. And next unto them repaired

11 Hattush the son of Hashabniah. Malchijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the son of Pahath-moab, repaired the other piece, ^r and the tower of the furnaces.

After him repaired Azariah the son of Maaseiah the son of Ananiah by his house. After him repaired Binnui the son of Henadad another piece, from the house of Azariah unto ^c the turning of the wall, even unto the corner. Palal the son of Uzai, over against the turning of the wall, and the tower which lieth out from the king's high house, that was by the ^d court of the prison. After him Pedaiah the son of Parosh.
- 26 Moreover ^e the Nethinims dwelt in ^f Ophel [or, which dwelt in Ophel, repaired], unto the place over against ^g the water gate toward the east, and the tower that lieth out. After them the Tekoites repaired another piece, over against the great tower that lieth out, even unto the wall of Ophel.
- 28 From above the ^h horse gate repaired the priests, every one over against his house.⁵ After them repaired Zadok the son of Immer over against his house. After him repaired also Shemaiah the son of Shechaniah, the keeper of the east gate. After him repaired Hananiah the son of Shelemiah, and Hanun the sixth son of Zalaph, another piece. After him repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah over against his chamber. After him repaired Malchiah the goldsmith's son unto the place of the Nethinims, and of the merchants, over against the gate Miphkad, and to the going up of the corner. And between the going up of the corner unto the sheep gate repaired the goldsmiths and the merchants.

Opposition of enemies, and consequent precautions.

- 4 BUT it came to pass, ⁱ that when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation,⁶ and mocked the Jews. And he spake before his brethren and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble Jews? will they fortify⁷ themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burned? Now ^k Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall.
- 4 ^l Hear, O our God; for we are despised: and ^m turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity: and ⁿ cover not their iniquity,⁸ and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders.
- 6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work.
- 7 But it came to pass, that ^o when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were very wroth, and ^p conspired all of them together to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and to hinder it. Nevertheless ^q we made our prayer unto our God, and ^r set a watch⁹

1 According to Josephus, Siloah or Siloam was on the south-east of Jerusalem, at the meeting of the valleys of Jehoshaphat and the Tyropæon.

2 This was, perhaps, the place formerly occupied by the guard; but the Septuagint gives this as a proper name, Beth-aggarim (Heb., Beth-haggiborim).

3 This and the other phrase, 'next unto him,' seem to be perfectly equivalent, and to denote that the person next mentioned began at that part of the wall where the other left off.

4 This is explained by ch. xii. 28.

5 By assigning to each one the execution of the portion over against his own house, where it adjoined the wall, Nehemiah wisely blended the personal with the patriotic.

6 This displeasure and enmity seem to have been entirely unprovoked, and to have been the result of hatred to the religion, and envy at the prosperity of the Jews. Psa. cxxiii. appears to refer either to these troubles; or to those described in Ezra ch. iv.: see the note on its title.

7 Heb., 'will they leave to them?' probably meaning, 'will they be allowed?'

8 Nehemiah might properly desire the punishment of these inveterate enemies of God's people, not only in order to remove obstacles to the further progress of the work, but also as a warning to others who were disposed to injure the Jews.

9 Sincere faith and prayer will always be accompanied by watchfulness and activity.

10 against them day and night, because of them. And Judah said, ^s The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not
11 able to build the wall. And our adversaries said, ^t They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us ^u ten times, From all places whence ye shall return unto us they will be upon you.¹ Therefore set I in the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families, with their swords, their 14 spears, and their bows. And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, ^v Be not ye afraid of them: ^w remember the LORD, which is ^z great and terrible, and ^a fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, ^b and God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work. And it came to pass from that time forth, that the half of my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were
17 behind all the house of Judah. They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon. For the builders, every one had his sword² girded by his side, and so builded. And ^c he that sounded the 19 trumpet was by me. And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the 20 wall, one far from another. In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: ^d our God shall fight for us.

21 So we laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears from the rising 22 of the morning till the stars appeared. Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the 23 night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day. So neither ^e I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, saving that every one put them off for washing.³

Nehemiah redresses the grievances of the poor.

5 AND there was a great ^f cry⁴ of the people and of their wives against their
2 ^g brethren the Jews. For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many: therefore we take up corn for them, that we may eat, and live.
3 Some also there were that said, ^h We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and 4 houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth.⁵ There were also that said, We have borrowed money for ⁱ the king's tribute, and that upon our lands
5 and vineyards. Yet now ^k our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and, lo, we ^l bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.
6, 7 And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words. Then I consulted with myself, and I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and said unto them, ^m Ye exact usury,⁶ every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly
8 against them. And I said unto them, We after our ability have ⁿ redeemed⁷ our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even ^o sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then held they their peace, and 9 found nothing to answer. Also I said, It is not good that ye do: ought ye not to

1 The construction of this sentence is difficult; but the meaning appears to be, that the Jews who dwelt near the Samaritans and other adversaries were constantly coming to Nehemiah with information of contemplated attacks.

2 At the present day it is not unusual, in districts adjacent to the Bedouins and other roving tribes, to see men following the plough with guns slung at their backs, and swords by their sides. Sometimes, also, armed men keep guard while their companions pursue their labours.

3 It is better to follow the marginal rendering of our translators in this difficult clause, reading, after 'clothes,' 'every one went with his weapon for water.' See Judg. v. 11.

4 The poor seem to have had just ground of complaint against their wealthier brethren. Although their exile in Babylon had cured the Jews, as a people, of their tendency to idolatry, they were still, like their ancestors, much given to covetousness and oppression. The transactions in this chapter appear to have occurred during the building of the wall; causing probably an interruption of the work.

5 The cultivation of the land had probably suffered from the difficulties to which the people had been exposed, and from other causes. Hence there was a scarcity of food; and the rich men, taking advantage of their brethren's distress, compelled them to part with all that they possessed, and even to sell their children into bondage, in order to obtain the means of procuring food and of paying the taxes.

6 The Mosaic law forbade the Israelites to take usury of their brethren (Exod. xxii. 25; Lev. xxv. 36; Deut. xxiii. 19).

7 That is, from slavery, into which some of the poor Jews had been sold.

walk ^q in the fear of our God ^r because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies?
 10 I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and 11 corn. I pray you, let us ^s leave off this usury. ^t Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, ^u their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth ¹ part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

12 Then said they, We will restore them, and will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, ² ^x and took an oath of them, 13 that they should do according to this promise. Also ^y I shook my lap, ³ and said,
 So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise; even thus be he shaken out, and emptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the LORD. ^z And the people did according to this promise.

14 Moreover from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year ^a even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, I and my brethren have not ^b eaten 15 the bread of the governor. But the former governors that had been before me were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels ⁴ of silver; yea, even their servants bare rule over the people: but 16 ^c so did not I, because of the ^d fear of God. Yea, also I continued in the work of this wall: neither bought we any land: and all my servants were gathered thither 17 unto the work. Moreover there were ^e at my table ^f an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, beside those that came unto us from among the heathen that are 18 about us. Now that ^g which was prepared for me daily was one ox and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this ^h required not I the bread ⁵ of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people.

19 ⁱ Think upon me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this

6 NOW it came to pass, ^k when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and ^l Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein; (^m though at that time I had not set up the doors 2 upon the gates;) that Sanballat and Geshem ⁿ sent unto me, saying, Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages ⁶ in the plain of ^o Ono. But they 3 ^p thought to do me mischief. And ^q I sent messengers unto them, saying, ^r I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, 4 whilst I leave it, and come down to you? Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner.

5 Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner the fifth time with an 6 open ⁷ letter in his hand; wherein was written, It is reported among the heathen, and ^s Gashmu saith it, ^t that thou and the Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words;
 7 and thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying,
There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, 9 but thou feignest them out of thine own heart. For they all made us afraid, saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. ^u Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands. ⁸

10 Afterward I came unto the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up; ^x and he said, Let us meet together in the house

1 That is, an interest of one per cent. monthly, or twelve per cent. per annum. Nothing can be more forcible, touching, or generous than this address. The result of this disturbance must have been greatly to strengthen Nehemiah's hold on the affections of the people.

5 In the Persian empire, the dues of the government were paid partly in provisions. Nehemiah, on account of the distressed state of the people, would not take from them the usual allowances to which, as governor, he was entitled.

6 The Hebrew word is 'Cephirim,' which should probably be read here as a proper name—'Come and let us meet in Cephirim.' It is supposed to be the same as Chephirah, a town in the tribe of Benjamin. See ch. vii. 29; Josh. ix. 17; xviii. 26.

7 Letters sent by Orientals to superiors, and even to equals, are carefully sealed, and enclosed in silken bags. By sending the letter open, contrary to the universal practice, Sanballat doubtless intended both to insult Nehemiah and to excite the fears and discontent of the people by making the accusations generally known.

8 A prayer particularly suitable upon any duty or conflict. Psa. exxv. appears to allude to these events: see note on its title.

of God, within the temple,¹ and let us shut the doors of the temple: for they said, ^y Should such a man as I flee?² and who is there, that, being as I am, would ^z God had not sent him; but that ^a he pronounced this prophecy against me: for 15 So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty 16 and two days. And it came to pass, that ^f when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: for ^g they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

17 Moreover in those days the nobles of Judah sent many letters unto Tobiah, and 18 the letters of Tobiah came unto them. For there were many in Judah sworn Regulations for the safety of the city; a list of the exiles who first returned from Babylon.

7 NOW it came to pass, when the wall was built, and I had ⁱ set up the doors, 2 and the porters and the singers and the Levites were appointed, that I gave my brother Hanani,⁵ and Hananiah the ruler ^k of the palace, charge over Jerusalem:⁶ 3 for he was a ^l faithful man, and ^m feared God above many. And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

4 Now the city was large and great: but the people were few therein, and the houses were not builded.

5 And ⁿ my God ^o put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy. And I found therein,

1 The environs of the temple were secured by walls and gates, while the gates of the city were not yet set up. Shemaiah had probably shut himself up, feigning the fear with which he desired to infect Nehemiah: but Nehemiah saw through the artifice.

2 In such circumstances, even the preservation of life formed but a subordinate consideration, compared with the importance of setting an example of courageous confidence in God. It is worthy of notice that Nehemiah, whilst he took every reasonable precaution, never allowed fear to hinder his work.

3 These pretended prophets having sold their services to the enemies of religion, Nehemiah prays for their confusion and disappointment.

4 The serious mischiefs resulting from these connections with the enemies of their country, show the necessity of the strong measures which Ezra adopted to prevent them (Ezra x.).

5 The same mentioned in ch. i. 2.

6 It is supposed that Nehemiah, having finished the wall and made other necessary regulations, returned to the Persian court, according to his engagement (ch. ii. 6); that he soon afterwards came to Jerusalem again, with a new commission as governor; and that after twelve years he returned again to Persia, and remained there some years, during which time the abuses mentioned in ch. xiii. occurred.

^t Ezra 3. 1.

8 And all ^uthe people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was ^xbefore the water gate; and they spake unto Ezra¹ the ^yscribe to bring 2 the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel. And Ezra the priest brought ^zthe law before the congregation both of men and women, and all that could hear with understanding, ^aupon the first day of the seventh² 3 month. And he read therein before the street that was before the water gate from the morning³ until midday, before the men and the women, and those that could understand; and the ears of all the people were ^{attentive} unto the book of 4 the law. And Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit⁴ [or, tower] of wood, which they had made for the purpose; and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiyah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, 5 Zechariah, and Meshullam. And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and when he opened it, all the people 6 ^bstood up: and Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God. And all the people ^canswered, Amen, Amen, with ^dlifting up their hands: and they ^ebowed their 7 heads, and worshipped the LORD with their ^ffaces to the ground. Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, ^gcaused the people to under- 8 stand⁵ the law: and the people stood in their place. So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.

1 Ezra, having taken a journey to Babylon after his first coming to Judea, had now returned.

2 On the first day of the seventh month of the ecclesiastical year, or the new year's day of the civil year, was the feast of trumpets (Lev. xxiii. 24). In the seventh month, also, the feast of tabernacles was held; and it was commanded that at this feast, in every seventh year, the law should be publicly read (Deut. xxxi. 10, 11); which may have suggested the people's request.

3 Heb., 'from the light;' that is, from about six in the morning till noon.

4 The Hebrew word is often used for a watch-tower: here it signifies a large platform, as it was capable of holding fourteen persons.

5 Some take this as meaning that Ezra interpreted the Hebrew in the Chaldee dialect, which the Jews are supposed to have used after the captivity. But it may mean that the passages of Scripture which were publicly read were expounded and applied by Ezra, who appears to have been assisted, both in reading and explaining the law, by the persons here mentioned.

6 The festivals of trumpets and tabernacles were to be observed with joy.

7 The feast of tabernacles was appointed to be held on the fifteenth day of this month: see refs. The people, having heard the directions given respecting it in Lev. xxiii., were eager to commemorate it.

8 Although the sacred festivals had been greatly neglected during long portions of the Jewish history, instances are expressly recorded of the feast of tabernacles having been kept (2 Chron. viii. 13; Ezra iii. 4). This must refer, therefore, to the mode rather than the fact of celebration.

18 Also ^d day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read¹ in the book of the law of God. And they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was a solemn assembly, ^e according unto the manner.

A national fast; confession of sin, and prayer; repentance and solemn covenant of the people.

9 NOW in the twenty and fourth day² of ^f this month ^g the children of Israel ^h were assembled with fasting, and with sackclothes, ⁱ and earth upon them. And ^j the seed of Israel separated themselves from all strangers, and stood and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers. And they stood up in their place, and ^k read in the book of the law of the Lord their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the Lord their God.³ Then stood up upon the stairs⁴ [or, scaffold], of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and cried with a loud voice unto the Lord their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said,

6 ^l Stand up and ^m bless the Lord your God for ever and ever: and blessed be ⁿ thy glorious name, which is ^o exalted above all blessing and praise. ^p Thou, even thou, art Lord alone; ^q thou hast made heaven, ^r the heaven of heavens, with ^s all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou ^t preservest them all; and ^u the host of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the Lord the God, who didst choose ^v Abram, and broughtest him ^w forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and gavest him the name of ^x Abraham; and foundest his heart ^y faithful before thee, and madest a ^z covenant with him to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites,—to give it, I say, to his seed, and ^a hast performed thy words; ^b for thou art righteous: ^c and didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and ^d heardest their cry by the Red Sea; and ^e showedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that they ^f dealt proudly against them. So didst thou ^g get thee a name, as it is this day. ^h And thou didst divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and ⁱ their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, ^j as a stone into the mighty waters. ^k Moreover thou ^l leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar; and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light ^m in the way wherein they should go.

13 ⁿ Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them ^o right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and ^p commandments: and madest known unto them thy ^q holy sabbath, and ^r commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant: ^s and ^t gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and ^u broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should ^v go in to possess the land ^w which thou hadst sworn to give them.

16 ^x But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and ^y hardened their necks, and ^z hearkened not to thy commandments, and ^a refused to obey, ^b neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them; but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion appointed ^c a captain to return to their bondage. But thou art a God ready to pardon, ^d gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and ^e forsookest them not. Yea, ^f when they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations; yet thou in thy ^g manifold mercies forsookest them not in the wilderness: the ^h pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to show them light, and the way wherein they should go.

20 Thou gavest also thy ⁱ good spirit to instruct them, and withheldest not thy ^j manna from their mouth, and gavest them ^k water for their thirst. Yea, ^l ^m forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they lacked ⁿ nothing; their ^o clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not. Moreover

² This was not the day of atonement, which fell on the tenth day of the seventh month; but this national fast was an introduction to the solemn covenant which followed (ver. 38; ch. x.) One day only had intervened since the last of the feast of tabernacles.

³ The 135th and 136th Psalms were probably composed on this occasion, or about this time: see note on title of Psa. cxxxv. See also note on title of Psa. cxxi.

⁴ A platform on which the Levites are said to have stood when they sung at the time of worship.

"thou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst ^p divide them into corners.¹
 So they possessed the land of ^q Sihon, and² the land of the king of Heshbon, and 23 the land of Og king of Bashan. ^r Their children also multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and ^s broughtest them into the land, concerning which ^t thou 24 hadst promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess it. So "the children went in and possessed the land, and ^x thou subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as they 25 would. And ^y they took strong cities, and a ^z fat land, and possessed ^a houses full of all goods, wells digged [or, cisterns], vineyards, and oliveyards, and fruit trees in abundance. So they did eat, and were filled, and ^b became fat, and delighted themselves in thy great ^c goodness.³ 26 Nevertheless they ^d were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and ^e cast thy law behind their backs, and slew thy ^f prophets which testified against them to 27 turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations. ^g Therefore thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them. And ^h in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou ⁱ heardest them from heaven; and according to thy manifold mercies ^k thou gavest them saviours, who 28 saved them out of the hand of their enemies.⁴ But after they had rest, ^l they did evil again before thee. Therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them. Yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven. And ^m many times didst 29 thou deliver them according to thy mercies; and ⁿ testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law. Yet they ^o dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (^p which if a man do, he shall live in them;) and ^q withdrew the shoulder,⁵ and ^r hardened 30 their neck, and would not hear. Yet ^s many years didst thou forbear them, and testifiedst ^t against them by thy spirit ^u in thy prophets. Yet would they not give ear. ^x Therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.
 31 Nevertheless for thy great mercies' sake ^y thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art ^z a gracious and merciful God.
 32 Now therefore, our God, the great, the ^a mighty, and the terrible God, ^b who keepest covenant and mercy, let not all the trouble seem little before thee, that hath come upon us, ^c on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, ^d since the time of the kings 33 of Assyria unto this day. Howbeit ^e thou art just in all that is brought upon 34 us; for thou hast done right; but ^f we have done wickedly: neither have our kings, our princes, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments, and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify against 35 them. For they have ^g not served thee in their kingdom, and in ^h thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and ⁱ fat land which thou gavest 36 before them, neither turned they from their wicked works. Behold, ^k we are servants this day, and ^l for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers to eat the 37 fruit thereof and the good thereof, behold, we are servants⁶ in it: and ^m it yieldeth much increase unto the kings⁷ whom thou hast set over us because of our sins:
 also they have ⁿ dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure;
 and we are in great distress.
 38 And because of all this we ^u make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, ^v seal unto it.
 10 Now those that sealed were, ^w Nehemiah, the Tirshatha [or, the governor], ^x the 4 These confessions are affectingly illustrated by the whole history of the Israelites, especially by the book of Judges; the brief summary of which, in ch. ii. 11—23, greatly resembles this passage.

1 That is, they publicly and solemnly ratified what their representatives had done.

2 We learn from the articles of the covenant into which the people entered, what portions of the law they had of late most neglected.

3 This was about tenpence. From the form of the expression, 'We made ordinances,' etc., it would seem to be a self-imposed tax, additional to the poll-tax enjoined in Exod. xxx. 13—15; though some suppose it to have been in lieu of that, a third of a shekel being received, instead of the half shekel required by the law, in consideration of the poverty of the people at this time.

4 In former times it had been the duty of the Nethinims (who were 'hewers of wood and drawers of water to the congregation,' or servants of the temple) to provide the wood necessary for the temple service. But, after the return from the captivity, this duty was undertaken by the priests and Levites, and the people at large; and they cast lots to determine the order in which the various classes and families should provide the needful supply. In later times, the Jews had an annual festival called Xylophoria, or 'wood-carrying;' when they carried with some solemnity the wood for the use of the temple.

5 As it was of great importance that the metropolis should be occupied by a population sufficiently numerous, industrious, and wealthy, to form a centre of influence and strength, a tenth of the rural population were chosen by lot to dwell there. Besides these, many others volunteered to settle there; and these were commended for their patriotism, inasmuch as Jerusalem was a post of greater danger, and afforded inferior advantages for family provision and comfort than the rural districts. Yet, as the 'holy city,' chosen by God as the special seat of his worship, it might well be desired by pious Jews. After this time the city became very populous, and continued so till it was destroyed by the Romans.

6 This enumeration differs considerably from that in 1 Chron. ch. ix.; and various methods of reconciliation have been proposed. The most probable supposition is, that the names in 1 Chron. ix. were selected for genealogical purposes, whilst those here given were chosen on account of their national and political importance.

¹ 'Israel' here seems to mean persons of the ten tribes, who returned from Babylon with those of Judah: these were not required to dwell in Jerusalem, but inhabited the cities and villages allotted to them.

² Shiloni is supposed by some to mean Shelah, Judah's youngest and only surviving son, by Shuah the Canaanitess. See 1 Chron. ii. 3.

³ Joel was the governor of the city, and Judah his deputy.

⁴ These priests seem to have resided constantly in Jerusalem of their own choice, besides those who attended by rotation at the temple.

⁵ Some consider this to be the officer who in the New Testament is called the 'captain of the temple' (Acts v. 24), and who had the superintendence of its secular matters.

⁶ The Hebrew term here used sometimes refers to wealth, and in other cases to moral excellence.

⁷ Some think that these Levites acted as judges and officers in the country districts. But it seems more probable that they were purveyors who had the charge of providing the sacrifices and other necessities.

⁸ This may refer to David; but it is more likely that the king of Persia is intended. See Ezra vi. 10.

⁹ Some translate this, 'by the king's authority;' others, 'on the king's part;' which would seem to mean that Pethaliah heard all causes in civil matters between the king and the people, such as about his tribute, or any grievance of which they complained.

 of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with glad-

2 Not all of them, but only the most distinguished are here named. Comp. ch. vii. 39—45, and Ezra ii. 36, etc.

3 Not Ezra the scribe, but a priest of the same name of the preceding generation.

4 We have here a list of the high priests for several generations after the Jews returned from Babylon. If this Jaddua were, as is said by Josephus, the high priest who went out to meet Alexander the Great on his approach to Jerusalem, then vers. 10, 11 must have been added after Nehemiah's time, by a later hand.

5 If this list of chief priests reaches down only to Nehemiah's days, then the king here mentioned must be

Darius Nothus, the immediate successor of Artaxerxes Longimanus; but if 'Jaddua,' in this verse, be the high priest of the time of Alexander, then 'Darius' must be Darius Codomannus, whom Alexander conquered.

6 The sacred music of the Hebrews is involved in much obscurity; but it is evident that their psalms or hymns were sung alternately by opposite choirs, one of which usually performed the hymn itself, while the other sang a particular distich, which was interposed at stated intervals. See Exod. xv. 20, 21; 1 Sam. xviii. 7; Ezra iii. 11; Psa. xx., cxii., cxxxvi., etc.

7 This seems to have occurred after Nehemiah's return from Persia. See ch. xiii. 1, 4, 6.

they went up by ^z the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto ^a the water gate eastward.

38 ^b And the other company of them that gave thanks went over against them,¹ and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond ^c the tower of the furnaces even unto ^d the broad wall; ^e and from above the gate of Ephraim, and above ^f the old gate, and above ^g the fish gate, ^h and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto ⁱ the sheep gate: and they stood still in ^k the prison gate.

40 So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me: and the priests; Eliakim, Maaseiah, 42 Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with trumpets; and Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer. 43 Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced: for God had made them rejoice with great joy: the wives also and the children rejoiced: so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

Appointment of officers of the temple; reformation of various abuses.

44 ¹ AND at that time were some appointed over the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the firstfruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them out of the fields of the cities the portions of the law² for the priests and Levites: for 45 Judah rejoiced for the priests and for the Levites that waited. And both the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and the ward of the purification,³ ^m according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son. For 47 in the days of David ⁿ and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God. And all Israel in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the singers and the porters, every day his portion: ^o and they sanctified holy things unto the Levites; ^p and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

13 On that day ^q they read in the book of Moses in the audience of the people; and therein was found written, ^r that the Ammonite and the Moabite should not 2 come into the congregation of God for ever; because they met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but ^s hired Balaam against them, that he 3 should curse them: ^t howbeit our God turned the curse into a blessing. Now it came to pass, when they had heard the law, ^u that they separated from Israel all ^x the mixed multitude.

4 And before this, Eliashib the priest, ^y having the oversight of the chamber of 5 the house of our God, was ^z allied unto Tobiah:⁴ and he had prepared for him a great chamber, ^a where aforetime they laid the meat offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, ^b which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters; and the 6 offerings of the priests. But in all this time was not I at Jerusalem: ^c for in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon⁵ came I unto the king; and 7 after certain days⁶ obtained I leave of the king: and I came to Jerusalem, and understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in ^d preparing him a chamber 8 in the courts of the house of God. And it grieved me sore: therefore I cast forth 9 all the household stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber. Then I commanded, and they ^e cleansed the chambers: and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat offering and the frankincense.

10 And I perceived that ^f the portions of the Levites had ^g not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to ^h his 11 field. Then ⁱ contended I with the rulers, and said, ^k Why is the house of God forsaken?⁷ And I gathered them together, and set them in their place. ^l Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn and the new wine and the oil unto 13 the treasuries [or, storehouses]. ^m And I made treasurers over the treasuries, Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe, and of the Levites, Pedaiah: and next

¹ There appears to have been a double procession of the princes and priests; one company, headed by Ezra, going to the right, and the other, with Nehemiah at their rear, going to the left: thus making a circuit of the wall in different directions, until they met on the opposite side of the city, when they marched in a body to the temple.

² That is, appointed by the law.

³ Boothroyd renders this clause, 'They observed what related to the worship of God, and to their purification.'

⁴ The enemies of the Jews, finding their open hostility unavailing, sought to gain their ends by forming alliances with their leading men. Tobiah's influence was so great that the Jews did not venture to enforce the law of separation in his case.

⁵ The kings of Persia reigned over Babylon and all the regions which had before been subject to the kings of Babylon.

⁶ How long Nehemiah remained in Persia is uncertain; but from the height to which these evils had attained during his absence, it seems probable that it must have been for several years. Nehemiah's second administration lasted probably about ten years, till about 405 B.C.

⁷ The prophet Malachi appears to refer to these abuses. See Mal. i. 9—14; iii. 7—12.

- 16 and I ^r testified against them in the day wherein they sold victuals. There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold

- 18 that ye do, and profane the sabbath day? ^t Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us and upon this city? Yet ^u ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.
- 19 And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem ^x began to be dark before the sabbath, I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath: ^y and some of my servants set I

¹ Nehemiah's prayer, in ver. 22, shows that his happy consciousness of the service which by Divine grace he had been enabled to render, was accompanied with an humble sense of his need of sparing mercy.

² This reform is supposed to have been from twelve to twenty years after a like reform by Ezra. See Ezra, ch. x.

³ Josephus says that this expelled priest was named Manasseh; that he went to his father-in-law Sanballat, who built a temple for him upon Mount Gerizim, in opposition to that at Jerusalem; and that this was the origin of the religious rivalry, and extreme hatred between the Samaritans and the Jews. See John iv. 20.

NOTE ON THE STATE OF THE JEWS AFTER THE CAPTIVITY.

IDOLATRY, the master sin of the Jewish nation, appears to have been effectually cured by the captivity in Babylon. It is not, indeed, to be supposed that all the exiles who there learned the folly of worshipping idols became spiritual worshippers of Jehovah; but it is evident that, on their restoration to their own land, there was much of the vitality of religion amongst them, and their hearts were turned to Him who had chastened them for their good. Towards the close of the government of Nehemiah, the ardour of religious feeling began to decline; and it appears, from the prophecies of Malachi, that this declension increased. A severe persecution under Antiochus Epiphanes was made, by the grace of God, the means of rekindling, for a short time, the almost extinguished spark of spiritual life. But the people gradually fell into new ways of perverting religion; by laying all the stress on its external parts, to the neglect of the weighty and substantial—making it to consist in the strict observance of rites and ceremonies, instead of real piety and holiness of heart and life; also by speculating and refining upon the the Divine commandments, till their true intent and meaning were quite lost; and, further, by setting up the authority of human traditions, and the doctrines and commandments of men; so making the word of God of none effect. And this was the general state of religion among them for several centuries before the coming of Christ; though they still continued steadfast in the outward worship of the true God. See, further, the sketch of the history of the Jews between the Old and New Testaments, at the end of the Old Testament.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

THE book of Esther derives its name from one of the principal personages whose actions it records. It is not, however, a biography, but a narrative of interesting and important public transactions; and it appears to be an extract from those official memoirs of the Persian court to which a distinct reference is made in ch. x. 2. The Asiatic sovereigns, as is well known, and as this book attests (ch. ii. 23; vi. 1), caused annals of their reigns to be kept; and from such national records this fragment of sacred history was probably translated by the inspired writer. Assuming this to have been so, it accounts for the omission of the name of God in this book, and for the minuteness of some of the details given respecting the court and empire of the Persian king (ch. i., ii., etc.), and the names of his ministers and officers, and even of Haman's sons (ch. i. 10, 14; ix. 7—10); also for Mordecai being frequently designated by the epithet of 'the Jew,' and the whole nation being always mentioned in the third and never in the first person. It supplies a reason, also, for the numerous parentheses which we find containing explanations which would be necessary for a Jewish reader; and it explains the abrupt termination of the narrative by one sentence relating to the power of Ahasuerus, and another concerning Mordecai's greatness. But the prominence which is given to Divine Providence (though the name of God is not expressly mentioned), and the high-toned moral suggestions which are occasionally made (see particularly ch. iv. 14) indicate the enlightened piety of the writer, and favour the supposition that Mordecai himself, or some other pious Jew, was at this time the royal annalist.

The authority of this book has always been acknowledged by the Jews, by whom it is held in the highest estimation. Its truth and genuineness are attested by the continued observance amongst the Jews, even to the present day, of the feast of Purim, the origin of which is here described (ch. ix. 20—28), and which is mentioned also in 2 Maccabees xv. 36. It holds an important place in the history of the people 'of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came'—as recording a most remarkable preservation of the nation in a time of imminent peril, of which we have no account elsewhere, but which is probably referred to in Heb. xi. 34, where mention is made of those who 'by faith escaped the edge of the sword.' Its internal evidence appears peculiarly striking when it is compared with the apocryphal addition given in some Bibles. The book itself is extant in Hebrew; the apocryphal addition is found only in Greek. In the former, everything exactly corresponds with the time at which it professes to have been written, and the narrative is simple, natural, and consistent; in the latter, persons and events are mentioned which did not exist till the Persian empire was overthrown; and it abounds with repetitions, and even contradictions. And whilst the sacred name is omitted in the genuine book, it is worthy of remark that it occurs in the very first sentence of the apocryphal additions, and is repeated no less than eight times in the course of five verses. So that it would seem as if Divine Providence had permitted these additions to be handed down in order to set in a clearer light the antiquity, genuineness, and intrinsic value of the book itself.

The events related in this book have been referred, by different critics, to the reign of almost every Persian king, from Cyaxares to Artaxerxes III. Many, following the Septuagint and Josephus, suppose 'Ahasuerus' to be Artaxerxes Longimanus. But it appears impossible to conceive that the king, who, in the twelfth year of his reign, gave his ready consent to a decree for the extirpation of all the Jews in his empire (see ch. iii. 7), was the same man who, in the seventh year of his reign (only five years previously, according to this supposition), made to the Jewish nation the large grant of favours and privileges contained in the commission to Ezra (see Ezra vii. 11—28). Other facts in this history give rise to similar difficulties; and, upon the whole, it appears most likely that the Ahasuerus here mentioned was Xerxes I., the invader of Greece; whose character, as made known to us from other sources, entirely corresponds with the facts here related. This supposition is further supported by the circumstance that some historians state that his son and successor, Artaxerxes Longimanus, had a Jewish mother. The principal dates also concur with remarkable periods in the life of Xerxes; the feast in ch. i. corresponds in point of time with the great council which he convened to decide upon the invasion of Greece; and the events in ch. ii. coincide with the period of his return, when he is said by Herodotus to have given himself up to unbounded personal indulgence. It does not, however, appear that either Esther or Mordecai can be satisfactorily identified with any persons mentioned in secular history.

The two foregoing books have shown God's mercy towards the Jews who returned from Babylon to their own land: from this we learn that those also who remained in heathen countries were the objects of his watchful care. It exhibits, also, the wonderful manner in which He who sees and 'declares the end from the beginning' provides for the execution of his purposes; exercising an absolute though unseen control even over the results of men's free actions. It shows, further, how easy it is for him to 'put down the mighty from their seats,' and to 'exalt them of low degree;' and teaches us how safe it is to put our trust in God, and to walk humbly with him. It is thus excellently adapted to repress pride and vain glory, to administer comfort under trial, and to confirm faith and hope.

The contents of this book are as follows: The elevation of Esther to be queen in the place of Vashti (ch. i., ii.); Haman's plot for the destruction of the Jews (iii.); their consequent distress; the defeat of Haman's plot; the triumph of the Jews over their enemies; and the institution of the festival commemorating their deliverance (iv.—x.)

4 According to Eastern usages, women hold their feasts separately from the men. While the king's feast was in 'the court of the garden,' Vashti's was in the 'royal house,' conducted more privately.

5 Such an appearance as the king required would be, according to Oriental notions, a degradation to which a 7 Some render this clause, 'and should speak the language of his own people;' making his wife, though a foreigner, conform to it.

8 This narrative affords a sad illustration of the truth, that the higher men are raised in power and wealth, the lower they often sink in subjection to their own sensual appetites; making the gratification of these their chief pursuit. And it shows how much the gospel of Christ was needed to give woman her right place in society, and to restore marriage to its original purity.

- 4 given them: and let the maiden which pleaseth the king be queen instead of Vashti. And the thing pleased the king; and he did so.
- 5 Now in ^zShushan the palace there was a certain Jew, whose name was Mordecai, ^athe son of Jair, the son of Shimei, the son of Kish,¹ a Benjamite;
- 6 ^bwho had been carried away from Jerusalem with the captivity which had been carried away with ^cJeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of
- 7 Babylon had carried away. And he brought up Hadassah,² that is, Esther, ^dhis uncle's daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was fair and beautiful; whom Mordecai, when her father and mother were dead, took for his own daughter.
- 8 So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were ^egathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of Hegai, that Esther was brought³ also unto the king's house, to the
- 9 custody of Hegai, keeper of the women. And the maiden pleased him, and ^fshe obtained kindness of him; and he speedily gave her her ^gthings for purification, with such things as belonged to her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house: and he preferred her and her maids unto the
- 10 best place of the house of the women. ^hEsther had not showed her people nor
- 11 her kindred: for Mordecai had charged her that she should not show it. And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's house,⁴ to know how Esther did, and what should become of her.
- 12 Now when every maid's turn was come to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women, (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished, to wit, six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with sweet odours, and with other things for the purifying of the
- 13 women;) then thus came every maiden unto the king; whatsoever she desired was given her to go with her out of the house of the women unto the king's
- 14 house. In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines: she came in unto the king no more, except the king delighted in her, and that ⁱshe were called by name.
- 15 Now when the turn of Esther, ^kthe daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai, who had taken her for his daughter, was come to go in unto the king, she required nothing but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women, appointed. And Esther obtained favour in the sight of all them that
- 16 looked upon her. So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus into his house royal in the tenth month, which is the month Tebeth, in the seventh year of his
- 17 reign. And the king loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and favour in his sight more than all the virgins; ^lso that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti. Then the king
- 18 ^mmade a great feast unto all his princes and his servants, even Esther's feast; and he made a release⁵ to the provinces, and gave gifts, according to the state of the king.
- 19 And when the virgins were gathered together the second time, then Mordecai
- 20 sat ⁿin the king's gate. ^oEsther had not yet showed her kindred nor her people; as Mordecai had charged her: for Esther did the commandment of Mordecai, like as when she was brought up with him.⁶

- 22 and sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus. And the thing was known to Mordecai, ^qwho told it unto Esther the queen; and Esther certified the king

² 'Hadassah' (a myrtle) was her Hebrew name; 'Esther' her Persian name.

³ It was not left to the choice of Esther, or of her guardian, whether she should be brought to the palace (ver. 3). A disclosure of her lineage might have kept her from being chosen as queen, but would not have saved her from concubinage. Every one whom the king thus took was considered a secondary wife; and her situation was not, according to the custom of those times and of those countries, deemed unlawful or dishonourable.

⁴ Mordecai was a keeper of the gate, an office held only by persons of some consideration.

⁵ This is understood by the Septuagint and the Chaldee to mean a remission of tribute. This was the practice of the Persian kings on such occasions.

⁶ Although the ancient Persians imposed a greater restraint on females than is practised among us, yet they seem not by any means to have gone so far in that respect as the Oriental nations do at present; so that Mordecai was able to maintain a correspondence with Esther.

And when Haman saw that Mordecai ^y bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman ^z full of wrath.

¹ Haman is supposed to have been an Amalekite, descended from the ancient kings of that people, whose royal title was Agag. See Numb. xxiv. 7.

² The Hebrew may be rendered, 'They knelt down, and fell prostrate before Haman.' This was the homage usually rendered to the Persian kings.

⁴ The Sept. adds, 'that he might destroy in one day the race of Mordecai: and the lot fell for the fourteenth of the twelfth month; that is, the month Adar.' The practice of casting lots to discover a lucky day for any important enterprise was, and still is, common in the East, particularly among the Persians. It must not be inferred from our translation that Haman had recourse to the lot every day during a whole year: but he determined by lot first which month of the year was most auspicious, and then which day of the month; and the lots fell upon the fourteenth day of the month Adar, which was nearly twelve months after the time at which the decision was given. The overruling providence of God was herein strikingly manifested; for this long interval allowed time to take the necessary measures for defeating the plot.

⁵ Such is the way in which princes are too often imposed upon by their favourites and flatterers; and it is thus that persecution has been usually excited against the people of God: they have been rendered odious by falsehood and misrepresentation, and then treated as the vilest of criminals.

⁶ A sum amounting to more than two millions of pounds sterling. This immense sum was promised for the purpose of gratifying a cruel revenge, and to compensate the king for the tribute of the slaughtered people; for that was the standard by which Haman and his despotic master estimated the worth of his subjects. Haman probably intended to reimburse himself from the spoil of the Jews.

⁷ A seal-ring bearing the cipher of the sovereign, and thus answering the purpose of both seal and signature.

⁸ It appears surprising that the king should have given his consent to so inhuman a proposal; but history shows, that when an arbitrary monarch has become the dupe of a wicked favourite, it frequently becomes the chief object of his life to gratify and aggrandize him, without regard to the lives of his subjects or the interests of his empire. To estimate rightly the peril of the Jews, it should be remembered that, at that period, the whole nation, including even those in Judea, were under the dominion of the Persian king.

⁹ Xenophon states (Cyp. viii. 6, 17, 18) that Cyrus had established a regular system of posts and couriers throughout the Persian dominions.

Mordecai appeals to Esther, who endeavours to conciliate the king.

4 WHEN Mordecai perceived ^q all that was done, Mordecai ^r rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth ^s with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and ^t cried with a loud and a bitter cry; and came even before the king's gate: for none ^u might enter into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth.² And in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and weeping, and wailing; and ^v many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 So Esther's maids and her chamberlains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved; and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him; ^x but he received it not. Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, whom he had appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, to know what it was, and why ^y it was. So Hatach went forth to Mordecai unto the street of the city, which ^z was before the king's gate. And Mordecai ^a told him of all that had happened unto him, and of ^b the sum of the money that Haman had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews, to destroy them. Also he gave him ^c the copy of the writing of the decree that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to show it unto Esther, and to declare it unto her, and to charge her that she should go in unto the king, to make supplication unto him, and to make request before him for her people.

9, 10 And Hatach came and told Esther the words of Mordecai. Again Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai; All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into ^b the inner court, who is not called, ^c there is one law of his to put him to death,³ except such ^d to whom the king shall hold out the golden sceptre,⁴ that he may live: but I have not been called ^e to come in unto the king these thirty days. And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, ^e Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews. For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, ^f then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise⁵ to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth ^g whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?⁶

15, 16 Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer, Go, gather together all the Jews that are present in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink ^h three days,⁷ night or day: I also and my maidens will fast likewise;⁸ and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: ⁱ and if I perish, I perish. So Mordecai went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

5 Now it came to pass ^k on the third⁹ day, that Esther put on her ^l royal apparel, and stood in ^m the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate ⁿ of the house. ¹ No one could be sure of his life, when a whole nation was sacrificed to please a favourite.

² Nothing was allowed to enter the palace which did not bear the aspect of joy and pleasure, or which could remind the king of misery or mortality; and this rule still prevails in the East.

⁴ The golden sceptre of the Persian kings is referred to by Xenophon (Cyrop. viii. 7, 13).

⁶ Subsequent events showed that Mordecai had correctly interpreted the ways of Providence.

⁸ Joining privately in the palace, as they were unable to attend the Jewish assemblies in the city.

⁹ That is, the last day of the fast. Esther, having worn the garb of mourning during the fast, now exchanged it for her royal attire.

¹⁰ In the Persian palaces, the principal apartment, called the 'inner court' (ch. iv. 11), is open in front; so that the king, unless when the throne was concealed by a curtain, could see any one entering the hall.

So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre.¹ Then said the king unto her, ^pWhat wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? ^qit shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom.² And Esther answered, If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared for him.³ Then the king said, Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. 9 THEN went Haman forth that day ^tjoyful and with a glad heart. But when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, ^uthat he stood not up, nor moved for him,⁶ he was full of indignation against Mordecai. Nevertheless Haman ^xrestrained himself:⁷ and when he came home, he sent and called for his friends, 11 and Zeresh his wife. And Haman told them of the glory of his riches, and ^ythe multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and how he had ^zadvanced him above the princes and servants of the king. 12 Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared but myself; and to-morrow am I 13 invited unto her also with the king. ^aYet all this availeth me nothing,⁸ so long 14 as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate. ^bThen said Zeresh his wife and all his friends unto him, Let a ^cgallows be made of fifty cubits high, and to-morrow ^dspeak thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. 6 On that night could not the king sleep,⁹ and he commanded to bring ^fthe ²book of records of the chronicles;¹⁰ and they were read before the king. And it was found written, that ^gMordecai had told of ^hBigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, What honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, There is nothing 4 done for him. And the king said, Who is in the court? Now Haman was come into ⁱthe outward court of the king's house, ^kto speak unto the king to hang 5 Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him. 1 In token of her thankful acceptance of the king's favour, and of her reverence and submission.

2 This form of expression probably arose from the peculiar mode in which the ancient kings of Persia bestowed grants on their favourites; not by direct payments from the royal treasury, but by giving them a charge on the revenues of particular cities or provinces.

3 Esther's address and prudence appear in the method she took to ensure success. The court of the palace, where the king was surrounded by his attendants, was not a suitable place for the disclosure of so important and delicate an affair; nor was it likely that the king's sudden feelings would be so lasting as was necessary for her object.

4 Esther barely alludes to what the king had said, by repeating his words 'petition' and 'request;' and then, with feminine adroitness, avoids a direct answer, invites him and Haman to a second banquet, and promises then to divulge her wishes: a sure mode of keeping alive the king's curiosity; while at the same time it intimated that her petition was upon a matter of no ordinary importance.

5 This postponement (in which we may observe the concurrence of Esther's prudent arrangements with the secret purposes of God's special providence) gave room for other important steps towards the final catastrophe. See vers. 12—14, and ch. vi. In the meantime, Esther's conduct still further ingratiated her with the king, and lulled the guilty favourite into fatal security.

6 It might have been imagined that Mordecai, when he saw the danger in which he and his whole nation were involved, would have tried to assuage Haman's resentment. But, having no reason to repent of his conduct, he would not thus displease God and dishonour himself. See ch. iv. 14.

7 Divine Providence restrained him, by means of his own passions, from immediate vengeance; his malice insisting upon a sweeter though tardier revenge.

8 The greatest earthly honours and pleasures will avail nothing to the satisfaction of those whose hearts are full of selfishness and pride. A loss or an affront which others would scarcely notice will torment them to madness.

9 See note on ch. v. 8.

10 The Persians took remarkable pains to preserve the remembrance of their exploits by written documents. Yet none of their ancient records are now extant except the few extracts preserved in the books of Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther, and in the Greek historians.

the man whom the king delighteth to honour? Now Haman thought in his heart, 'To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?'
 7 And Haman answered the king, For the man whom the king delighteth to honour, let the royal apparel be brought which the king useth to wear, and ^m the horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown royal which is set upon his head:
 9 and let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man withal whom the king delighteth to honour, and bring him on horseback through the street of the city, and ⁿ proclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.¹
 10 Then the king said to Haman, Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: let nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken.
 11 Then took Haman the apparel and the horse, and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.
 12 And Mordecai ^o came again to the king's gate.² But Haman ^p hastened to his house mourning, ^q and having his head covered. And Haman told Zeresh his wife and all his friends every thing that had befallen him. Esther's successful application to the king; Haman is executed, and Mordecai advanced.

14 AND while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and ^s hastened to bring Haman unto 'the banquet that Esther had prepared.
 7 So the king and Haman came to banquet with Esther the queen. And the king said again unto Esther on the second day ^t "at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom.
 3 Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favour in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my request: for we³ are ^x sold, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. But if we had been sold for bondmen and bondwomen, I had held my tongue, although the enemy could not countervail the king's damage.⁴
 5 Then the king Ahasuerus answered and said unto Esther the queen, Who is he, and where is he, that durst presume in his heart to do so? And Esther said, The adversary and enemy is this wicked Haman.
 7 Then Haman ^y was afraid before the king and the queen. And the king arising⁵ from the banquet of wine in his wrath went into the palace garden: and Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen; for he saw that there was evil determined against him by the king.
 8 Then the king returned out of the palace garden into the place of the banquet of wine; and Haman was fallen upon ^z the bed⁶ whereon Esther was. 13 ^v The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was published unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that 14 day to avenge themselves on their enemies. So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, being hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment.⁶ And the decree was given at Shushan the palace.

^v ch. 3. 14, 15.

15 And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king ^y in royal apparel of blue and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and 16 purple. And ^z the city of Shushan rejoiced and was glad. The Jews had ^a light, and gladness, and joy, and honour. And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast ^b and a good day. And many of the people of the land 17 ^c became Jews;⁷ for ^d the fear of the Jews fell upon them.

The Jews successfully resist their enemies.

9 NOW ^e in the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar, on the thirteenth day of the same, ^f when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put him out as a person of no ordinary accomplishments, both moral and intellectual.

² Haman's death did not invalidate the murderous edict by which all the Jews in the Persian empire were doomed to the sword; and they had many enemies, who were eagerly looking forward to the day fixed by the decree for slaughter and spoliation: see ch. ix. 1.

³ The king's answer intimates the impossibility of granting literally Esther's request, to reverse or revoke the decree; and points out the expedient to be adopted in order to defeat its operation. As it was a fundamental principle of the Persian government that a law once enacted was irrevocable, the king was obliged to give a contradictory decree, which would be well known to convey his real wishes, authorizing the Jews to defend themselves if attacked.

⁴ These words are more accurately rendered, 'riders on swift horses, and mules the offspring of mares.'

⁵ The Jews did not actually proceed so far (see ch. ix. 10, 15, 16), nor probably was it intended they should; but these powers were necessary, both to indemnify them and to intimidate their enemies.

⁶ Two months had elapsed since the issuing of Haman's letters; and the preparations which had been made by the enemies of the Jews would have to be met by counter-preparations on their part. Therefore, though nine months remained for the circulation of the new letters, there was no time to be lost.

⁷ That is, they became proselytes to the religion of the Jews. Some doubtless did this from conviction, because they had seen the hand of God so remarkably displayed on behalf of his people, and were led thereby to become sincere worshippers of Jehovah; others probably from interested motives, observing the favour which the Jews enjoyed at court.

in execution,¹ in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them,² (though it was turned to the contrary, that the Jews ^s had rule over them that hated them;) the Jews ^h gathered themselves together in their cities throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as ⁱ sought their hurt: and no man could withstand them; for ^k the fear of them fell upon all people. And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and officers of the king, helped the Jews; because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them. For Mordecai was great in the king's house, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai ^l waxed greater and greater.

Thus the Jews smote all their enemies with the stroke of the sword, and slaughter, and destruction, and did what they would unto those that hated them. And in Shushan the palace the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men. And Parshandatha, and Dalphon, and Aspatha, and Poratha, and Adalia, and Aridatha, and Parmashta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha, ^m the ten sons of Haman³ the son of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews, slew them; ⁿ but on the spoil laid they not their hand.⁴

On that day the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace was brought before the king. And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace,⁵ and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? now ^o what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: or what is thy request further? and it shall be done.

Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do to-morrow also ^p according unto this day's decree,⁶ and let Haman's ten sons ^q be hanged upon the gallows. And the king commanded it so to be done: and the decree was given at Shushan; and they hanged Haman's ten sons. For the Jews that were in Shushan ^r gathered themselves together on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan; ^s but on the prey they laid not their hand.

But the other Jews that were in the king's provinces ^t gathered themselves together, and stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand⁷ (^u but they laid not their hands on the prey) on the thirteenth day of the month Adar; and on the fourteenth day of the same rested they, and made it a day of feasting and ^x gladness. But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together ^y on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof; and on the fifteenth *day*⁸ of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness. Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwall'd towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar ^z a day of gladness and feasting, ^a and a good day, and of ^b sending portions one to another.

Institution of the feast of Purim; Mordecai's greatness.

AND Mordecai ^c wrote these things, and sent letters unto all the Jews that were in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far, to stablish this among them, that they should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly, ^d as the days wherein the Jews rested from ¹ As the king's second decree did not annul the former, the enemies of the Jews still had legal permission, on the day fixed in Haman's letters, to destroy them and to seize their property. But by this very means the Divine plan for the punishment of the enemies of the chosen people was accomplished.

² It might have been supposed that the declared favour of the king, and the elevated position of Mordecai, would have effectually prevented the contemplated attack: but there was probably a large party in the empire who were hostile to the Jews; whilst others would be tempted by the prospect of a rich booty. Trusting, therefore, in their superior numbers, and in their legal impunity for any excesses they might commit, when the appointed day arrived, they attacked the Jews, who stood entirely on the defensive.

³ As their names are mentioned, it is likely that they had been advanced to high offices during their father's administration.

⁴ This was probably owing to express instructions from Esther and Mordecai; and it reflects honour on their religion, their wisdom, and their humanity.

⁵ That is, 'Shushan the royal city.' The total number of slain there was 800. These were probably bitter enemies of the Jews; who, enraged at Haman's disgrace and death, had taken advantage of the first decree to attempt to avenge him.

⁶ As the Jews do not appear to have shown a cruel or revengeful spirit, it may reasonably be inferred that this measure was necessary in order to put down the malignant party, and to strike terror into the minds of inveterate enemies.

⁷ It is not improbable that the Jews were remarkably preserved in the midst of imminent danger, for there is no mention of any of them being slain on this occasion. As they simply, with the king's sanction, stood in defence of their lives, slaying only those who attacked them, and universally declined to enrich themselves with the spoil, they must be allowed to have acted in an unexceptionable manner. The ancient Jewish writers say that many of those who perished were Amalekites.

⁸ The Jews throughout the provinces, having obtained a complete victory over their enemies on the 13th, held festivals on the 14th; but those in the capital, being still engaged in hostilities on that day, did not keep their feast till the 15th. They therefore determined, on Mordecai's recommendation, that the festival should in future continue during both those days.

their enemies, and the month which was ^e turned unto them from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day: that they should make them days of feasting
 23 and joy, and of ^f sending portions¹ one to another, and gifts to the poor.² And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto 24 them; because Haman the son of Hammedatha, the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, ^g had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast Pur, that is,
 25 the lot, to consume them, and to destroy them; but ^h when Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters that his wicked device, which he devised against the Jews, should ⁱ return upon his own head, and that he and his sons
 26 should be hanged on the gallows. Wherefore they called these days Purim³ after the name of Pur [i. e. lot]. Therefore for all the words of ^k this letter, and of that which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto 27 them, the Jews ordained, and took upon them, and upon their seed, and upon all such as ^l joined themselves unto them, so as it should not fail, that they would keep these two days according to their writing, and according to their appointed
 28 time every year; and that these days should be ^m remembered and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city; and that these days of Purim should not fail from among the Jews, nor ⁿ the memorial of them perish from their seed.
 29 Then Esther the queen, ^o the daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote with all authority, to confirm this ^p second letter of Purim. And he sent the letters unto all the Jews, to ^q the hundred twenty and seven provinces of the 31 kingdom of Ahasuerus, with words of peace and truth, to confirm these days of Purim in their times appointed, according as Mordecai the Jew and Esther the queen had enjoined them, and as they had decreed for themselves and for their 32 seed, the matters of ^r the fastings and their cry.⁴ And the decree of Esther confirmed these matters of Purim; and it was written in the book.
 10 And the king Ahasuerus ^s laid a tribute⁵ upon the land, and upon ^t the isles⁶ of
 2 the sea. And all the acts of his power and of his might, and the declaration of the greatness of Mordecai, ^u whereunto the king advanced him, are they not
 3 written ^v in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia? For Mordecai the Jew was ^w next unto king Ahasuerus,⁷ and great among the Jews, and accepted of the multitude of his brethren, ^x seeking the wealth of his people, and speaking peace to all his seed.

1 It is customary in the East, when a feast is made, to send portions to those who are unable to attend, especially to relatives and friends in affliction.

2 The Jews have set a praiseworthy example in relieving their poor on occasions of national rejoicing.

3 'Purim' is the plural of 'Pur,' which signifies lot; the name being taken from the circumstance of Haman having cast lots to fix the day of their destruction: see note on ch. iii. 7. This national commemoration has been ever since observed by the Jews. At this festival, the whole book of Esther is read twice in the synagogues. The feast is celebrated with the greatest hilarity; alms are given to the poor; and relations and friends send presents to each other. Ps. cxviii. is supposed to have been written at this time: see note on its title.

4 That is, their prayer; referring to ch. iv. 3, 16. Or the words may be understood prospectively, and may be translated thus: 'adding fasting and prayer.'

5 We have no account here of the purposes to which this tribute was applied, nor of the wars which Ahasuerus carried on against the Greeks and the Egyptians. Scripture history extends to the affairs of heathen nations only so far as they are connected with those of the people of God.

6 These are supposed to be the isles of the Ægean Sea, which had been conquered by Darius Hystaspis.

7 Like Joseph in the court of Pharaoh, Obadiah in that of Ahab, Daniel in that of Belshazzar, and Nehemiah in that of Artaxerxes. Such men cannot alter the frame of the government, nor prevent much evil; but they may keep themselves from sin, and be the instruments of effecting much good.

NOTE ON THE VARIATIONS IN NUMBERS MENTIONED IN THE HISTORICAL BOOKS.

IN the different records of the same events contained in the preceding books, variations in the numbers will have been observed. Some of these have already been explained in notes upon the passages in which they occur. But it is important further to observe that, in Hebrew and Greek, as in some other languages, numbers are expressed by the letters of the alphabet; and some of these are so much alike that the smallest possible alteration, such as would change e into z, may convert 3 into 50, or 4 into 200, or 8 into 400. In some cases, too, the addition of a dot or a line may multiply greatly the numerical power of a letter. In all cases of any real importance something may be found in the context, or in other parts, to guide us towards correctness; and in no case do these discrepancies affect any religious doctrine, or weaken the evidence of the truth of Scripture. On the contrary, they rather strengthen it; for their existence forbids the supposition that the manuscript authorities have been tampered with in order to produce a rigid uniformity; whilst their limited extent shows how jealously God's providence has guarded his saving truth from sustaining any real injury by human inadvertence and error.

With reference to the numbers of armies mentioned in the history, which appear sometimes exceedingly large, it is to be remembered that in Eastern nations every person capable of bearing arms was compelled to join the host when the monarch pleased; that Oriental sovereigns seem to have prided themselves on the numbers rather than the discipline of their troops; and that the enumeration probably often includes the followers of the camp, who in the East are sometimes far more numerous than those armed for battle.

In consulting the above Table, it is necessary to bear in mind the following remarks:—

I. The separate column of dates of contemporaneous occurrences in heathen nations does not commence until the 1st Olympiad (B. C. 776), as there is scarcely a single event, before that epoch, the date of which can be ascertained, except those which are fixed by the Bible History. Some dates in this column, such as those of the building of Rome, and of the early kings, are given according to the usual chronology; the questions which have been raised respecting many of the facts themselves not coming within the scope of this work.

II. With respect to the events of Sacred History, it will be observed that the earlier dates in this Table differ from both Usher and Hales, being founded upon a computation referred to in the Preface to the Book of Judges, which places the date of the departure from Egypt about 29 years later than the period assigned by Hales.

III. In comparing the dates found in the Books of Kings and of Chronicles respectively, and even in different parts of the same Books, we meet with difficulties which our present knowledge does not enable us completely to remove. But so near an approach to correctness is attainable as to leave a question with respect to barely ten years in about four hundred. For, besides the aid rendered by the various readings of ancient versions, we have the following helps:—(1.) The careful mention of the year of a contemporary sovereign in which each of the kings began to reign frequently furnishes a clue to a correct date, notwithstanding a few errors of transcription. (2.) The length assigned to the life or reign of a king is sometimes corrected by that ascribed, with self-evident truth, to his successor. (3.) Great assistance is derived from remembering the well-known ancient principle of computation, by which a part of a year was counted as a whole. It will be seen that this is successfully applied to the adjustment of the greater number of the reigns in both Israel and Judah. (4.) Some periods are settled by the facts of the history. Thus Ahaziah king of Judah, and Jehoram king of Israel, being both slain about the same time by Jehu, the date of their death and of his accession forms a starting point in the chronology, both upwards and downwards. Somewhat similar is the ascertained agreement of the destruction of Samaria with a certain year in the reign of Hezekiah. From all this it results that the era of the co-existence of the two kingdoms of Judah and Israel, though presenting many intricacies which render perfect exactness unattainable, yet affords so many checks upon any serious error that there is peculiar certainty as to its general chronology.

GENERAL REMARKS

ON THE

POETICAL BOOKS, AND ON HEBREW POETRY.

THIS division of the Holy Scriptures comprises Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon. Some portions of these are earlier in date, and others later, than many parts of the historical books; but they are classed together as being almost wholly in Hebrew verse. They are not, however, the only poetical books of Scripture; for the writings of the Prophets are also, for the most part, in this form.

The chief excellence of the Hebrew poetry is undoubtedly to be found in the sublime sentiments and the great moral and spiritual truths by which it is pervaded. It possesses also the elevation of style, the emphatic collocation of words, the animation and richness of thought, and the force and delicacy of feeling, which distinguish the best poetry of all languages; and, like Eastern poetry in general, it surpasses that of the Western world in the boldness of its figures and metaphors.

Hebrew poetry, being of comparatively limited extent, does not present so many varieties as are to be found in other literature; but three species are clearly distinguishable:—1. Lyrical. Its earliest productions, like those of other nations, seem to have been of this class, the expressions of excited feeling, which were intended to be sung with musical accompaniment (see Exod. xv. 1—18; Judg. v.). Of this kind are the greater part of the Psalms, the Lamentations of Jeremiah, and the Song of Solomon. 2. Didactic poetry; of which species are the books of Job, the Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and some of the Psalms. And, 3. Prophetic poetry; comprising the writings of the sixteen Prophets.

As to the external form of Hebrew poetry, and the laws which governed its construction, various opinions have been held at different periods. It was at one time supposed to consist of syllabic metres similar to those of the Greek and Roman poets; but this theory was based upon a partial examination, and has been proved to be altogether inapplicable to the poetry of the Hebrew Scriptures in general. It is equally certain that rhyme did not usually enter into its composition, though some of the poets evidently delighted in the occasional occurrence of similar sounds: and it is now generally agreed that its chief external characteristic is PARALLELISM or verse-rhythm, which consists in such an arrangement of the words composing the sentence, or verse, that when complete it resolves itself into two or more symmetrical members, generally of nearly equal length, between which there is a certain relation of resemblance, correspondence, or contrast, either as to thought or language, or both. The juxtaposition in which the several propositions, or sets of ideas, are thus placed, is capable of being beautifully modified by poetical art. In the simplest construction of the parallelism, the first member, forming the rise of the verse, is succeeded by its counterpart which forms the fall. Sometimes the second member is an echo or an expansion of the first, expressing the same sentiments in a varied form. In other cases, the proposition being too long for one member is extended through two or more, the first breaking off abruptly at an important part of the sentence (as in Psalms cx. 5); or an accessory sentence is subjoined in a second member (as in Psalm cxli. 10); or, to deepen the impression, the main idea is expressed in contrast or in comparison with some other. It is worthy of notice, that this peculiar characteristic of Hebrew poetry is one which is not lost in translation, and is therefore specially valuable in a book designed to be published in all the languages of the earth.

Different classifications of this poetical parallelism have been proposed. The following, which is substantially that of bishop Lowth, is given not as the best, but as the one most generally adopted.

1. The first kind is that in which the responsive, or second clause, repeats the first with some diversity of words or thought. This is denominated by Lowth synonymous, because the two lines frequently 'correspond one to another by expressing the same sense in different but equivalent terms.' It is called by others cognate, as expressing the close relationship, without absolute identity, between the two members of the sentence; and by others, again, gradational, as describing the progression of thought or expression which is often observable in the second clause. This species of parallelism is the most frequent of all. It prevails chiefly in the Psalms, and shorter poems. The following are examples. Psalm xix. 1:

The heavens declare the glory of God:
And the firmament sheweth his handywork.

Psalm cxii. 1:

Blessed is the man that feareth Jehovah,
That delighteth greatly in his commandments.

2. A second form of parallelism is the antithetic; in which the idea contained in the second clause is contrasted with that in the first, either in expression or in sense. This is found mostly in the book of Proverbs.

3. A third form is the synthetic, or constructive; in which a new thought is added in the second member of the verse, which yet is so expressed that it corresponds in form with the first; the parallelism in this case being merely rhythmical, and not one of meaning. As examples, see Job iii. 3—9; Psalm cxlviii. 7—13; Isaiah i. 5—9; lvi. 5—8. This kind of parallelism occurs very frequently in the Scriptures, especially in the Prophets.

There are numerous parallel triplets, both of the synonymous and the synthetic class: as Psalm i. 1; lxvii. 18, 19; xciii. 3, 4. There are also many double parallelisms of all the three classes: as Psalm xxxvii. 1, 2; ciii. 11, 12; Prov. xi. 24; Isaiah i. 3, 19, 20; ix. 10; Hab. iii. 17, 18. In stanzas of four lines, sometimes the members have an alternate correspondence, the first line answering to the third, and the second to the fourth: as in Psalm xxxiii. 13, 14; xl. 7; xlv. 3; Isaiah i. 15; ix. 10; xxx. 16.

'Each kind of parallelism admits many subordinate varieties; and, in combinations of verses, the several kinds are perpetually intermingled; circumstances which at once enliven and beautify the composition, and frequently give peculiar distinctness and precision to the train of thought.'—Jebb.

The parallelism affords important aid in interpretation by exhibiting the salient points of the passage in their true relation. It is especially useful where the construction is complicated or elliptical, or where uncommon words occur, as one member of a sentence which is clear contributes much towards determining the sense of another which is ambiguous.

Another artificial form which sometimes appears in Hebrew poetry is an alphabetical arrangement, the initial letters of the successive lines or stanzas following the order of the letters of the alphabet. This is found in Psalm xxv., xxxiv., xxxvii., cxi., cxii., cxix., cxlv.; in Lam. i.—iv; and in Prov. xxxi. 10—31. This device was perhaps intended to assist the memory: it is found chiefly in poems consisting of detached sentiments.

THE BOOK OF JOB.

THE book of Job derives its name from the venerable patriarch on whose eventful history it is founded. It presents many interesting subjects of inquiry, some of which are confessedly difficult and obscure. Only the more important of these will be briefly noticed here.

That Job was a real person, and that the events of his life here narrated actually occurred, may be inferred from the manner in which he is spoken of in other passages of Scripture (Ezek. xiv. 14; James v. 11): and this conclusion is sustained by the particular details given of persons, places, etc.

The country in which Job dwelt is not easily determined. Some consider it to have been in Idumea, or Arabia Deserta; others fix it in Mesopotamia.

We have still greater difficulty in ascertaining the time at which Job lived. Many circumstances, however, lead us to conclude that it was before the departure of the Israelites from Egypt. Some suppose it to have been at a still earlier period, even before the age of Abraham. In support of this opinion it is alleged:—that, (1.) The long life of Job, extending to two hundred years, agrees only with the lives of the patriarchs between Peleg and Abraham. (2.) The manners and customs described are those of the earliest ages. (3.) The religion of Job, requiring sacrifice, but without a distinct priesthood or sacred place, is such as prevailed in patriarchal times. (4.) The worship of the sun and moon is the only form of idolatry spoken of (ch. xxxi. 26—28), and this was unquestionably the most ancient. (5.) There is no allusion to the Mosaic law, or to the Divine interpositions on behalf of the Israelites in their deliverance from Egypt and their journey to Canaan; which are constantly used by the other sacred writers to illustrate the character and government of Jehovah. (6.) Neither is there any reference to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, which, as a direct and signal judgment of the Almighty occurring in this vicinity, would hardly have been omitted in an argument of this kind. Some, on the other hand, think that they have detected allusions to the overthrow of the cities of the plain (ch. xv. 34; xviii. 13; xx. 26); and adduce the coincidence of many names occurring in this book with those of some of Abraham's descendants through Ishmael and Esau as indications of a rather later age. It is worthy of notice, that, if Job lived between the deluge and the call of Abraham, we have an additional proof that God has never left the world without witnesses to his truth.

Considerable difference of opinion has prevailed also respecting the author of this book. Some have supposed that it was written by Job himself, or by Elihu; others have ascribed it to Moses; whilst some eminent critics, on account of certain peculiarities of language and style, as compared with those of some other Hebrew poems, regard it as the production of an inspired poet about the time of Solomon: but it appears, upon the whole, more probable that it was written not very long after the events occurred. Whoever may have been its author, we have sufficient evidence of its Divine authority from the testimony borne by our Lord and his apostles to the inspiration of the whole collection of the Old Testament, in which it was included. See General Preface, p. iv.

The poetical form, in which the greater part of this book is written, was most in accordance with the genius of the country and of the age of Job, and afforded an opportunity for expressing the sentiments of the speakers in the most terse, beautiful, and impressive manner.

The book opens with a description of the character and sufferings of the patriarch. He is a man of large possessions, highly honoured by all who know him, and of unimpeachable uprightness before God. Satan having asserted that his religion is mere selfishness, is permitted to deprive him of his children, and of all his possessions. The faith of the patriarch, however, sustains him under every trial. To the loss of property, and to domestic bereavements, is then added the infliction of a most painful and loathsome disease. Still Job keeps his integrity, and piously submits to God's chastening hand.

In this state of things, three of his friends come to condole with him. The overwhelming calamities which have come upon so good a man appear to confound them. His case is contrary to all their views and maxims with respect to God's way of dealing with the righteous; and when he breaks out into the language of complaint and despair, cursing the day of his birth, and implying that God acted arbitrarily in sending afflictions, they come at once to the conclusion, that, so far from being upright and holy, as they had supposed, he must be a wicked man and a hypocrite. This, therefore, originates an important discussion with reference to the principles on which the Divine government in this world is conducted; whether a life of piety is not invariably attended with prosperity, and whether extraordinary sufferings are not demonstrative of corresponding guilt.

Eliphaz leads the way in the argument, and is followed by his two companions. They hold that there is a strict retribution in the present life, and that it is reasonable to infer what a man's character is, from the present dealings of God with him; and they insinuate that Job's extraordinary calamities must be a punishment for peculiar wickedness. They reprove him for impatience and irreverent complaints of God; and exhort him to repentance and reformation as a certain means of regaining his former prosperity.

Job replies to each of the speakers, boldly denying their charges. He maintains that God, in distributing good and evil, acts according to his sovereign pleasure, and that prosperity and adversity are no evidence of character; and appeals to indisputable facts in proof of the long life and success of the wicked. He complains bitterly of the treatment of his friends, who, instead of offering him consolation, aggravate his distress by false accusations; and expresses his earnest desire to carry his cause at once before God, in whom he still confides.

His friends are greatly offended at his sentiments, and attempt to vindicate the conduct of God towards him; repeating their charges with increasing warmth and asperity, and even accusing him of particular crimes. But the more they press their arguments, the more confidently does Job assert his innocence, and appeal to God to vindicate his character; until they are reduced to silence.

Elihu then, who appears to have been an attentive listener, comes forward to reason with Job. His leading principle is, that afflictions are for the good of the sufferer; and that, if the afflicted hearken to the counsel which God thus sends, and turn from their sins, they will find their sufferings to be sources of great benefit. He re-proves Job for justifying himself rather than God; and vindicates the character and government of the Most High. To illustrate his views, and to show the necessity of submission, he concludes with a sublime description of the greatness and majesty of God.

After this, the Lord himself addresses Job; not condescending to enter into any particular explanation of his conduct; but, from the consideration of his infinite and unsearchable wisdom and greatness, as seen even in the works of creation and providence, convincing Job of presumption, ignorance, and guilt, in arraigning the dispensations of his providence.

Job, subdued and humbled, confesses that he is vile. His confession is accepted, and his general course approved.

His three friends are rebuked; Job is directed to make intercession for them; and prosperity is heaped upon him more largely than ever.

Whilst the course and result of the argument are sufficiently clear, the object of the book has long been a subject of controversy. Perhaps the following remarks may set this in the right point of view. In asserting that the religion of one of the best of men was only a refined selfishness, 'the accuser of the brethren' had impugned the fundamental principle of true piety. God, therefore, permits this to be put to the severest test by the removal of everything that could be supposed to have produced a mercenary religion; and the result is, that Satan's falsehood is completely refuted. For whilst Job too passionately maintains his innocence of those egregious sins with which his friends had erroneously connected his unusual sufferings, and thus loses some of the consolation which he might have enjoyed, he is so far from turning away from God, and renouncing the desire of his favour, that he only asks to obtain from him a hearing, fully assured that 'the Judge of all the earth' will 'do right,' and that it shall ultimately be well with those who trust in him (ch. xix. 23—26). Herein Job speaks of Him 'the thing that is right,' and in the end is accepted and honoured as a true believer (ch. xlii. 7, 8). Thus the nature and power of confiding faith in God are illustrated, and it is shown that the principle of real piety was the same under the patriarchal dispensation as under those economies which are blessed with larger revelations of the Divine will.

In connection with this, believers in all ages are taught that in the most inscrutable acts of God's sovereignty, his Divine justice, wisdom, and love are engaged. So that however difficult it may sometimes be to discover why afflictions are sent, the righteous ought to bear them with patient resignation, and to maintain unimpaired their confidence in the all-wise Disposer of events, who sends such trials in mercy, and will give to them a happy issue. 'Behold,' says the apostle James, 'we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.'

We are also warned against hastily judging our brethren, and reminded of the bad effects of warm controversies on religious subjects. Job and his friends, though all pious men, disputed till they became angry, censured and condemned each other, departed in opposite directions from the truth, and uttered many irreverent things about the Divine character and government. They lost their temper, and would have lost their labour, and have been more at variance than ever, if the controversy had not been decided by the intervention of the highest authority.

This book also shows the opinions which prevailed, in the early ages of the world, on an important question connected with the Divine government, which often tried the faith of believers (see Psa. lxxiii.; John ix. 2): why the good are afflicted, and the wicked are often prosperous. And while we see, on the one hand, the great superiority of the views of Divine Providence here expressed to anything which can be found in the writings of the Greek and Roman sages, we see also, on the other, how much cause we have for gratitude on account of the clearer and fuller revelation we enjoy.

It should be observed, that, although the inspiration of the book of Job is undoubted, it is clear that when he or his friends utter erroneous opinions, or argue incorrectly by drawing wrong inferences from right principles, we are not to consider their sentiments as the voice of inspiration. Their arguments and expressions must be compared with the law of God, and with the nature of true religion as exhibited in other portions of God's word, and especially as manifested in the example and spirit of Him who was the only perfect Being who ever appeared in our nature.

1 His general conduct was thoroughly consistent with his knowledge and professed piety.

2 Heb., 'cattle;' in which the wealth of nomadic tribes mainly consists.

3 She-asses are very valuable in the East, on account of their milk.

4 Heb., 'sons of the East;' an expression often used in Scripture to denote the inhabitants of Arabia, eastward of Palestine.

5 These were periodical family festivals held in each other's houses; perhaps on their respective birthdays.

6 The sisters lived, according to the custom of the East, with their mother.

7 Or, 'prepared them to offer sacrifice.' See refs. Job feared that their festivity might have thrown his sons off their guard, leading them perhaps to forget God while enjoying his bounties.

8 The word here used commonly means to bless; hence sometimes to dismiss, and probably to forget or renounce. So in ver. 11, and ch. ii. 5, 9.

9 Sometimes called 'saints' (holy ones); more generally 'angels' (messengers). The first name refers to 10 God,¹ and die. But he said unto her, ^hThou speakest as one of the foolish² women speaketh. What? ⁱshall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?³ ^kIn all this did not Job ^lsin with his lips.

11 Now when Job's three ^mfriends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; Eliphaz the ⁿTemanite,⁴ and Bildad the ^oShuhite, and Zophar the ^pNaamathite: for they had made an appointment together to come ^qto mourn with him and to comfort him. And when they lifted up their eyes afar off, and knew him not,⁵ they lifted up their voice,⁶ and wept; and ^rthey rent every one his mantle, and ^ssprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven. So they ^tsat down with him upon the ground ^useven days⁷ and seven nights, and ^vnone spake a word⁸ unto him: for they saw that his grief was very great.

Job's complaint.

3 AFTER this opened Job his mouth, and cursed his day.⁹ And Job spake, and said,

3 ^yLet the day perish wherein I was born,
And the night in which it was said,—There is a man child conceived.
4 Let that day be ^zdarkness;—^alet not God regard it from above,
Neither let the light shine upon it.
5 Let darkness and ^bthe shadow of death¹⁰ stain it;
^cLet a cloud dwell upon it;—let the blackness of the day terrify it.
6 As for that night, let darkness seize upon it;
Let it not be joined unto the days of the year,
Let it not come into the number of the months.
7 Lo, let that night be solitary,—let no joyful voice come therein.
8 Let them curse it that curse the day,—^dwho are ready to raise up their mourning.¹¹
9 Let the stars of the twilight thereof be dark;—^elet it look for light, but have none;
Neither let it see the dawning of the day:
10 Because ^fit shut not up the doors of my mother's womb,
Nor hid sorrow from mine eyes.

11 ^gWhy died I not from the womb?
Why did I not give up the ghost when I came out of the belly?¹²
12 ^hWhy did the knees prevent¹³ me?—or why the breasts that I should suck?
13 For now should I have lain still and been quiet,
I should have slept: then had I been at rest,
14 With kings and counsellors of the earth,
Which ⁱbuilt desolate places¹⁴ for themselves;
15 Or with princes that had gold,—who filled their houses with silver:
16 Or ^kas an hidden untimely birth I had not been;
As infants which never saw light.
17 There ^lthe wicked cease from troubling;—and there the weary be ^mat rest.
18 There the prisoners rest together;—ⁿthey hear not the voice of the oppressor.
19 ^oThe small and great are there;—and the servant is free from his master.

20 ^pWherefore is light given to him that is in misery,
And life unto the ^qbitter in soul;
21 Which ^rlong for death, but it cometh not;
And dig for it more than ^sfor hid treasures;
22 Which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad, when they can find the grave?
23 Why is light given to a man ^twhose way is hid,—^uand whom God hath hedged in?

1 This might be translated, either 'Praise God, and die!' i. e. Go on as you have done, serving God under the loss of your property and family, and you will lose all that you have left, your life; or rather, 'Bid farewell to (i. e. renounce) God, and die.' See note on ch. i. 5.

2 This often means 'wicked.' See Gen. xxxiv. 7.

3 That is, 'Shall we recognise God only in the bestowment of blessings, and not also in the allotment of sorrow?'

4 These personal and geographical names, as well as those in ch. i. 1, 15, 17, give some clue to the scene of the history. See refs. and Preface. These friends of Job seem to have been not only persons of distinction, but also men of wisdom and piety, though in the ensuing debate they expressed many erroneous views.

5 So altered was his appearance by disease and suffering.

7 A usual time of mourning among Orientals. See refs.
8 They were astonished at Job's sufferings, and unable to offer any consolation in consequence of the views they entertained of their cause.

9 Overcome by his sufferings, Job uttered expressions which cannot be vindicated. We must, however, remember that the light he enjoyed, and the sources of comfort open to him, were far inferior to those which we possess.

10 An expression denoting the deepest darkness. It occurs very frequently in this book.

And ^y my roarings are poured out like the waters.

The first speech of Eliphaz.

- 4 THEN ^z Eliphaz the Temanite ^a answered and said,²
2 If we assay to commune with thee, wilt thou be grieved?
But who can withhold himself from speaking?
3 Behold, ^b thou hast instructed many,—and thou ^c hast strengthened the weak hands.
4 Thy words have upholden him that was falling,
And thou ^d hast strengthened ^e the feeble knees.
5 But now ^f it is come upon thee, and ^g thou faintest;
It toucheth thee, and thou art troubled.
6 Is not *this*³ ^h thy fear, ⁱ thy confidence,—thy hope, and ^k the uprightness of thy ways?
7 Remember, I pray thee, ^l who ever perished, being innocent?⁴
Or where were the righteous cut off?
8 Even as I have seen, ^m they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same.
9 ⁿ By the blast of God they perish,
And ^o by the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.
10 The roaring of the lion,⁵ and the voice of the fierce lion,
And ^p the teeth of the young lions, are broken.
11 ^q The old lion perisheth for lack of prey,
And the stout lion's whelps are scattered abroad.
12 Now a thing was secretly brought to me,—and mine ear received a little thereof.⁶
13 ^r In thoughts from the visions of the night,—when ^s deep sleep falleth on men, 14 Fear came upon me, and ^t trembling,—which made all my bones to shake.
15 Then ^u a spirit passed before my face;—the hair of my flesh stood up:
16 It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof:
An image was before mine eyes,—there was silence, and I heard a voice,⁷ saying,
17 ^x Shall mortal man be more just than God?
Shall a man be more pure than his Maker?⁸
18 Behold, he ^y put no trust in ^z his servants;—and his angels he charged with folly:⁹
19 ^a How much less in them that dwell in ^b houses of clay,¹⁰
^c Whose foundation is in the dust,—which are ^d crushed before the moth!¹¹
20 ^e They are destroyed from morning to evening:¹²
They perish for ever ^f without any regarding it.
21 ^g Doth not their excellency¹³ which is in them go away?
^h They die, even without wisdom.
5 Call now, if there be any that will answer thee;
And to which of ⁱ the saints¹⁴ wilt thou turn?
2 For ^k wrath killeth the foolish man,—and ^l envy¹⁵ slayeth the silly one.
3 ^m I have seen the foolish taking root:—but suddenly I cursed¹⁶ his habitation.

Jer. 12. 1—3.

1 Or, 'my sighing comes in the place of my daily food,' i. e. is my daily food (Psa. xlii. 4; lxxx. 6).

2 Eliphaz, after apologizing for speaking, expresses his surprise at hearing complaints from Job, who had so often encouraged others (vers. 2—5); asks why he does not confide in his uprightness, since no innocent man can perish (6—11); refers to a communication made to him in a vision to show how wrong Job was in arraigning his Maker (12—21); asserts that man has no reason to complain, since the cause of affliction is in himself (ch. v. 1—7); and concludes by exhorting Job to cast himself upon God, whose greatness and goodness are shown both in nature and in the government of the world (8—16), and by showing the happy consequences of submission to Divine chastisements (17—27).

3 Rather, 'Is not thy fear (i. e. thy piety) thy confidence—and the uprightness of thy ways thy hope?'

4 This sentence contains the essential principle on which the whole argument of Job's friends is based.

5 Unjust, cruel men are often compared in the Scriptures to wild beasts. See Psa. x. 9, etc. In vers. 10, 11, five different names are given to the lion in the Hebrew; showing how common those animals once were in that region, although they are seldom found there now.

6 Heb., 'whisper thereof.'

7 Or, 'I heard a still voice;' as in 1 Kings xix. 12.

8 The argument is, that if Job were to deny his guilt, it would be in effect affirming that God was punishing the innocent. All that was spoken in this vision was in itself true, yet the use made of it by Eliphaz was wrong.

9 As even the most exalted spirits are imperfect, compared with the infinite perfection of the Deity, how much more so is man!

10 That is, bodies made of dust.

11 This may mean either, 'sooner than is the moth;' or, 'just as the moth is crushed.'

12 That is, all day long.

13 Literally, 'their cord is torn away;' referring either to life under the figure of a tent (as in Isa. xxxviii. 12), or to the sinews, nerves, etc., of the body.

14 Or, 'holy ones;' meaning probably the angels.

15 Or, 'indignation.' Some suppose the meaning to be, that indignant complaints against God are destructive to the complainant. Others apply the words 'anger' and 'indignation' to God.

16 That is, 'I regarded it as cursed.' The wicked

Job's reply.

- 6 BUT Job answered and said,¹¹
 2 Oh that my grief were thoroughly weighed,
 And my calamity laid in the balances together!¹²
 3 For now it would be heavier ° than the sand of the sea:
 Therefore ° my words are ° swallowed up.¹³ man, however prosperous he may appear, is quickly cut down.

2 That is, even the least cultivated part is stripped; none is left.

3 Rather, 'For;' and so in ver. 7, for 'yet' read 'for.'

4 Heb., 'sons of the flash.' Many of the best commentators, following the ancient versions, regard this as a poetical phrase for swiftly flying birds. In either case, an innate tendency is referred to, and is used to represent the internal cause of misery in man.

5 That is, the mouths of their enemies. The figure is taken from rapacious animals, to which unjust and oppressive rulers are frequently likened.

6 That is, in any succession of troubles; a definite number being put for an indefinite.

7 A slandrous tongue, which inflicts a severe wound on the peace and reputation.

8 Rather, 'devastation.'

9 The meaning is, that both the animate and inanimate creation should be at peace with him.

10 This may mean either, 'thou shalt not wander,' having everything needful at home; or, 'thou shalt miss nothing.' If the latter be the meaning, the whole line may be read, 'Thou shalt review thy pasture, and shalt miss nothing.'

11 In his reply, Job attempts to justify his complaints on the ground of his severe sufferings (vers. 2—7); repeats his desire for death, asserting that his strength was insufficient to bear his trials (8—13); charges his friends with aggravating his afflictions (14—23); and calls upon them to reconsider his case (24—30). Turning from them, he complains of the misery of life (vii. 1—6); entreats God to consider its brevity (7—10); and remonstrates with him for so deeply afflicting him (11—21).

12 That is, they would balance each other; my complaining would not be found greater than the case warrants.

13 Rather, 'For now it (my calamity) is heavier than the sand of the sea; hence my words are vehement.'

1 That is, 'Does any one complain in prosperity? Think not that I am impatient without cause.'

2 The meaning is, 'Can any one take delight in what is distasteful? How can I feel satisfied with misery?'

3 Loathsome.

4 Job here speaks rashly; for who could for a single hour endure the wrath of the Almighty, if he let loose his hand against him and spared not?

5 Rather, 'I would exult in unsparing anguish.'

6 Or, 'suffer patiently'; as the Heb. phrase usually means.

7 This may be better read, 'Is not my help in me nothing, and deliverance driven from me?'

8 Job compares his friends to streams which are abundant in the winter, but are dried up in the heat of summer, and so have least water when it is most needed. The scene so graphically described in the following verses is often witnessed in Arabia.

9 That is, turbid.

10 This verse is better translated, 'Caravans turn from their path (i. e. in search of these streams); they wander in the desert and perish.'

11 'The troops of Tema and Sheba' were the merchant-caravans which carried goods from those regions to the western parts of Asia. They knew well all the streams on their route, and directed their journeys by them.

12 That is, at being disappointed of water.

13 In other words, 'Ye are of no use to me.'

14 These interrogations mean, Did I ask any assistance from you?

15 That is, mere words. See Isa. xxix. 21.

16 A phrase meaning 'the utterly helpless.'

17 From your unkindness: 'let there be no unfairness; yea return, for my right is herein'; i. e. my cause is just.

18 Or, 'a warfare'; man's life is a hard service; his days are days of labour.

19 As the slave panteth for the shade, i. e. the evening.

- 4 ^q When I lie down, I say,—When shall I arise, and the night be gone?
And I am full of ^r tossings to and fro unto the dawning of the day.
- 5 My flesh is ^s clothed with worms and clods of dust;
My skin is broken, and become loathsome.
- 6 ^t My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle,—and are spent ^u without hope.
- 7 Oh remember that ^v my life is wind:—mine eye shall no more see good.
- 8 ^w The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more:
^x Thine eyes are upon me, and I am not.
- 9 As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away:
So ^y he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more.
- 10 He shall return no more to his house,—^z neither shall his place know him any more.
- 11 Therefore I will ^a not refrain my mouth;
I will speak in the anguish of my spirit;
I will ^b complain in the bitterness of my soul.
- 12 Am I a sea, or a whale,¹—that thou settest a watch over me?
- 13 ^c When I say, My bed shall comfort me,—my couch shall ease my complaint;
14 Then ^d thou scarest me with dreams,—and terrifiest me through visions:
15 So that my soul chooseth strangling,—and death rather than my life.²
- 16 ^e I loathe it; I would not live alway:—^f let me alone; for ^g my days are vanity.
- 17 ^h What is man, that thou shouldest magnify him?
And that thou shouldest set thine heart³ upon him?
- 18 And that thou shouldest visit⁴ him every morning,—and try him every moment?
- 19 ⁱ How long wilt thou not depart from me,
Nor let me alone till I swallow down my spittle?⁵
- 20 ^m I have sinned; what shall I do unto thee, ⁿ O thou preserver of men?⁶
Why ^o hast thou set me as a mark against thee,⁷—so that I am a burden to myself?
- 21 And why dost thou not pardon my transgression,—and ^p take away mine iniquity?
For now shall I ^q sleep in the dust;
And thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I shall not be.⁸

Bildad's first speech.

- 8 THEN answered ^r Bildad the Shuhite, and said,⁹
- 2 How long wilt thou speak these things?
And how long shall the ^s words of thy mouth be like a strong wind?¹⁰
- 3 ^t Doth God pervert judgment?—or doth the Almighty pervert justice?
- 4 If ^u thy children have sinned against him,
And he have cast them away for their transgression;
- 5 ^v If thou wouldest seek unto God betimes,
And make thy supplication to the Almighty;
- 6 ^w If thou *wert*¹¹ pure and upright;—surely now ^x he would awake for thee,
And ^y make the habitation of thy righteousness prosperous.
- 7 ^z Though thy beginning was small,—yet thy latter end should greatly increase.
- 8 ^a For inquire, I pray thee, of the former age,
And prepare thyself to the search of their fathers:¹²
- 9 (For ^b we are but of yesterday, and know nothing,¹³ Because our days upon earth are a shadow:)
- 10 Shall not they teach¹⁴ thee, and tell thee,—and utter words out of their heart?
- 11 Can¹⁵ the rush¹⁶ grow up without mire?—can the flag grow without water?
- 12 ^c Whilst it is yet in his greenness, and not cut down,
It withereth before any other herb.

2 Literally, 'my bones;' i. e. my emaciated form.

3 Rather, 'fix thy attention upon him;' i. e. make him judicially of such importance.

4 That is, with sufferings.

5 This is a proverbial expression for a short interval.

6 Or, 'Though I have sinned, what evil have I done to thee, O thou watcher of men?' meaning that his sins were not so flagrant as to require exemplary punishment.

7 Rather, 'a mark to thee;' i. e. to thy attacks.

8 If any favour be shown me, it must be done soon.

9 Bildad infers, from the heavy calamities of Job and of his children, that they had been heinous sinners (vers. 2—7); appeals to the testimony of antiquity to prove the close connection between sin and suffering (8—19); and describes, in contrast, the happiness of the righteous

(20—22). There is some truth in his affirmations respecting the dealings of God with the upright and with the wicked; but his argument, like that of Eliphaz, rests upon an unsound foundation, and the implied application to Job and his family was unjust and cruel.

10 Spurning all restraint.

11 Or, 'If thou be;' that is, 'if thou join reformation with prayer.'

12 Fathers of the former age; still more remote antiquity.

13 The brevity of human life, as compared with that of former ages, implied a more limited experience.

15 Vers. 11—19 probably give some well-known adages of the ancients, referred to in vers. 8, 10.

16 See notes on Gen. xli. 2; Exod. ii. 3. This proverb probably originated in Egypt; it illustrates the luxuriant prosperity and sudden destruction of the ungodly.

- 13 So are the paths of all that forget God;—and the ^fhypocrite's¹ hope shall perish:
 14 Whose hope shall be cut off,—and whose trust shall be ^sa spider's web.

 Then it shall deny him, saying, I have not seen thee.
 19 Behold, ^othis is the joy⁴ of his way,—and ^pout of the earth shall others grow.
 20 Behold, ^qGod will not cast away a perfect man,
 Neither will he help the evil doers:
 21 Till he fill thy mouth with ^rlaughing, and thy lips with rejoicing.
 22 They that hate thee shall be ^sclothed with shame;
 And the dwelling place of the wicked shall come to nought.

Job's reply.

- 9 THEN Job answered and said,⁵
 2 I know it is so⁶ of a truth:—but how should 'man be just with [or, before] God?
 3 "If he will contend with him,—^xhe cannot answer him one of a thousand.⁷

¹ Rather, according to the meaning of the word, 'the hope of the polluted.'

² Or, 'That wraps its roots about a heap of stones.' The figure is that of a plant which springs up luxuriantly even in stony ground, before the intense heat approaches. See refs. Some, however, say that the term rendered 'stones' signifies also a fountain or spring.

³ Or, 'when it is rooted up from its place.' The import of the figure is, Although a wicked man flourish, his prosperity is uncertain and short-lived.

⁴ Evidently sarcastic: Such is the joy of the wicked!

⁵ Job, in his answer to Bildad, admits the omnipotence and sovereignty of God, and the sinfulness, weakness, and subjection of man (ch. ix. 2—20); and maintains that in this life affliction equally befalls the righteous and the wicked; passes to the contemplation of his own trials, desiring, yet fearing to discuss them with God (21—35); expostulates with Him (x. 1—17); and concludes by wishing for death (18—22). This reply of Job displays contending emotions. Fear, hope, confidence, despair, and a sense of the severity of his sufferings, by turns agitate his mind. Thus expressions of acquiescence in the Divine sovereignty (ix. 4—15) are succeeded by the language of fretfulness (vers. 16—21; also ch. x.)

⁶ Alluding to the general position which had been maintained, that God would not pervert justice.

⁷ That is, 'for one of his innumerable offences.'

⁸ A poetical form of expression, meaning suddenly; as in Ps. xxxv. 8; Cant. vi. 12. In the sublime description which follows, the earth (vers. 5, 6), the heavenly bodies (7—9), universal nature (10), and lastly man (11—13), are declared to be under God's control.

⁹ Hides their light. Where we use locks, the ancients often employed seals (Dan. vi. 17; Matt. xxvii. 66). So in ch. xxxvii. 7, to 'seal up the hand' of men is to hinder them from any development of activity.

¹⁰ Or, 'boweth the heavens.' Comp. Ps. xviii. 9; descriptive, with the preceding clause, of a storm, when the sky seems to descend.

¹¹ Rather, 'Ursa Major;' the four stars of which were regarded by the Arabians as a bier, and the three of the tail as mourners, hence called 'sons' (ch. xxxviii. 32).

¹² Heb., 'Chesil,' meaning the 'rebel' or 'fool,' supposed to be a giant chained up in the sky. Hence the expression in ch. xxxviii. 31.

¹³ Heb., 'a cluster.'

¹⁴ That part of the heavens of which but little is visible in our hemisphere.

¹⁵ This probably means men who, relying on their strength and power, take part with the enemies of God.

- And if of judgment, who shall set me a time to plead?
- 20 ^a If I justify myself, ^a mine own mouth shall condemn me :

1 'I would not take care of my life.' See Gen. xxxix. 6 ; Psa. i. 6.

2 Or, 'It is the same thing [whether I live or not] ; therefore I said it,—for he destroyeth,' etc.

3 That is, 'he will disregard.' When calamity is abroad, the innocent suffer equally with the wicked. By this, Job means to show that a man's character cannot be inferred from God's dealings with him.

4 'He blinds the eyes of its judges. If not, who, I pray, is it?' Job here asserts that God inflicts calamities on the innocent, and exalts the wicked and unjust. See Psa. lxxiii. for a similar state of feeling, and its corrective.

5 A runner, or courier.

6 This may mean either, 'boats of reeds,' of papyrus (see Isa. xviii. 2), which were used on the Nile, and were celebrated for their swiftness ; or, 'ships of hostility or war,' which were built for speed.

7 Rather, 'I am held guilty ; why then labour I to prove my innocence in vain?'

8 Literally, 'If I cleanse my hands with soap,' or alkali ; i. e. 'should I use the best means to purify myself.'

9 That is, the contest is unequal.

10 This word signifies an arbiter, or umpire, appointed to decide in a disputed cause. The laying his hand upon both refers probably to some ancient ceremony, expressive of the power which his office gave him over both parties. Job alludes to this to show the inequality of the contest.

11 What Job had declared he would say, if he were freed from his sufferings, he is now induced to utter from bitterness of soul.

12 That is, I will freely indulge my complaints.

13 That is, 'Is it pleasing to thee to oppress?'

14 These questions imply, that as God is omniscient and eternal, his conduct might be expected to be very different from that of shortsighted, inexperienced man.

15 Not guilty of great crimes.

- 19 I should have been as though I had not been;
 I should have been carried from the womb to the grave.
- 20 ^t'Are not my days few?' ^ucease then,
 And ^vlet me alone, that I may take comfort a little,
- 21 Before I go ^wwhence I shall not return, ^xEven to the land of darkness ^yand the shadow of death;
- 22 A land of darkness, as darkness itself;
 And of the shadow of death, without any order,
 And where the light is as darkness.⁴

Zophar's first speech.

- 11 THEN answered ^aZophar the Naamathite, and said,⁵
- 2 Should not the multitude of words be answered?
 And should a man full of talk be justified?
- 3 Should thy lies⁶ make men hold their peace?
 And when thou mockest, shall no man ^bmake thee ashamed?
- 4 For ^cthou hast said, My doctrine is pure,—and I am clean in thine eyes.⁷
- 5 But oh that God would speak,—and open his lips against thee;
- 6 And that he would show thee the secrets of wisdom,
 That they are double to that which is!
 Know therefore that ^dGod exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity deserveth.⁸
- 7 ^eCanst thou by searching find out God?
 Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?
- 8 It is ^fas high as heaven; what canst thou do?
^gDeeper than hell; ^hwhat canst thou know?
- 9 The measure thereof is ⁱlonger than the earth,—and broader than the sea.
- 10 ^jIf he cut off, and ^kshut up, or gather together,¹⁰—then ^l'who can hinder him?
- 11 For ^mhe knoweth vain men:—he seeth wickedness also;
 Will he not then consider it?
- 12 For ⁿvain man ^owould be wise,—though man be born like a wild ass's colt.¹¹
- 13 ^pIf thou ^qprepare thine heart,—and ^rstretch out thine hands toward him;
- 14 If iniquity be in thine hand, ^sput it far away,
 And ^tlet not wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles.
- 15 ^u'For then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot;¹²
 Yea, ^vthou shalt be stedfast, and shalt not fear:
- 16 Because thou shalt ^wforget thy misery,—and remember it as waters that pass away:
- 17 And thine age ^xshall be clearer than the noonday;
 Thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning.¹³

1 Vers. 15, 16 may be better rendered thus: 'If I be wicked, woe unto me; and if I be righteous, I cannot lift up my head: I am full of shame, beholding my affliction. And if it (my head) be lifted up, thou huntest me as a fierce lion, and showest thyself powerful in afflictions.'

2 By new calamities: see ch. xvi. 8; Mal. iii. 5.

3 Or, 'Changes and a host;' i. e. host after host.

4 'A land of midnight darkness, death-shade, and confusion; where the light is as midnight.' This is a poetical description of the region of departed spirits, according to the popular ideas entertained at the time.

5 Zophar, the third of Job's friends, is more vehement than the others. He severely censures Job's self-justification, asserting that his crimes deserve severe punishment (vers. 2—6); shows the vanity of opposing God's will (7—12); and urges Job to repentance by the temporal benefits which would result from it (13—20).

6 Rather, 'vauntings.'

7 This is exaggerated. Job admitted his imperfection, while he maintained his innocence of the charges laid against him.

8 Rather, 'For there is double to his wisdom (i. e.

his wisdom is very great); and know that God hath overlooked part of thine iniquity.' Some suppose 'the secrets of wisdom' to refer to the Divine administration in the future life; and consider the following clause to mean that the goodness of God in rewarding the righteous, and his justice in punishing the wicked, far exceed anything known in this world.

9 Heb., 'Sheol,' the invisible world; which is usually represented as of inconceivable depth and extent. See Isa. xiv. 9.

10 Rather, 'If he arrest and shut up (imprison), and bring to judgment, then,' etc.

11 Or, 'But empty man doth not regard it, nor lay it to heart; yea, as a wild ass-colt man is born.' This is a striking image of what is wild, untamed, and rebellious. See Jer. ii. 24. The passage shows the views entertained of human nature in an early age of the world.

12 Or, 'Surely then thou shalt lift up thy face unstained,' or unclouded.

13 Rather, 'And thy life shall arise [clearer] than noon; darkness shall be as the morning.' See Isa. lviii. 10. For the contrary idea, see ch. iii. 4, 5, 9, etc.

- 18 And thou shalt be secure, because there is hope;
 Yea, thou shalt dig¹ about thee, and ^a thou shalt take thy rest in safety.
 19 Also thou shalt lie down, and none shall make thee afraid;
 Yea, ^b many shall ^c make suit unto thee.
 20 But ^d the eyes of the wicked shall fail,—and they shall not escape,
 And ^e their hope shall be as the giving up of the ghost.

Job's reply.

12 AND Job answered and said,²

- 2 No doubt but ye are the people,—and wisdom shall die with you!
 3 But ^f I have understanding as well as you;—I am not inferior to you:
 Yea, who knoweth not such things as these?
 4 ^g I am as one mocked of his neighbour,
 Who ^h calleth³ upon God, and he answereth him:
 The just upright man is laughed to scorn.
 5 ⁱ He that is ready to slip with his feet
 Is as a lamp⁴ despised in the thought of him that is at ease.
 6 ^k The tabernacles of robbers prosper,—and they that provoke God are secure;
 Into whose hand God bringeth abundantly.⁵
 7 But ^l ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee;
 And the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee:
 8 Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee:
 And the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.
 9 Who knoweth not in all these—that ^m the hand of the LORD hath wrought this?
 10 ⁿ In whose hand is the soul of every living thing,—and ^o the breath of all mankind.
 11 ^p Doth not the ear try words?—and the mouth taste his meat?⁶
 12 ^q With the ancient is wisdom;—and in length of days understanding.
 13 ^r With him⁷ is wisdom and strength,—he hath ^s counsel and understanding.
 14 Behold, ^t he breaketh down, and it cannot be built again:
 He ^u shutteth up a man, and there can be no opening.
 15 Behold, he ^v withholdeth the waters, and they dry up:
 Also he ^w sendeth them out, and they overturn the earth.
 16 ^z With him is strength and wisdom:—^a the deceived and the deceiver are his.⁸
 17 He leadeth counsellors away spoiled,⁹—and ^b maketh the judges fools.
 18 ^c He looseth the bond of kings,—and girdeth their loins with a girdle.
 19 ^d He leadeth princes¹⁰ away spoiled,—and overthroweth the mighty.
 20 ^e He removeth away the speech of the trusty,
 And taketh away the understanding of the aged.
 21 ^f He poureth contempt upon princes,—and weakeneth the strength of the mighty.¹¹
 22 ^g He discovereth deep things out of darkness,
 And bringeth out to light the shadow of death.^h
 23 ⁱ He increaseth¹² the nations, and destroyeth them:
 He enlargeth the nations, and straiteneth them again.
 24 ^j He taketh away the heart¹³ of the chief of the people of the earth,
 And ^k causeth them to wander in a wilderness where there is no way.
 25 ^l They grope in the dark without light,
 And he maketh them to ^m stagger like a drunken man.
13 Lo, mine eye hath seen all this,—mine ear hath heard and understood it.
 2 ⁿ What ye know, the same do I know also:—I am not inferior unto you.
 3 ^o Surely I would speak to the Almighty,—and I desire ^p to reason with God.
 4 But ^q ye are forgers of lies,—^r ye are all physicians of no value.

1 'Search;' without finding any cause of alarm.

2 Job, in replying to Zophar, refers also to the arguments of Eliphaz and Bildad. He begins by expressing contempt for his friends, who, though not wiser than himself, had presumed thus to teach him (vers. 2—5); affirms again that God deals sovereignly with men (ver. 6), shows that he can speak of God's might and supremacy in strains as sublime as those of his friends (7—25; xiii. 1, 2); appeals from their charges to the Almighty (3—27); and closes with a touching description of the brevity of life (xiii. 28; xiv.)

3 That is, I whom God once heard and answered am treated with scorn.

4 A man brought very low by adversity is regarded as an almost extinguished lamp; i. e. with equal displacency.

5 Some render, 'who have God in their hand;' i. e.

who have no other God than their own will and power.

6 Or, 'Doth not the ear try words as the palate tastes food;' and so I will exercise my own judgment upon the wise sayings you have quoted, for they are not worthy of God's inscrutable wisdom (vers. 12, 13).

7 That is, with God.

8 All are alike under his control.

9 Rather, 'Stripped;' i. e. captives (Isa. xx. 4).

10 Or, 'priests.' See note on Gen. xli. 45.

11 Rather, 'looseth the girdle of the strong.' See ver. 18, and Isa. v. 27.

12 'Increaseth' refers to power; 'enlargeth' to extent.

13 Or, 'understanding;' the heart being spoken of as the seat of intellect. God withholds discernment from the leader of a people whom he has appointed to be conquered and to be carried into captivity.

- 5 Oh that ye would altogether hold your peace!—and ^s it should be your wisdom.
 6 Hear now my reasoning,—and hearken to the pleadings of my lips.
 7 'Will ye speak wickedly for God?—and talk deceitfully for him?
 8 Will ye accept his person?¹—will ye contend for God?
 9 Is it good that he should search you out?
 Or as one man mocketh another, do ye so mock him?²
 10 He will surely ^u reprove you,—if ye do secretly accept persons.
 11 ^x Shall not his excellency make you afraid?—and ^y his dread fall upon you?
 12 Your ^z remembrances are like unto ashes,—your bodies ^a to bodies of clay.³
- 13 Hold your peace, let me alone,—that I may speak, and let come on me what will.
 14 Wherefore ^b do I take my flesh in my teeth,⁴—and ^c put my life in mine hand?⁵
 15 ^d Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him:
^e But I will maintain mine own ways before him.⁶
 16 He also shall be ^f my salvation:—for ^g an hypocrite shall not come before him.
 17 Hear diligently my speech,—and my declaration with your ears.
 18 Behold now, I have ordered my cause;—^h I know that I shall be justified.
 19 ⁱ Who is he that will plead with me?
 For now, if I hold my tongue, I shall give up the ghost.⁷
 20 ^k Only do not two *things*⁸ unto me:—then will I not ^l hide myself from thee.
 21 ^m Withdraw thine hand far from me:—and let not thy dread make me afraid.
 22 Then call thou, and I will answer:—or let me speak, and answer thou me.
- 23 How many are mine iniquities and sins?
ⁿ Make me to know my transgression and my sin.
 24 ^o Wherefore hidest thou thy face,—and ^p holdest me for thine enemy?
 25 ^q Wilt thou break a leaf driven to and fro?—and wilt thou pursue the dry stubble?
 26 For thou writest bitter things against me,
 And ^r makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth.
 27 ^s Thou puttest my feet also in the stocks,
 And ^t lookest narrowly unto all my paths;
 Thou settest a print⁹ upon the heels of my feet.
- 28 And he, as a rotten thing, consumeth,¹⁰—^u as a garment that is moth eaten.
- 14 Man that is born of a woman is of ^x few days, and ^y full of trouble.
^z He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down:
 2 ^a He fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not.
 3 And ^b dost thou open thine eyes¹¹ upon such an one,
 And ^c bringest me into judgment with thee?
 4 Who ^d can bring a clean thing out of an unclean?—not one.
 5 ^e Seeing his days are determined,—the number of his months are with thee,
 Thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass;
 6 ^f Turn from him, that he may rest,
 Till he shall accomplish,¹² ^g as an hireling, his day.
- 7 For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, ^h that it will sprout again,
 And that the tender branch thereof will not cease.
 8 Though the root thereof wax old in the earth,
 And the stock thereof die in the ground;
 9 Yet through the scent¹³ of water it will bud,—and bring forth boughs like a plant.

1 That is, 'Will ye be partial?' The principles of truth and justice need never be neglected in vindicating God.

2 Or, 'Will it be good for you if he shall search you out; or, as men are deceived, can you deceive Him?'

3 Rather, 'Your memorable sayings will be like ashes; your bulwarks (i. e. of argument) as bulwarks of clay.'

4 That is, 'incur every danger.' The figure is taken from wild beasts that carry off their prey in their teeth.

5 This phrase, which occurs frequently elsewhere (see Judg. xii. 3; 1 Sam. xix. 5; xxviii. 21; Ps. cxix. 109), means 'incur extreme danger.' Job is willing to risk all consequences to have the cause of his sufferings cleared up.

6 The present Heb. text should be rendered, 'Lo! let him slay me; I have no hope: but I will explain my ways before him:' i. e. I have no hope of prolonged existence; but I desire to vindicate my character before I die. But many read as in the English version.

7 Job had nothing left to sustain him but the consciousness of his integrity; and if he yield that, he must expire. Some render, 'Who is he that can convict me in judgment? for then will I be silent, and expire.'

8 Yet vouchsafe unto me two things—freedom from severe affliction, and such a mild manifestation of the Deity as shall not overwhelm me (ver. 21). 'Then call me to trial, and I will answer,' etc.

9 This probably refers to some ancient custom not now known.

10 Or, 'yet he (i. e. man, see next verse) like rottenness decays:' meaning, how disproportioned the severity to the feebleness of him who is so treated! This thought is continued in the next verse.

11 That is, in order to observe, or watch closely.

12 Rather, 'enjoy;' meaning, Leave him alone that he may be quiet, so as to enjoy his appointed term on earth. The following verses (7—12) adduce a reason for this; man having no future life in this world when he may enjoy it.

13 The plant is represented as inhaling the vital influence from the water.

- 10 But man dieth, and wasteth away;
Yea, man giveth up the ghost, and ⁱ where is he?
- 11 As the waters fail from the sea,¹—and the flood decayeth and drieth up:
12 ^h So man lieth down, and riseth not:
ⁱ Till² the heavens be no more, they shall not ^m awake, Nor be raised out of their sleep.
- 13 Oh that thou wouldest hide me in the grave,³
That thou wouldest keep me secret, ⁿ until thy wrath be past,
That thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and ^o remember me!
- 14 If a man die, ^p shall he live again?
^q All the days of my appointed time ^r will I wait, ^s till my change come.
- 15 'Thou shalt call,⁴ and I will answer thee:
^t Thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands.
- 16 ^x For now thou numberest my steps:—dost thou not watch over my sin?
- 17 ^y My transgression is sealed⁵ up in a bag,—and thou sewest up mine iniquity.
- 18 And⁶ surely the mountain falling cometh to nought,
And the rock is removed out of his place.
- 19 The waters wear the stones:
Thou wastest away the things which grow out of the dust of the earth;⁷
And thou ^z destroyest⁸ the hope of man.
- 20 Thou prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth:
Thou changest his countenance, and sendest him away.
- 21 His sons come to honour, and ^a he knoweth it not;
And they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.
- 22 But his flesh upon him shall have pain,—and his soul within him shall mourn.⁹

The second speech of Eliphaz.

- 15 THEN answered Eliphaz the Temanite, and said,¹⁰
- 2 Should a wise man utter vain knowledge,—^b and fill his belly with the east wind?¹¹
- 3 ^c Should he reason with unprofitable talk?
Or with speeches wherewith he can do no good?
- 4 Yea, thou castest off fear,—and ^d restrainest prayer before God.¹²
- 5 For thy mouth uttereth thine iniquity,—and thou choosest the tongue of the crafty.
- 6 ^e Thine own mouth condemneth thee, and not I:
Yea, thine own lips testify against thee.
- 7 ^f Art thou¹³ the first man that was born?—^g or wast thou made before the hills?
- 8 ^h Hast thou heard the secret¹⁴ of God?—and dost thou restrain wisdom to thyself?
- 9 ⁱ What knowest thou, that we know not?
^j What understandest thou, which is not in us?
- 10 ^k With us are both the grayheaded and very aged men, Much elder¹⁵ than thy father.
- 11 ^l Are the consolations of God small with thee?—is there any secret thing with thee?¹⁶

ⁱ ch. 32. 6, 7.

1 The term 'sea' is applied, in the Hebrew Scriptures, to the Lake of Tiberias, the Dead Sea, and the flooding rivers Nile and Euphrates. This figure is peculiarly applicable in the parched countries of the East.

2 Evidently meaning, they shall never appear again on earth. Some suppose that the form of words indicates a belief in the general resurrection. See ch. xix. 23—27.

3 Heb., 'Sheol.' On comparing this verse with the preceding, it appears that Job did anticipate another and happier world.

4 Rather, 'Do thou call, and I will answer thee: show compassion to the work of thine hands.'

5 See note on ch. ix. 7, and 2 Kings xii. 10. The sense is, that Job's sins were accurately estimated, so that none might be lost.

6 This appears to be another illustration of the truth mentioned in vers. 10, 12, 'that man never returns to the earth.'

7 Or, 'The flood sweepeth over the dust of the earth;' i. e. inundates the land.

8 Rather, 'So thou destroyest.'

9 This may be translated, 'But his flesh suffers for himself, and his soul mourns over himself;' i. e. he notices not the grief or sufferings of others.

10 The second series of the controversy now begins, in which the speakers become more excited and violent, but say little against Job that is new. Eliphaz commences by charging Job's effusions with vanity and impiety (vers. 2—13); he opposes Job's affirmation of his innocence and of the too great severity of his punishment (14—16); and describes, in the sayings of wise men of former times, the overwhelming misery of the wicked (17—35).

11 The east wind is the most tempestuous and sultry wind in Western Asia; and is hence used metaphorically for anything destructive or injurious (Hos. xii. 1).

12 Rather, 'Yea, thou makest void the fear of God, and restrainest devotion before God:' meaning that Job's principles were fatal to holiness and piety; perhaps referring to ch. ix. 22—24; xii. 6.

13 Eliphaz refers to Job's claims of equal wisdom with his friends (ch. xii. 2, 3).

14 Counsel.

15 Job had himself stated (ch. xii. 12), that in length of days was understanding.

16 Rather, 'And words gently spoken towards thee.' The meaning of the whole verse is, 'Do you regard as worthless the Divine consolations and gentle reproofs which I have addressed to you?'

- 12 Why doth thine heart carry thee away?—and what do ^k thy eyes wink ^l at,
 13 That thou turnest thy spirit against God,
^l And lettest such words go out of thy mouth?
- 14 ^m What is man, that he should be clean?
 And he which is born of a woman, that he should be righteous?
- 15 ⁿ Behold, he putteth no trust in his saints;
 Yea, the heavens are not clean in his sight.
- 16 ^o How much more abominable and filthy is man,
^p Which drinketh iniquity like water?
- 17 I will show thee, hear me;—and that which I have seen I will declare;
 18 Which wise men have told ^q from their fathers,—and have not hid it:
 19 Unto whom alone the earth ² was given,—and ^r no stranger passed among them.
 20 The wicked man travaileth with pain all his days,
^s And the number of years is hidden to the oppressor.
- 21 A dreadful sound is in his ears:—^t in prosperity the destroyer shall come upon him.
 22 He believeth not that he shall return out of darkness,
 And he is waited for of the sword.
- 23 He ^u wandereth abroad for bread, saying, Where is it?
 He knoweth that ^v the day of darkness is ready at his hand.
- 24 Trouble and anguish shall make him afraid;
 They shall prevail against him, as a king ready to the battle.
- 25 For ^y he stretcheth out his hand against God,
 And ^z strengtheneth himself against the Almighty.
- 26 He runneth upon him, even on his neck, ³—upon the thick bosses of his bucklers:
 27 ^a Because he covereth his face with his fatness,
 And maketh collops of fat on his flanks. ⁴
- 28 And he dwelleth in desolate cities, ⁵—and in houses which no man inhabiteth,
 Which are ready to become ^b heaps.
- 29 He shall not be rich, ^c neither shall his substance continue,
 Neither shall he prolong the perfection ⁶ thereof upon the earth.
- 30 ^d He shall not depart out of darkness;—the flame shall dry up his branches,
 And ^e by the breath of his mouth ⁷ shall he go away.
- 31 Let not him that is deceived ^f trust in vanity:
^g For vanity shall be his recompence.
- 32 It shall be accomplished ^h before his time, ⁸—and his branch shall not be green.
- 33 He ⁱ shall shake off his unripe grape as the vine,
 And shall cast off his flower as the olive.
- 34 For ^k the congregation ⁹ of hypocrites shall be desolate,
 And fire shall consume the tabernacles of bribery.
- 35 ^l They conceive mischief, and bring forth vanity [or, iniquity],
 And their belly prepareth deceit.

Job's reply.

16 THEN Job answered and said, ¹⁰

- 2 I have heard many such things:—^m miserable comforters are ye all.
 3 Shall vain words have an end?—or what emboldeneth ¹¹ thee that thou answerest?
 4 I also could speak as ye do:—if your soul were in my soul's stead,
 I could heap up words against you,—and ⁿ shake mine head at you.
 5 But I would strengthen you with my mouth,
 And the moving of my lips should assuage your grief.
- 6 Though I speak, my grief is not asswaged:
 And though I forbear, what am I eased?
- 7 But now he hath made me weary:—thou hast made desolate all my company.
 8 And ¹² thou hast filled me with wrinkles, which ^o is a witness against me:

² Rather, 'the land': before they had become intermingled with and corrupted by other nations.

³ Rather, 'with his (i. e. the sinner's) neck, with the thick bosses of his bucklers;' i. e. with his head erect (Psa. lxxv. 5), and confiding in his strength. This is a very significant image of daring impiety.

⁴ Giving himself up to a life of luxury.

⁵ His insatiable ambition causes desolation around him. See Isa. v. 8.

⁶ Or, 'possession.'

⁷ Of God's mouth; i. e. by Divine judgments.

⁸ Or, 'It shall not fill up its time.' Comp. Psa. lv. 23.

⁹ That is, 'the family:' perhaps referring to Job's bereavements and other calamities.

¹⁰ Job finds fault with his friends for distressing rather than comforting him (vers. 1—5); renews his complaint and protestations of uprightness, and his request to argue with God (6—22, xvii. 1—10); and closes by saying that his only hope is in the grave (11—16).

¹¹ Rather, 'irritates.'

¹² Perhaps, 'And my calamity seizes me as a witness.'

- And my leanness rising up in me beareth witness to my face.
- 9 ^p He teareth me in his wrath, who hateth me :¹
^q He gnasheth upon me with his teeth ;
^r Mine enemy sharpeneth his eyes upon me.
- 10 They have ^s gaped upon me with their mouth ;
 They ^t have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully ;
 They have ^u gathered themselves together against me.
- 11 God ^x hath delivered me to the ungodly,
 And turned me over into the hands of the wicked.
- 12 I was at ease, but he hath broken me asunder,
 He hath also taken me by my neck, and ^y shaken me to pieces ;
- 13 And ^z set me up for his mark,—^a his archers compass me round about ;
 He cleaveth my reins asunder, and doth not spare,
 He poureth out my gall² upon the ground.
- 14 He breaketh me with breach upon breach,—he runneth upon me like a giant.
- 15 I have ^b sewed sackcloth upon my skin,—and ^c defiled my horn³ in the dust.
- 16 ^d My face is foul⁴ with weeping,—and ^e on my eyelids is the shadow of death ;
- 17 ^f Not for any injustice in mine hands :—also my prayer is pure.
- 18 O earth, ^g cover not thou my blood,⁵—and ^h let my cry have no place.⁶
- 19 Also now, behold, ⁱ my witness is in heaven,—and my record is on high.
- 20 My friends scorn me :—but mine eye poureth out tears unto God.⁷
- 21 ^k Oh that one might plead⁸ for a man with God,—as a man pleadeth for his neighbour !
- 22 When a few years are come,—then I shall ^l go the way whence I shall not return.
- 17 My breath is corrupt,⁹ my days are extinct,—^m the graves are ready for me.
- 2 ⁿ Are there not ⁿ mockers with me ?
 And doth not mine eye continue in their ^o provocation ?¹⁰
- 3 Lay down now, put me in a surety with thee ;
 Who is he that ^p will strike hands¹¹ with me ?
- 4 For thou hast hid their heart from understanding :
 Therefore shalt thou not exalt them.
- 5 ^q He that speaketh flattery to his friends,¹²
 Even ^r the eyes ^s of his children shall fail.
- 6 He hath made me also ^t a byword of the people ;—and aforetime I was as a tabret.¹³
- 7 ^u Mine eye also is dim by reason of sorrow,—and all my members are ^x as a shadow.
- 8 Upright men shall be astonished at this,¹⁴
 And the innocent shall stir up himself against the hypocrite.¹⁵
- 9 The righteous also ^y shall hold on his way,
 And he that hath ^z clean hands shall be stronger and stronger.¹⁶
- 10 But as for you all, ^a do ye return, and come now :
 For I cannot find one wise man among you.
- 11 ^b My days are past,—^c my purposes are broken off,—even the thoughts of my heart.
- 12 They change the night into day :—the light is short because of darkness.¹⁷
- 13 If I wait, the grave is mine house :—I have ^d made my bed in the darkness.
- 14 I have said to corruption, Thou art my father :
^e To the worm, Thou art my mother, and my sister.
- 15 And where is now my hope ?—as for my hope, who shall see it ?
- 16 They ^f shall go down ^g to the bars of the pit,—when our ^s rest together is in the dust.

1 Rather, 'His anger tears and pursues me.' The cause of his sufferings is here boldly personified as a wild beast. Comp. ver. 12 ; ch. x. 16 ; Isa. xxxviii. 13 ; Lam. iii. 10.

2 Piercing the vitals.

3 See note on 1 Sam. ii. 1.

4 'Scalded' : a striking description of the sufferings of one who is hunted to death.

5 Job, regarding himself as persecuted to death, claims the supposed right of a murdered person, calls on the earth not to conceal the crime (see Gen. iv. 11), and appeals to God as the vindicator of the victim.

6 That is, no place of rest ; let it always be heard.

7 When faith is most severely tried by man's unkindness and the darkness of providence, it will still turn, though with tears, to God.

8 Rather, 'Oh that he would give judgment for man (i. e. for me) with God, and for the son of man with his fellow (i. e. my opponents).'

9 'My spirit (or vital power) is spent.'

10 The connection is, 'My friends scorn me (see ch. xvi. 10), and mock and continually provoke me ; wherefore I pray God to bring me to trial' (ver. 3).

11 As an evidence of suretiship (Prov. vi. 1 ; xvii. 18 ; xxii. 26). This is an address to God : 'Lay down now a pledge : be my surety. My friends are not disposed to do me justice ; for,' etc. (ver. 4).

12 Rather, 'who betrayeth friends to the spoil.'

13 Rather, as Tyndale renders it, 'I am a jesting-stock among them.'

14 At this treatment of an upright man by his friends.

15 Or, 'shall be roused against the wicked.'

16 That is, Yet the righteous shall not be intimidated, but rather strengthened. Job probably includes himself, determining to hold fast his integrity.

17 Or, 'they put night for day ; yea, light is close to darkness ;' i. e. the very day is darkened.

18 That is, my hopes ; those which you would have me cherish as to restoration in this life.

Bildad's second speech.

18 THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,¹

2 How long *will it be ere ye make an end of words?*²

^h Mark, and afterwards we will speak.

3 ⁱ Wherefore are we counted ^h as beasts,—and reputed vile in your sight?

4 ⁱ He teareth himself in his anger:³—shall the earth be forsaken for thee?
And ^m shall the rock be removed out of his place?

5 Yea, ⁿ the light of the wicked shall be put out,
And ^o the spark of his fire shall not shine.

6 The light shall be dark in his tabernacle,
^p And his candle shall be put out with him.⁴

7 ^q The steps of his strength shall be straitened,
And ^r his own counsel shall cast him down.

8 For ^s he is cast into a net by his own feet,—and he walketh upon a snare.

9 The gin shall take him by the heel,—and ^t the robber⁵ shall prevail against him.

10 The snare is laid for him in the ground,—and a trap for him in the way.

11 ^u Terrors shall make him afraid on every side,—and shall drive him to his feet.

12 His strength shall be hungerbitten,—and ^x destruction shall be ready at his side.

13 It shall devour the strength of his skin:⁶

Even the firstborn of death⁷ shall devour his strength.

14 ^y His confidence shall be rooted out of his tabernacle,
And it shall bring him to ^z the king of terrors.

15 ^a It shall dwell in his tabernacle, because it is none of his:⁸
Brimstone⁹ shall be scattered upon his habitation.

16 ^b His roots shall be dried up beneath,—and above shall his branch be cut off.

17 ^c His remembrance shall perish from the earth,
And he shall have no name in the street.

18 He shall be driven from light into darkness,—and ^d chased out of the world.

19 ^e He shall neither have son nor nephew among his people, ^f Nor any remaining in his dwellings.

20 They that come after¹⁰ him shall be astonished at ^g his day,
As they that went before were affrighted.

21 Surely such are the dwellings of the wicked,
And this is the place of him that ^h knoweth not God.

Job's reply.

19 THEN Job answered and said,¹¹

2 How long will ye vex my soul,—and break me in pieces with words?

3 These ⁱ ten times¹² have ye reproached me:

Ye are not ashamed that ye make yourselves ^h strange¹³ to me.

4 And be it indeed that I have erred,—ⁱ mine error remaineth with myself.¹⁴

5 If indeed ye will ^m magnify yourselves against me,
And plead against me my reproach:¹⁵

6 Know now that ⁿ God hath overthrown me,—and hath compassed me with his net.

7 Behold, ^o I cry out of wrong, but I am not heard:
I cry aloud, but there is no judgment.

1 Bildad answers Job with great severity (vers. 2—4), and describes the fate of the wicked man (5—21).

2 Some render this clause, 'How long will ye lay snares for words?' i. e. use sophistical reasonings.

3 Rather, 'O thou that tearest thyself in anger.' Bildad charges Job with wishing that the settled principles of the Divine administration should be made to give way to his anger. But, he says (ver. 5), this shall not be: however the wicked may dislike it, they must suffer.

4 Rather, 'his lamp [suspended] above him shall be put out.'

5 Rather, 'the snare shall lay fast hold on him.' The language of vers. 7—11 is taken from the modes then practised of catching animals; six different words being used to describe various kinds of nets and snares.

6 'The bars of his skin;' i. e. the bones of his body.

7 That is, the most dreadful disease; as the 'first-born of the poor' (Isa. xiv. 30) are the poorest. It was doubtless intended that Job should apply all this to himself; the facts in his case being supposed by his friends to be just such as are here described. It is not surprising, therefore, that he was stung to the quick, as his reply shows.

8 Rather, 'There shall dwell in his tent some of them to whom it is (or, belongs) not;' i. e. strangers shall possess his dwelling (vers. 17, 19).

9 A frequent Scriptural image of desolation, possibly derived from the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. See Gen. xix. 24; Deut. xxix. 23; Psa. xi. 6.

10 This may mean either, his juniors, or men of future ages; 'they that went before,' being his seniors, or contemporaries; or, perhaps, the men of the west, and they of the east.

11 Job again complains of his friends, maintaining that the cause of his affliction must be found in God's sovereignty (vers. 2—6); describes his sufferings, and calls for pity (7—22); and declares his assurance of deliverance, and blessedness with God in a future life (23—29).

12 Many times. See note on Gen. xxxi. 7.

13 Rather, 'that ye oppress me.'

14 The meaning is, It is I who suffer by it; and I should therefore have your sympathy.

15 That is, my sufferings with which ye reproach me.

- 8 ^p He hath fenced up my way that I cannot pass,
And ^q he hath set darkness in my paths.
- 9 ^r He hath stripped me of my glory,—and taken the crown from my head.
- 10 He hath ^s destroyed me on every side, and ^t I am gone :
And ^u mine hope hath he removed like a tree.
- 11 He hath also ^x kindled his wrath against me,
And ^y he counteth me unto him as one of his enemies.

And encamp round about my tabernacle.

And mine acquaintance are verily estranged from me.
- 14 My kinsfolk have failed,—and my familiar friends have forgotten me.

I am an alien in their sight.

- 17 ^c My breath is strange to my wife,
Though I intreated for the children's *sake*³ of mine own body.
- 18 Yea, ^d young children despised me ;—I arose, and they spake⁴ against me
- 19 ^e All my inward⁵ friends abhorred me :
And they whom I loved are turned against me.
- 20 ^f My bone cleaveth to my skin and to my flesh,
And I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.⁶
- 21 ^g Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends ;
^h For the hand of God hath touched me.
- 22 Why do ye ⁱ persecute me as God,—and ^k are not satisfied with my flesh ?
- 23 Oh that my words were now written !—oh that they were printed in a book !
- 24 That they were graven with ^l an iron pen—and lead in the rock for ever !
- 25 For ^m I know that my redeemer liveth,⁷
And that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth :
- 26 And though after my skin worms destroy this body,
Yet ⁿ in my flesh shall I see God :
- 27 Whom I shall see for myself,—and mine eyes shall behold, and not another Though my reins be consumed within me.
- 28 But ye should say, ^o Why persecute we him,
Seeing the root of the matter is found in me ?
- 29 Be ye afraid of the sword :—for wrath bringeth the punishments of the sword, ^p That ye may know there is a judgment.

Zophar's second speech.

20 THEN answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,⁹

2 Therefore do my thoughts cause me to answer,—and for this ^q I make haste.

¹ My numerous calamities attack me like an army, prepare their approaches and surround my tent.

² Rather, 'sojourn,' as guests, or hired servants.

³ Rather, 'And my intreating to the children of my body.' This is to be understood, not literally, but as a pathetic representation of his extraordinary sufferings.

⁴ An extreme indignity in Oriental countries. Comp. ch. xxix. 7—10.

⁵ Heb., 'men of my secret ;' i. e. confidential friends.

⁶ A proverbial expression ; perhaps derived from the prominence of the teeth, and the thinness and bloodlessness of the lips, in extremely emaciated persons.

favour. This suggests an analogy between the present passage and some in the book of Genesis, in which the expectation excited by God's earliest promises of the Great Redeemer (see Gen. iii. 15, and note) is expressed ; though the terms employed are so general that their full meaning is recognised chiefly by the help of later indications, such as that in Heb. xi. 13—16. See Gen. iv. 4 ; xlix. 10, 18, and notes. The infrequency and indistinctness of such references in this book are in harmony with its character and age, and with the distant vision which the early patriarchs had of gospel blessings ; for they 'saw them afar off.' The following is a literal rendering of this important passage : 'For I, I know that my Avenger liveth, and at the last over the dust he shall arise ; and after they have destroyed my skin this [shall be] ; and from my flesh I shall behold God ; whom I, I shall behold for me (i. e. on my side), and my eyes shall see, and not a stranger : my reins in my bosom are consumed'—or (according to common metaphorical usage), 'my thoughts within me are fulfilled.'

⁸ In these words, Job probably refers to the firm conviction expressed in vers. 25—27. 'Since you (seem to) say, How shall we assail him, and what ground of accusation shall we find in him ? be ye afraid,' etc.

⁹ Zophar replies with great heat ; taking no notice of Job's professed confidence in God, but describing the accumulated calamities which will certainly overwhelm the wicked (vers. 2—29).

1 Literally, 'the reproof of my shame;' i. e. 'which would cast shame on me.'

2 Rather, 'the emotion of my mind.'

3 Or, 'exaltation.'

4 Or, 'The poor shall oppress his children.'

5 Rather, 'Though his bones are full of his youthful vigour, yet with him they shall lie in the dust;' i. e. he shall be cut off prematurely. The word here (and in ch. xxxiii. 25; Psa. lxxxix. 45; Isa. liv. 4) rendered 'youth' may, however, be translated 'hidden;' and then it will mean 'secret sins,' as in Psa. xc. 8.

6 Rather, 'let it not go;' i. e. swallow it not. All this is a forcible illustration of the truth that though sin may be pleasant in the commission, it will certainly be bitter in the consequences.

7 There are two kinds of serpents in Arabia, still bearing names similar to the Hebrew words here used, whose bite causes death in a quarter of an hour.

8 That is, possess. So in Psa. xxxiv. 12; Lam. iii. 1.

9 Literally, 'As the wealth of his restitution;' i. e. wealth belonging to others, and soon to be restored.

10 Vers. 20, 21 may be rendered thus: 'Because he knew no quietness in his belly; and in his rapacity nothing escaped: there is nothing remaining for his voracity; therefore his prosperity endureth not.'

11 Or, 'the wretched.' The sufferings which he inflicted upon others shall come upon himself.

12 Rather, 'It shall come to pass that to fill his belly God shall send upon him the fury of his wrath, and shall rain it upon him for his food.'

13 Rather, 'copper,' probably wood strengthened with this metal. The bow was a deadly weapon to the fugitive.

14 'He draweth it (i. e. the arrow, a natural act on the part of a wounded man), and it cometh out of the body.'

15 Literally, 'the glittering thing,' i. e. the arrow.

16 That is, terrors of death.

17 Meaning, perhaps, 'within him;' 'a fire not blown (or self-ignited) shall consume him.' Beside external ills, there shall be inward wretchedness. Many, however, suppose 'the fire' to refer to lightning.

18 Or, 'It (the fire) shall devour him that is left,' etc.

19 The wealth laid up in his house.

Job's reply.

21 BUT Job answered and said,¹

2 Hear diligently my speech,—and let this be your consolations.²

3 Suffer me that I may speak;—and after that I have spoken, ² mock on.

4 As for me, ^a is my complaint to man?

And if it were so, why should not my spirit be troubled?³

5 Mark me, and be astonished,—^b and lay your hand upon your mouth.⁴

6 Even ^c when I remember I am afraid,—and trembling taketh hold on my flesh.

7 ^d Wherefore⁵ do the wicked live,—become old, yea, are ^e mighty in power?

8 Their seed is established in their sight with them,

And their offspring before their eyes.

9 Their houses are safe from fear,—^f neither is the rod of God upon them.

10 Their bull gendereth, and faileth not;—their cow calveth, and ^g casteth not her calf.

11 They send forth their little ones like a flock,—and their children dance.

12 They take the timbrel and harp,—and rejoice at the sound of the organ.⁶

13 They ^h spend their days in wealth,—and in a moment⁷ go down to the grave

14 ⁱ Therefore⁸ they say unto God, Depart from us;

For we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.

15 ^k What is the Almighty, that we should serve him?

And ^l what profit should we have, if we pray unto him?

16 Lo, ^m their good is not in their hand:

ⁿ The counsel of the wicked is far from me.⁹

17 ^o How oft¹⁰ is the candle of the wicked put out?

And how oft cometh their destruction upon them?

18 ^q They are as stubble before the wind,—and as chaff that the storm carrieth away.

19 God layeth up his iniquity ^r for his children:

^s He rewardeth him, and he shall know it.

20 His eyes shall see his destruction,

And ^t he shall drink of the wrath of the Almighty.

21 For what pleasure¹¹ hath he in his house after him,

When ^u the number of his months is cut off in the midst?

22 ^v Shall any teach God knowledge?¹²—seeing ^x he judgeth those that are high.

1 Job, after a short appeal to the feelings of his friends (vers. 2—6), replies again to their main argument; maintaining that the wicked are often eminently prosperous in this world, and that man is incompetent to judge of the dispensations of God from present appearances (7—34).

2 Comfort me, not by speaking, but by listening.

3 This is the reason why his friends should be patient with him; his controversy was not so much with them as with God, and having such an antagonist it was not surprising that his spirit was troubled.

4 In silent amazement at the mysterious visitations which have come upon me, the remembrance of which makes me tremble (ver. 6).

5 Job directly controverts the assertions of his friends, adducing facts which accord with human experience. See ch. xv. 21—24; xviii. 19; xx. 9, 10, 27, 28. The answer to the question here proposed is found in ver. 30.

6 Properly, 'pipe;' all these are instruments of mirthful music.

7 Without lingering disease like Job's.

8 All this they enjoy, and yet they say unto God, etc.

9 Rather (as a reply to his friends), 'Lo! is not their good in their hand?' (i. e. have they not here constant felicity?) but, though this is the case, 'far from me be the counsel of the wicked.'

10 Implying that this seldom happens. Having described the prosperity of the wicked, Job asks how often the ills which his friends had spoken of, and which he enumerates in vers. 16—21, did in fact befall them.

11 Rather, 'What interest?' i. e. If, as you say, the wicked are punished in their children, their punishment is not their own. After death, their connection with their posterity ceases.

12 Job implies that his friends had irreverently attempted to teach God. He then states his own views.

13 The Hebrew word here rendered 'breasts' is not found elsewhere. Some render it 'milk-pails;' others 'cattle-layers;' but probably the meaning is, 'His sinews are full of moisture.'

14 Literally, 'The marrow of his bones is moistened;' i. e. fresh, vigorous. This is opposed to ch. xx. 11.

15 Literally, 'eateth good;' i. e. enjoys it.

16 The meaning is, I know you will persist in your charges against me, and say, Where can the dwellings of prosperous oppressors be found?

17 Both here and in Isa. xiii. 2, the word rendered 'prince,' or 'noble,' is used in a bad sense for tyrant.

18 Or, 'proofs.' You may inquire of travellers, who have had many opportunities of observation, for the proofs of what I say.

- 30 ^d That the wicked is reserved¹ to the day of destruction?
They shall be brought forth to the day of wrath.
- 31 Who shall declare his way ^e to his face?
And who shall repay him what he hath done?
- 32 Yet shall he be brought to the grave,²—and shall remain in the tomb.³
- 33 The clods of the valley shall be ^f sweet unto him,
And ^g every man shall draw after him,—as there are innumerable before him.⁴
- 34 ^h How then comfort ye me in vain, ⁱ Seeing in your answers there remaineth falsehood?

The third speech of Eliphaz.

22 THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,⁵

- 2 ^k Can a man be profitable unto God,
As he that is wise may be profitable unto himself?⁶
- 3 ^l Is it any pleasure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous?
Or is it gain to him, that thou makest thy ways perfect?
- 4 Will he reprove⁷ thee for fear of thee?—^m will he enter with thee into judgment?
- 5 ⁿ Is not thy wickedness great?—and thine iniquities infinite?
- 6 For thou hast ^o taken a pledge from thy brother for nought,
And ^p stripped the naked of their clothing.
- 7 Thou hast not given water to the weary to drink,
And thou ^q hast withholden bread from the hungry.⁸
- 8 But as for the mighty man,⁹ he had the earth;—and the honourable man dwelt in it.
- 9 Thou hast sent widows away empty,
And the arms of ^r the fatherless have been broken.
- 10 Therefore ^s snares are round about thee,—and ^t sudden fear troubleth thee;

1 The argument is, He is not punished here, as you maintain; for (ver. 31) who dares to accuse and resist him now? This passage clearly intimates that Job expected a state of retribution after death.

2 Literally, 'graves;' the family burying-place. The prosperity of the wicked in this world sometimes outlasts his life. He may be brought with funeral honours to the tomb of his fathers, and his monument remain amidst the verdure of the garden (ver. 33). Comp. 1 Kings xvi. 6, 28; 2 Kings xxi. 18; and note on 1 Sam. xxv. 1.

3 Literally, 'and over the tomb shall watch;' i. e. either his memory shall be preserved by a sepulchral monument, or, men shall watch over his tomb. It is opposed to Bildad's assertion in ch. xviii. 17.

4 Some refer these expressions to the long procession of a public funeral preceding and following the corpse. But the meaning probably is, that in this he only resembles his predecessors, and that many are encouraged by his prosperity to follow his example.

5 In the third series of the controversy, which commences here, Job's friends seem to have become greatly exasperated. Eliphaz charges him with specific crimes, on account of which, he says, these calamities have come upon him (vers. 2—11); refers him to signal Divine judgments (12—20); and then exhorts him to repentance, on the advantages of which he expatiates (21—30).

6 Or, 'Nay, surely it is himself that the wise man profits,' not God. Eliphaz with truth asserts, that as God can be neither profited nor injured by men, it cannot be for any such reason that he favours some and afflicts others; but he thence erroneously infers that the cause of the difference in treatment must be found in their difference of character.

7 The word perhaps means 'come to trial.'

8 In the East, this would be felt to be a severe accusation; hospitality being regarded as a duty of the highest importance (Deut. xxvi. 11, etc.).

9 Heb., 'man of arm;' i. e. strength. See ver. 9. Job is here meant; and he is charged with having obtained land unjustly. Such acts of violence are especially condemned in the law of Moses (Exod. xxii. 21; Deut. xxiv. 17, 19; xxvii. 19).

10 Eliphaz now declares what he regards as the source of Job's crimes—the practical atheism of regarding God as a Being too exalted to observe human affairs.

11 Not noticing the earth and its affairs (Ezek. viii. 12).

12 That is, before the time; prematurely. This probably refers to the wicked antediluvians; who held the views now imputed to Job, and perished miserably in the deluge.

13 'A flood was poured upon their foundation;' it washed it away.

14 Or, 'And what does the Almighty to them? He fills their houses,' etc. This seems to be a sarcastic reference to Job's words in ch. xxi. 14—16. Eliphaz adduces the foregoing case to refute Job's assertion that God makes the wicked prosperous in the present life.

15 These were Job's words (ch. xxi. 16), which Eliphaz repeats, apparently as being in his opinion more agreeable to the doctrines maintained by himself.

- 19 ⁱ The righteous see it,¹ and are glad :—and the innocent laugh them to scorn.
 20 Whereas ^h our substance is not cut down,
 But the remnant of them the fire consumeth.²
- 21 ^l Acquaint now thyself with him, and ^m be at peace :
 Thereby good shall come unto thee.
- 22 Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth,
 And ⁿ lay up his words in thine heart.
- 23 ^o If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up,
 Thou shalt³ put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles.
- 24 Then shalt thou ^p lay up gold as dust,
 And the gold of ^q Ophir as the stones of the brooks.
- 25 Yea, ^r the Almighty shall be thy defence,—and thou shalt have plenty of silver.
- 26 For then shalt thou have thy ^s delight in the Almighty,
 And ^t shalt lift up thy face unto God.
- 27 ^u Thou shalt make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee,
 And thou shalt ^v pay thy vows.
- 28 Thou shalt also ^w decree⁴ a thing,—and it shall be established unto thee :
 And ^x the light shall shine upon thy ways.
- 29 ^y When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up ;⁵
 And ^z he shall save the humble person.
- 30 He shall deliver the island⁶ of the innocent :
 And it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands.⁷

Job's reply.

23 THEN Job answered and said,⁸

- 2 Even to-day is my complaint bitter :—my stroke is heavier than my groaning.
- 3 ^c Oh that⁹ I knew where I might find him !—that I might come even to his seat !
- 4 I would order my cause before him,—and fill my mouth with arguments.
- 5 I would know the words which he would answer me,
 And understand what he would say unto me.
- 6 ^d Will he plead against me with his great power ?
 No ; but he would put strength in me.¹⁰
- 7 There¹¹ the righteous might dispute with him ;
 So should I be delivered for ever from my judge.
- 8 ^e Behold, I go forward, but he is not there ;
 And backward, but I cannot perceive him :
- 9 On the left hand, where he doth work,—but I cannot behold him :
 He ^f hideth himself on the right hand,—that I cannot see him :
- 10 But¹² he ^g knoweth the way that I take :
 When ^h he hath tried me, ⁱ I shall come forth as gold.
- 11 ^k My foot hath held his steps,—his way have I kept, and not declined.
- 12 Neither ^j have I gone back from the commandment of his lips ;
^m I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food.¹³
- 13 But he is in one mind, and ⁿ who can turn him ?
 And what ^o his soul desireth, even that he doeth.
- 14 For he performeth the thing that is ^p appointed for me :
 And many such things are with him.¹⁴

1 They see the destruction of the wicked.

2 This is given as the language of the righteous ; and may be better translated, ' Truly our enemies are destroyed, and their residue (i. e. goods) the fire devoureth.' The latter clause refers perhaps to ch. i. 16.

3 Rather, ' If thou put away iniquity from thy tabernacles, and cast to the dust precious ore, and gold of Ophir to the stones of the brooks, then the Almighty shall be thy precious ore, and treasures of silver to thee.' The meaning is, If thou wilt despise and reject riches as thy portion, then thou shalt have all-sufficiency in the Almighty.

4 Or, ' determine.'

5 That is, thou shalt have support or relief.

6 Rather, ' country ;' as in Isa. xx. 6. But it may be rendered, ' He (God) shall save the not innocent (the guilty) ; and he shall be delivered,' etc. : i. e. If thou art right in the sight of God, he will hear thy intercessions in behalf of the unworthy. See ch. xlii. 7, 8 ; Gen. xviii. 26 ; xx. 7.

7 An expression signifying integrity and uprightness.

8 Job repeats his desire to bring his cause before God ; but is in fear and darkness, and knows not where to find him (vers. 2—9) ; reasserts his innocence (10—12) ; yet shrinks from appealing to God, because he mysteriously hides himself and pursues his unalterable plans (13—17). He then replies to Eliphaz, describing the open oppressions of the wicked, and their secret sins ; and asserts that, though destined to future punishment, they are not treated in this life according to their deserts (ch. xxiv).

9 This language (vers. 3—5) describes the feelings of one who, when his character is attacked, conscious of uprightness, appeals to the Divine tribunal, as Job had already done (ch. xiii. 3 ; xvi. 21).

10 Or, ' Will he confound me by his omnipotence ? No, he will give heed to me.' showing clearly that Job still trusted in God.

11 Or, ' then ;' i. e. if I could obtain a hearing.

12 Rather, ' For he knoweth my way. If he tries me,' etc.

13 Rather, ' more than my own purposes.'

14 That is, are decreed by him.

- 15 Therefore am I troubled at his presence :—when I consider, I am afraid of him.
 16 For God ^q maketh my heart soft,¹—and the Almighty troubleth me :
 17 Because I was ^r not cut off before the darkness,
Neither hath he covered the darkness from my face.²
- 24 Why, seeing ^s times are not hidden from the Almighty,
 Do they that know him not see his days?³
 2 ^t Some remove⁴ the 'landmarks;—they ^u violently take away flocks, and feed thereof.
 3 They drive away the ass of the fatherless,—they ^x take the widow's ox for a pledge.
 4 They turn the needy out of the way :
^y The poor of the earth hide themselves together.
 5 Behold, ^z as wild asses in the desert, go they⁵ forth to their work ;
^a Rising betimes for a prey :
 The wilderness yieldeth food for them and for their children.
 6 They reap every one his⁶ corn in the field :
 And they gather the vintage of the wicked.
 7 They ^b cause⁷ the naked to lodge without clothing,
 That they have no covering in the cold.
 8 They are wet with the showers of the mountains,
 And ^c embrace the rock for want of a shelter.
 9 ^d They⁸ pluck the fatherless from the breast,—and take a pledge of the poor.⁹
 10 They cause him to go naked without clothing,
 And ^e they take away the sheaf from the hungry ;
 11 Which make oil within their walls,—and tread their winepresses, and suffer thirst.¹⁰
 12 ^f Men groan from out of the city,—and the soul of the wounded crieth out :
^h Yet God layeth not folly to them.¹¹
- 13 They are of those that ⁱ rebel against the light ;
^k They know not the ways thereof,—nor abide in the paths thereof.
 14 ^l The murderer rising with the light¹²
 Killeth the poor and needy,—and in the night is as a thief.
 15 ^m The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, ⁿ Saying, No eye shall see me :—and disguiseth his face.
 16 In the dark ^o they dig through houses,¹³
Which they had marked for themselves in the daytime :¹⁴—^p they know not the light.
 17 For the morning is to them even as the shadow of death :
 If one know them, they are in ^q the terrors of the shadow of death.¹⁵
- 18 He is swift¹⁶ as the waters ;—their portion is cursed in the earth :
 He beholdeth not the way of the vineyards.
 19 ^r Drought and heat consume the snow waters :
^s So doth the grave those which have sinned.
 20 The womb shall forget him ;—^t the worm shall feed sweetly on him ;
^u He shall be no more remembered ;—and ^x wickedness shall be broken as a tree.
 21 He evil entreateth the barren that beareth not :
 And ^y doeth not good to the widow.

^y ver. 3.

1 That is, faint. See Deut. xx. 3; Isa. vii. 4.

2 Rather, 'And because darkness hath covered my face.' The meaning is, I am not so much terrified by my calamities, dreadful as they are, as by my ignorance of the reasons why God afflicts me.

3 Rather, 'Why are not seasons (i. e. of judgment) appointed by the Almighty, and [why] do not those who know him behold his days?' (i. e. of vengeance). Job rightly regards the delay of the punishment of the wicked as being part of the same mysterious arrangement which delays his own vindication.

4 See note on Deut. xix. 14.

5 Meaning probably the houseless poor, mentioned in ver. 4, who have to seek food like wild animals.

6 The wicked man's. Finding no food in the desert, they are driven to seek it by working for their oppressors.

7 Rather, 'Naked, they lodge by night without clothing.'

8 That is, the wicked. Not less cruelly are those treated who have not fled to the desert.

9 Who can give nothing but what is actually necessary to him. See Exod. xxii. 26, 27. Or, perhaps, the clause may be read as parallel to the former, 'They take [the child] as a pledge from the poor;' intending to enslave it. See Lev. xxv. 39; 2 Kings iv. 1. The hardships of these bond-slaves are depicted in the following verses.

10 Or, 'Hungry they carry the sheaf; within their walls (those of the oppressors) they press out the oil; they tread their winepresses, and suffer thirst.' They furnish in the midst of the abundance of others. See Luke xv. 16.

11 Or, 'From the city the dying groan, and the soul of the wounded cries out; yet God hears not their prayer.'

12 The earliest dawn.

13 Eastern houses are often made of mud or unburned brick; and thieves enter by digging through the walls. See Matt. vi. 19, 20.

14 Rather, 'In the day-time they shut themselves up.'

15 Or, 'For they know the terrors of death-shade' (thick darkness). They love the darkness which favours their crimes, and fear the light as much as others fear darkness.

16 The meaning is, You say that the wicked pass rapidly away, as snow-water is rapidly absorbed.

17 Rather, 'He draweth even the mighty into his power; when he ariseth, there is no security of life.'

- 23 Though ^z it be given him to be in safety, ^a whereon he resteth ;
Yet ^b his eyes are upon their ways. ¹
- 24 ^c They are exalted for a little while, but are gone and brought low ;
They are taken out of the way as all other,—and cut off as the tops of the ears of corn. ²
- 25 And if it be not so now, who will make me a liar,
And make my speech nothing worth ? ³

Bildad's third speech.

- 25 THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said, ⁴
- 2 ^a Dominion and fear are with him,—he maketh peace ⁵ in his high places.
- 3 ^c Is there any number of his armies ?—and upon whom doth not ^f his light arise ?
- 4 ^g How then can man be justified with God ?
Or ^h how can he be clean that is born of a woman ?
- 5 Behold even to the moon, and it shineth not ;
Yea, ⁱ the stars are not pure in his sight.
- 6 ^k How much less man, that is 'a worm' ?—and the son of man, which is a worm ?

Job's reply.

- 26 BUT Job answered and said, ⁶
- 2 How hast thou helped him that is without power ?
How savest thou the arm that hath no strength ?
- 3 How hast thou counselled him that hath no wisdom ?
And how hast thou plentifully declared the thing as it is ?
- 4 To whom ⁷ hast thou uttered words ?—and whose spirit came from thee ?
- 5 Dead things are formed from under the waters,—and the inhabitants thereof. ⁸
- 6 ^m Hell ⁹ is naked before him,—and destruction hath no covering.
- 7 ⁿ He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, ¹⁰
And hangeth the earth upon nothing.
- 8 ^o He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds ;—and the cloud is not rent under them.
- 9 He holdeth back the face ¹¹ of his throne,—and spreadeth his cloud upon it.
- 10 ^p He hath compassed the waters with bounds,
Until the day and night come to an end. ¹²
- 11 ^q The pillars of heaven ¹³ tremble—and are astonished at his reproof.
- 12 ^r He ¹⁴ divideth the sea with his power,
And by his understanding ¹⁵ he smiteth through the proud.
- 13 'By his spirit he hath garnished the heavens ;
His hand hath formed ¹⁶ the crooked serpent.
- 14 Lo, these are parts of his ways : but ¹⁷ how little a portion is heard of him !
But the thunder of his power who can understand ? ¹⁵

Job's final reply continued.

- 27 MOREOVER ¹⁶ Job continued his ¹⁷ parable, and said,
2 ^z As God liveth, ^a who hath taken away my judgment ;

¹ Rather, 'He (God) gives him (i. e. the wicked) security whereon he relies ; and his eyes are upon their ways.' i. e. God guards and defends them.

² Not before their time, but, like other men, in the maturity of old age (Psa. lxxiii. 4) ; without any extraordinary expressions of Divine anger.

³ A challenge to any to prove the contrary.

⁴ This short closing speech of Bildad's expresses good sentiments, but gives no answer to Job's arguments ; nor does it contain any new charge against him except an implied rebuke for having justified himself before God.

⁵ That is, He keeps all in perfect subjection.

⁶ Job briefly replies to Bildad, taunting him with the feebleness of his answer (vers. 2—4) ; and then showing that he is not behind his opponents in appreciating the power of God, whose operations he magnificently describes in the world of departed spirits, as well as on earth and in the material heavens (5—14).

⁷ Rather, 'With whom ;' i. e. by whose assistance.

⁸ Rather, 'The mighty dead tremble beneath,—the waters and their inhabitants.'

⁹ The invisible world. The word rendered 'destruction' is 'Abaddon,' which occurs in Rev. ix. 11. It here means the place of destruction.

¹⁰ Or, 'emptiness.' This language seems to refer to the heavens, not to the earth. The 'north' is mentioned probably because the northern hemisphere of the heavens was that which was visible to Job and his friends.

¹¹ Or, 'hideth the appearance.' See Psa. xviii. 11.

¹² Rather, 'to the confines of light and darkness :'
referring to the horizon.

¹³ The loftiest mountains, which seem to sustain the heavens.

¹⁴ Rather, 'By his power he quieteth the sea, and by his wisdom he smiteth its pride. By his breath the heavens become bright ; his hand pierces the fleeing serpent.' This probably refers to the constellation Draco, supposed by the ancients to occasion storms.

¹⁶ Job apparently paused for Zophar to reply ; but, as none of his friends spoke, he continued his discourse, the scope of which seems to be as follows : He first denies the two charges which had been brought against him—that he was ungodly and unholy (vers. 2—6), and that he maintained the impunity of the wicked (7—23). He then fortifies his position that outward prosperity is no evidence of piety, by showing that man may possess the two great elements of earthly comfort—namely, material wealth and human skill—without being able to discover and obtain true wisdom, which God has declared to be identical with true godliness (ch. xxviii.)

¹⁷ A poetic discourse.

- And the Almighty, who hath ^b vexed my soul;
 3 All the while my breath is in me,—and ^c the spirit of God is in my nostrils;
 4 My lips shall not speak wickedness,—nor my tongue utter deceit.
 5 God forbid that I should justify you:¹
 Till I die ^d I will not remove mine integrity from me.
 6 My righteousness I ^e hold fast, and will not let it go:
^f My heart shall not reproach me so long as I live.
 7 Let mine enemy be as the wicked,
 And he that riseth up against me as the unrighteous.²
 8 ^g For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained,³
 When God taketh away his soul?
 9 ^h Will God hear his cry when trouble cometh upon him?
 10 ⁱ Will he delight himself in the Almighty?—^k will he always call upon God?⁴
 11 I will teach you by the hand of God:⁵
^l That which is with the Almighty will I not conceal.
 12 Behold, all ye yourselves have seen it;—why then are ye thus altogether vain?
 13 ^m This⁶ is the portion of a wicked man with God,
 And the heritage of ⁿ oppressors, which they shall receive of the Almighty.
 14 ^o If his children be multiplied, it is for the sword:
 And his offspring shall not be satisfied with bread.
 15 Those that remain of him shall be buried in death:⁷
 And ^p his widows shall not weep.
 16 Though he heap up silver as the dust,—and prepare raiment as the clay;⁸
 17 He may prepare it, but ^q the just shall put it on,
 And the innocent shall divide the silver.
 18 He buildeth his house as a moth,—and ^r as a booth that the keeper maketh.⁹
 19 The rich man shall lie down, but he shall ^s not be gathered:¹⁰
^t He openeth his eyes, and he is not.¹¹
 20 ^u Terrors take hold on him as waters,—^v a tempest stealeth him away in the night.
 21 ^w The east wind carrieth him away, and he departeth:
 And as a storm hurleth him out of his place.
 22 For God shall cast upon him, ^z and not spare:—he would fain flee out of his hand.
 23 ^a Men shall clap their hands at him,—and shall ^b hiss him out of his place.
 28 Surely there is a vein for the silver,—and a place for gold where they ^c find it.
 Iron is taken out of the earth,—and brass is molten out of the stone.¹²
 3 He setteth an end to darkness,¹³—and searcheth out all perfection:
 The stones of darkness, and the shadow of death.¹⁴
 4 The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant;—even the waters forgotten of the foot:
 They are dried up, they are gone away from men.¹⁵
 5 As for the earth, ^d out of it cometh bread:
 And under it is turned up as it were fire.¹⁶
 6 The stones of it are the place of sapphires:—and it hath dust of gold.
 7 There is a path which no fowl knoweth,¹⁷

 8 The lion's whelps have not trodden it,—nor the fierce lion passed by it.

- 1 That is, 'acknowledge you to be correct.'
 2 'Let my wicked calumniators be treated as they say the wicked are treated.'
 3 Or, 'when God cuts him off, when He taketh,' etc.
 4 That is, 'Will the hypocrite act as I have done? No!'
 5 By appealing to what God has done.
 6 Many supply the word 'saying' after 'vain' (ver. 12); and regard vers. 13—23 as Job's account of the opinions of his opponents: but see note on ver. 1.
 7 This is probably the generic for the specific term 'pestilence': and so in Jer. xv. 2; xliii. 11; Rev. vi. 8; xviii. 8.
 8 That is, in quantity as the clay. Numerous rich dresses form a great part of Oriental wealth.
 9 Frail and temporary, like the dwelling which the moth makes in a garment, or the fruit-watcher in a vineyard (Isa. i. 8).
 10 Or, 'buried.' This refers to the wicked.
 11 He is suddenly cut off.
 12 Rather, 'stone pours out copper;' i. e. from the heated ore melted copper runs forth. In this graphic description of ancient mining, there may have been a reference to the neighbouring mines in Idumæa, in the Sinaitic peninsula, and in Egypt, which appear from existing monuments to have been worked as early as the time of Joseph. From Gen. iv. 22, we learn that even iron, the most difficult to work of all these metals, had been in use before the deluge.

13 Man penetrates into the darkest mines.

14 Rather, 'and thoroughly searches stones (ores) of darkness and the death-shade.'

15 This difficult verse is perhaps best rendered thus: 'They dig a channel from [the place] where they sojourn; forsaken of the feet they are suspended; they are wanderers from men.' If this be correct, it is a forcible description of the perilous and gloomy life of the miner.

16 Man, not content with the produce of the surface, digs into the bowels of the earth, and smelts the ore.

17 Rather, 'the way (i. e. to these subterranean regions) no rapacious bird knoweth,' etc. To obtain these hidden treasures, men penetrate into places which the acute vision of birds of prey has never seen, and which the feet of wild beasts have never trodden (vers. 7, 8).

9 He putteth forth his hand upon the rock ;¹
 He overturneth the mountains by the roots.
 10 He cutteth out rivers² among the rocks ;—and his eye seeth every precious thing.
 11 He bindeth the floods from overflowing ;³
 And the thing that is hid bringeth he forth to light.

12 ^e But where⁴ shall wisdom be found ?—and where is the place of understanding ?
 13 Man knoweth not the f price thereof ;—neither is it found g in the land of the living.
 14 ^h The depth saith, It is not in me :—and the sea saith, It is not with me.
 15 It ⁱ cannot be gotten for gold,⁵—neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof.
 16 It cannot be valued with ^j the gold of Ophir,
 With the precious onyx, or the sapphire.
 17 The gold and the crystal⁶ cannot equal it :
 And the exchange of it shall not be for ^k jewels of fine gold.
 18 No mention shall be made of coral, or of pearls :
 For ^l the price of wisdom is above rubies.
 19 The topaz of Ethiopia shall not equal it,—neither shall it be valued with pure gold.

20 ^m Whence then cometh wisdom ?—and where is the place of understanding ?
 21 Seeing it is hid from the eyes of all living,—and kept close from the ⁿ fowls of the air.
 22 ^o Destruction and death say,—We have heard the fame thereof with our ears.

23 ^p God understandeth⁷ the way thereof,—and he knoweth the place thereof.
 24 For he looketh to the ends of the earth,—and ^q seeth under the whole heaven ;
 25 ^r To make the weight for the winds ;—and ^s he weigheth the waters by measure.⁸
 26 When he ^t made a decree for the rain,—and ^u a way for the lightning of the thunder :
 27 Then did he see it, and declare it ;—he prepared it, yea, and searched it out.⁹
 28 And ^v unto man he said,¹⁰ Behold,
^x The fear of the LORD, that is wisdom ;—and ^y to depart from evil is understanding.

Job's final reply concluded.

29 MOREOVER Job continued his parable, and said,¹¹

2 Oh that I were ^z as in months past,—as in the days when God preserved me ;
 3 ^a When his candle¹² shined upon my head,
 And when ^b by his light I walked through darkness ;
 4 As I was in the days of my youth,¹³
 When ^c the secret¹⁴ of God was upon my tabernacle ;
 5 ^d When the Almighty was yet with me,—when ^e my children were about me ;
 6 When ^f I washed my steps with butter,
 And ^g the rock poured me out rivers of oil !¹⁵
 7 When I went out to ^h the gate through the city,
 When I prepared my seat¹⁶ in the street :
 8 The young men saw me, and hid themselves :—and the aged arose, and stood up.
 9 The princes refrained talking,—and ⁱ laid their hand on their mouth.
 10 The nobles held their peace,—and their ^k tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth.
 11 When the ear heard me, then ^l it blessed me ;
 And when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me :
 12 Because ^m I delivered the poor that cried,
 And ⁿ the fatherless, and him that had none to help him.

1 Or, 'flint;' perhaps quartz, a very hard rock, in which gold is commonly found.

2 Either channels to take off the water, or galleries to reach the precious ores.

3 He keeps the water from oozing into the mine.

4 The earth's riches, and man's labour and skill, great as they are, cannot produce true wisdom, which must be sought from God's teaching.

5 Literally, 'treasured,' i. e. precious gold.

6 This probably means glass, of which the ancients had some very costly kinds. Glass-blowing is distinctly represented in the paintings of Beni-Hassan, which are supposed to have been executed about the time of Joseph.

7 Therefore he alone can reveal this to man.

8 He has adjusted even the most unstable things with admirable skill.

9 'He has made it (wisdom) thoroughly clear;' i. e. has explained it to man, who otherwise would never have known it.

10 This is the great result of the whole, and the uniform tenor of the Divine communications to mankind.

11 Job appears to have again looked for a reply to his argument; and, receiving none, he proceeds to utter his feelings in a discourse full of beautiful images: pathetically contrasting his former prosperity, in wealth, rank, beneficence, authority, and influence (ch. xxix.), with his present state of misery, arising both from the insults and ill-treatment of the most abject of men (xxx. 1—15), and from his bodily sufferings (16—31); and then earnestly protesting his entire innocence of the sins laid to his charge, particularly licentiousness (xxxi. 1—12), injustice (13—23), avarice, idolatry, etc. (24—40).

12 'Lamp;' a beautiful image of the Divine favour.

13 Rather, 'ripeness;' i. e. prosperity.

14 'When I enjoyed God's friendship.' See ch. xix. 19.

15 Rather, 'curdled milk.' These are ordinary images of abundance.

16 The place where he sat as an elder or chief. Vers. 7—10 indicate the courtesy of Oriental manners.

- 13 ° The blessing of him that was ^p ready to perish came upon me :
And I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy.
- 14 ° I put on righteousness, and it clothed me :
My judgment was as a robe and a diadem.
- 15 I was ^r eyes to the blind,—and feet was I to the lame.
- 16 I was a father to the poor:—and ^s the cause which I knew not I searched out.¹
- 17 And I brake ^t the jaws of the wicked,—^u and plucked the spoil out of his teeth.
- 18 Then I said, ^v I shall die in my nest,²—and I shall multiply my days ^y as the sand.
- 19 ^z My root was spread out ^a by the waters,
And the dew lay all night upon my branch.
- 20 My glory was fresh in me,—and ^b my bow was renewed in my hand.
- 21 ^c Unto me men gave ear, and waited,—and kept silence at my counsel.
- 22 After my words they spake not again;—and ^d my speech dropped upon them.
- 23 And they waited for me ^e as for the rain;
And they opened their mouth wide as for ^f the latter rain.
- 24 If I laughed on them, they believed it not;³
And the light of my countenance they cast not down.
- 25 I chose out their way, and sat chief,—and dwelt as a king in the army,
As one that comforteth the mourners.
- 30 But now they that are ^g younger than I have me in derision, Whose fathers⁴ I would have disdained to have set with the dogs of my flock.
- 2 Yea, whereto might the strength of their hands profit me,
In whom old age was perished?
- 3 For want and famine they were solitary;
Fleeing into the wilderness in former time desolate and waste.⁵
- 4 Who cut up mallows⁶ by the bushes,—and ^h juniper roots for their meat.
- 5 They were driven forth⁷ from among men,—(they cried after them as after a thief;)
- 6 To dwell in the cliffs of the valleys,—in caves of the earth, and in the rocks.
- 7 Among the bushes they brayed;—under the nettles⁸ they were gathered together.
- 8 They were children of fools,—yea, children of base men :
They were viler than the earth.⁹
- 9 ⁱ And now am I their song,—yea, I am their byword.
- 10 They ^j abhor me, ^k they flee far from me,—and spare not ^l to spit in my face.¹⁰
- 11 Because he ^m hath loosed my cord, and afflicted me.¹¹
They have also let loose the bridle before me.
- 12 Upon my right hand ⁿ rise the youth;¹²—they push away my feet,
And ^o they raise up against me the ways of their destruction.
- 13 They mar my path,—^p they set forward my calamity,—they have no helper.¹³
- 14 They came upon me ^q as a wide breaking in¹⁴ of waters :
In the desolation they rolled themselves upon me.
- 15 ^r Terrors are turned upon me :—they pursue my soul¹⁵ as the wind :
And my welfare passeth away as a cloud.
- 16 ^s And now my soul is poured out upon me ;
The days of affliction have taken hold upon me.
- 17 ^t My bones are pierced in me ^u in the night season :—and my sinews¹⁶ take no rest.
- 18 ^v By the great force of my disease is my garment changed :
It bindeth me about as the collar of my coat.¹⁷

1 Rather, 'the cause of him who was unknown to me I searched out.'

2 A 'nest' is an image of quietness and comfort.

3 Rather, 'I smiled on them [who] had not confidence;' i. e. I cheered the dejected, and was not infected with their despondency.

4 If the fathers were worthless, much more the sons. The Orientals regard dogs as impure and vile; so that no language could express greater contempt than this. The following description somewhat resembles that in ch. xxiv. 4—8, and it seems to apply to the Herite aborigines of Seir, who had been subdued by invaders. See Gen. xiv. 6; Deut. ii. 12.

12 Rather, 'brood;' i. e. a worthless rabble.

13 A proverbial designation of the lowest people. That they were able to do this greatly aggravated Job's grief.

14 Rather, 'Like a wide breach they come.' The reference is to the irruption of enemies through a breach in a wall.

16 Rather, 'my gnawers;' i. e. my gnawing pains.

Some regard vers. 16, 17 as a question, to which ver. 18 is the answer. But it is more natural to suppose that Job's earnestness led him to interpose a parenthetical assertion (ver. 18) before he had finished his sentence.¹⁵ That is, 'from my earliest years.'

The speech of Elihu.

- 2 THEN was kindled the wrath of Elihu the son of Barachel ^q the Buzite,¹³ of the kindred of Ram : against Job was his wrath kindled, because he justified himself rather than God. Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled,¹⁴ because they had found no answer, and yet ^r had condemned Job. Now Elihu had waited till Job had spoken, because they were elder than he. When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.
 6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said,

1 'When I knew that my intimacy with the judges would secure for me impunity.'

2 Rather, 'Let my shoulder fall,' etc.

3 Rather, 'I could not do it.' He was deterred from crime by the fear of God.

4 An ancient mode of expressing veneration. Comp. 1 Kings xix. 18; Psa. ii. 12; Hos. xiii. 2. The worship of the heavenly bodies was one of the earliest forms of idolatry. See refs.

5 The sentiment of this verse is in beautiful accordance with the injunctions of the New Testament.

6 Rather, 'Who can show [a person who] is not satisfied with his food ?'

7 This may be rendered as a continuation of the preceding, 'because I feared,' etc.; or, 'then let me be confounded at the great multitude,' etc.

8 The terms of this verse are all judicial, and are best rendered thus : 'Oh that he would give me a hearing ! Lo ! this is my defence ; let the Almighty reply to me, and let my opponent write an accusation.'

9 As a badge of honour. See Isa. ix. 6; xxii. 22.

10 That is, 'boldly;' 'freely.' This shows a confidence in God's justice and a consciousness of his own rectitude; the latter being carried perhaps somewhat too far.

11 Having been wrested from its owners (ver. 39).

12 Or, 'thorns.' 'Cockle' should rather be 'night-shade.'
 13 Buz is mentioned in Jer. xxv. 23, with Tema and Dedan, as a part of Arabia. Some refer the name to a son of Nahor (see Gen. xxii. 21); which would agree with the opinion that Job lived not long after the time of Abraham. Elihu is not mentioned as having been present during the previous discussion; but it is very probable that he, as well as others, had been attracted by the controversy going on between Job and his friends.

14 Elihu was dissatisfied with the state in which the previous debates had left the argument; neither party having set God's providence in the right light. After rendering due respect to the claims of seniority, he gives his reasons for speaking, promising to be impartial (ch. xxxii.) He then addresses Job; blames him for his strong assertions of his own innocence and his complaints against God; and lays down as his first proposition the important principle, that suffering is disciplinary and corrective (ch. xxxiii.)

- I am* young, and ye are very old;
 'Wherefore I was afraid,—and durst not show you mine opinion.
 7 I said, "Days should speak,—and multitude of years should teach wisdom.
 8 But there is a spirit in man:
 And the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.
 9 *Great*¹ men are not always wise:²—neither do the aged understand judgment.
 10 Therefore I said, Harken to me;—I also will show mine opinion.
 11 Behold, I waited for your words;
 I gave ear to your reasons,—whilst ye searched out what to say.
 12 Yea, I attended unto you,—and, behold, there was none of you that convinced Job,
 Or that answered his words:
 13 Lest ye should say,³ We have found out wisdom.
 God thrusteth him down, not man.⁴
 14 Now he hath not directed his words against me:⁵
 Neither will I answer him with your speeches.
 15 They were amazed, they answered no more:—they left off speaking.
 16 When I had waited, (for they spake not,—but stood still, and answered no more;)
 17 I said, I will answer also my part,—I also will show mine opinion.
 18 For I am full of matter [or, words],—a the spirit within me constraineth me.
 19 Behold, my belly is as wine which hath no vent;
 It is ready to burst like b new bottles.⁶
 20 I will speak, that I may be refreshed:—I will open my lips and answer.
 21 Let me not, I pray you, c accept any man's person,
 Neither let me give flattering titles unto man.
 22 For d I know not to give flattering titles;
 In so doing my Maker would soon take me away.
 33 Wherefore, Job, I pray thee, hear my speeches,—and hearken to all my words.
 2 Behold, now I have opened my mouth,—my tongue hath spoken in my mouth.
 3 e My words shall be of the uprightness of my heart:
 And f my lips shall utter knowledge clearly.
 4 g The Spirit of God hath made me,
 And the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.
 5 If thou canst answer me,—set thy words in order before me, stand up.
 6 h Behold, I am according to thy wish in God's stead:⁷
i I also am formed out of the clay.
 7 k Behold, my terror shall not make thee afraid,
 Neither shall l my hand be heavy upon thee.
 8 Surely thou hast spoken in mine hearing,
 And I have heard the voice of thy words,⁸ saying,
 9 m I am clean without transgression, I am innocent;
 Neither is there iniquity in me.
 10 Behold, n he⁹ findeth occasions against me,—o he counteth me for his enemy.
 11 p He putteth my feet in the stocks,—q he marketh all my paths.
 12 Behold, in this thou art not just:
 I will answer thee, that r God is greater than man.¹⁰
 13 Why dost thou s strive against him?
 For t he giveth not account of any of his matters.
 14 "For God speaketh once, yea twice,¹¹—yet man x perceiveth it not.
 15 y In a dream,¹² in a vision of the night,
 When deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed;
 16 z Then he openeth the ears of men,—and a sealeth¹² their instruction,

See Matt. ix. 17.⁷ Rather, 'I am as thy mouth (i. e. as thyself) to God:' i. e. in his sight we are equal.⁸ Compare the words of Job, ch. x. 7; xiii. 15, 18;

⁹ Comp. ch. xiii. 24, 27; xix. 11; xxx. 21.¹⁰ Rather, 'Lo! I answer thee; thou art not just in this, for God is greater than man.' Whilst God's authority is supreme, his wisdom and love exceed our conception, and therefore we should always acquiesce in his doings.¹¹ Though God gives no reasons for his conduct (ver. 13), yet its practical designs are evident. He communicates with man individually in two ways—by suggestive dreams (vers. 15—18), and by afflictions (vers. 19—22).¹² He impresses instruction on their hearts. Several examples of Divine truth communicated supernaturally during sleep are recorded in Scripture.

- 17 That he may ^b withdraw man from his purpose,—^c and hide pride from man.
 18 He ^d keepeth back his soul from the pit,¹—and his life from perishing by the sword.
 19 He is ^e chastened also with pain upon his bed,
 And the multitude of his bones with strong pain :
 20 ^f So that his life abhorreth bread,—and his soul dainty meat.
 21 ^g His flesh is consumed away, that it cannot be seen ;
 And ^h his bones that were not seen stick out.
 22 Yea, ⁱ his soul draweth near unto the grave,—and his life to the destroyers.
 23 If there be ^j a messenger² with him,—an interpreter, one ^k among a thousand,
 To show unto man ^l his uprightness :
 24 Then ^m he is gracious unto him, and saith,
 " Deliver him from going down to the pit :—ⁿ I have found a ransom. ³
 25 His flesh shall be fresher than a child's :
^o He shall return to the days of his youth :
 26 ^p He shall pray unto God, and he will be favourable unto him :
^q And he shall see his face with joy :
 For ^r he will render unto man his righteousness.
 27 ^s He looketh upon men, and if any ^t say,
 I have sinned, and perverted that which was right,—and it ^u profited me not ;
 28 He will ^v deliver his soul from going into the pit,—and his life shall see the light. ⁴
 29 Lo, ^w all these things—worketh God oftentimes with man,
 30 ^x To bring back his soul from the pit,
^y To be enlightened with the light of the living.
 31 Mark well, O Job, hearken unto me :—hold thy peace, and I will speak.
 32 If thou hast anything to say, answer me :—speak, for I desire to justify thee.
 33 If not, ^z hearken unto me :—hold thy peace, and I shall teach thee wisdom.

Speech of Elihu continued.

- 34 FURTHERMORE Elihu answered and said, ⁵
 2 Hear my words, O ye wise men ;—and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge.
 3 ^a For the ear trieth words,—as the mouth [or, palate] tasteth meat.
 4 Let us choose to us judgment :—let us know among ourselves what is good.
 5 For Job hath said, ^b ' I am righteous :—and ^c God hath taken away my judgment.
 6 ^d Should I lie against my right?—my wound is incurable without transgression. ⁶
 7 What man is like Job,—^e who drinketh up scorning like water? ⁷
 8 Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity,
 And walketh with wicked men. ⁸
 9 For ^f he hath said, It profiteth a man nothing
 That he should delight himself with God.
 10 Therefore hearken unto me, ye men of understanding :
^g Far be it from God, that he should do wickedness ;
 And from the Almighty, that he should commit iniquity.
 11 ^h For the work of a man shall he render unto him, ⁱ And cause every man to find according to his ways.
 12 Yea, ^j surely God will not do wickedly,
 Neither will the Almighty ^k pervert judgment.
 13 ^l Who hath given him a charge over the earth?
 Or who hath disposed the whole world?
 14 If he ^m set his heart upon man,⁹—if he ⁿ gather unto himself his spirit and his breath ;

¹ Or, 'That he may keep him back from the grave ;' and so in vers. 24, 30, etc.

² Some refer this to Christ, others to an angel ; but it is probably indefinite, applying to any faithful messenger whom God sends to explain to the afflicted his righteous dealings and merciful designs. When such a message is received with submission and penitence, the chastening has answered its end, and will be withdrawn.

³ It is clear, from ch. i. 5, xlii. 8, that Job and his friends well knew that an atonement was necessary to make repentance or intercession acceptable to God.

⁴ Or, 'He hath delivered my soul from the pit ; and my life hath seen the light.' This is a continuation of the language of the penitent. After the confession of sin (ver. 27) comes praise to God (ver. 28).

⁵ Receiving no reply, Elihu commences his second speech by addressing Job's friends (vers. 2—4) ; then states the views of the sufferer (5—9) ; which he refutes by showing that God cannot govern unjustly, since, being under subjection to no one, he is absolute Sovereign (10—30) ; and concludes by appealing to Job (31—37). The main object of this speech is to show that God does make a difference between the righteous and the wicked.

⁶ Rather, 'As respects my right, I should lie ; my arrow is fatal without fault.' These are quoted as the words of Job.

⁷ That is, he is full of irreverent language.

⁸ He takes their part ; by his sentiments referred to in ver. 9. Comp. ch. ix. 22 ; xxi. 7, etc. ; xxiv. 1, etc.

⁹ This may be rendered, 'If he set his heart upon himself (i. e. care only for himself), and gather to himself his spirit and his breath (i. e. cease to sustain the life of his creatures), all flesh,' etc. God, as the absolute Sovereign, is under no obligation to maintain his creatures ; and were he to cease to do so, they would perish.

35 ELIHU spake moreover, and said,¹⁶

- 2 Thinkest thou this to be right, that thou saidst,
My righteousness is more than God's?¹⁷
- 3 For ^h thou saidst, What advantage will it be unto thee?¹⁸

1 The same argument is continued. It is contrary to our ideas that the Supreme Ruler should be unjust; and to our observation also, for he rebukes unjust rulers.

2 Or, 'Who (i. e. God) saith to a king, Wicked man! Ungodly! to princes. Who accepteth not,' etc. There is no reason why God, who is infinitely above both, should regard the rich more than the poor.

3 That is, ungodly princes and rich men.

4 That is, suddenly, and without any perceptible human instrumentality.

5 Or, 'For he will not repeatedly fix [his attention] on man, to bring him before God in judgment.' The meaning is, that God has no need of tedious investigation to detect sin.

6 Or, 'without searching out;' because he knows already. See ver. 23.

7 Rather, 'because.'

8 This should probably be rendered, 'because they are wicked.'

9 Or, 'who then can condemn?'

10 Rather, 'nor ensnare the people.'

11 This is the application of the preceding argument.

12 Rather, 'Shall God recompense according to thy opinion? for thou rejectest [the opinions of others]; therefore thou shalt choose, and not I; and what thou knowest speak:' i. e. It is your part, not mine, to explain the matter otherwise, since you accuse God of injustice.

13 Better, 'Men of understanding will say to me,—even a wise man who has heard me; Job hath spoken,' etc.

14 Or, 'among wicked men.' See note on ver. 8.

15 A mark of contempt and derision (ch. xxvii. 23).

16 In this third speech of Elihu, he first states Job's supposed opinions (vers. 2—4); and then replies to them, asserting that men, by their sins or by their uprightness, do not injure or profit God, but themselves; and therefore God has no interest in being partial (vers. 5—8); and that, though many cry out and are not heard, it is because they find fault with God, instead of seeking his help (9—16).

17 This should perhaps be rendered, 'My righteousness is before God;' i. e. I am upright in his sight. Elihu regarded this as the effect of many of Job's statements.

18 Or, 'For thou saidst, What advantage will it (i. e. uprightness) be to thee (i. e. Job); what profit shall I have [by it] more than by my sin?'

- And*, What profit shall I have, if I be cleansed from my sin?
 4 I will answer thee,—and 'thy companions with thee.
- 5 ^m Look unto the heavens, and see;
 And behold ⁿ the clouds which are higher than thou.
 6 If thou sinnest, what doest thou ^o against him?
 Or if thy transgressions be multiplied, what doest thou unto him?
 7 ^p If thou be righteous, what givest thou him?
 Or what receiveth he of thine hand?
 8 ^q Thy wickedness may hurt a man as thou art;
 And ^r thy righteousness may profit the son of man.
- 9 ^s By reason of the multitude of oppressions they make the oppressed to cry :¹
 They cry out by reason of the arm of the mighty.
 10 But none saith, 'Where is God my Maker,—^u who giveth songs in the night;²
 11 Who ^x teacheth us more than the beasts of the earth,
 And maketh us wiser than the fowls of heaven?
 12 ^y There they cry, but none giveth answer,—because of the pride of evil men.
- 13 ^z Surely God will not hear vanity,—neither will the Almighty ^a regard it.
 14 ^b Although³ thou sayest thou shalt not see him;
 Yet ^c judgment is before him;—therefore ^d trust thou in him.
 15 But now, ^e because it is not so, he hath ^f visited in his anger;
 Yet he knoweth it not ^g in great extremity :
 16 ^h Therefore doth Job open his mouth in vain;
 He multiplieth words without knowledge.

Speech of Elihu concluded.

- 36 ELIHU also proceeded, and said,⁴
- 2 Suffer me a little, and I will show thee
 That I have yet to speak 'on God's behalf.
 3 I will fetch my knowledge from afar,—and will ^k ascribe righteousness to my Maker.
 4 For truly ^l my words shall not be false :
 He that is ^m perfect⁵ in knowledge is with thee.
- 5 Behold, God is mighty, and ⁿ despiseth not any :
^o He is mighty in strength and wisdom.⁶
 6 He ^p preserveth not the life of the wicked :—but ^q giveth right to the poor.
 7 ^r He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous :
 But ^s ^t with kings are they on the throne;
 Yea, 'he doth establish them for ever, and they are exalted.
 8 And ^u if they be bound in fetters,—and be holden in ^x cords of affliction;
 9 Then ^y he showeth them their work,
 And their ^z transgressions that they have exceeded.⁸
 10 ^a He openeth also their ear to discipline,
 And ^b commandeth that they return from iniquity.
 11 If they obey and serve him,
 They shall ^c spend their days in prosperity,—and their years in pleasures.
 12 ^d But if they obey not, they shall perish by the sword,
 And they shall ^e die without knowledge.
 13 But ^f ^g the hypocrites in heart ^h heap up wrath :
ⁱ They cry not when he bindeth them.
 14 ^j They die in youth,—and their life is among the unclean.

² As 'night' is a frequent emblem of calamity, to 'give songs in the night' means to give consolation in adversity. See Acts xvi. 25.

³ Vers. 14—16 may be rendered thus: 'How much less if thou sayest thou dost not regard him; the cause is before him, and thou shouldest wait for him. But now, as there is no infliction of his anger, and he takes not cognizance of [Job's] great arrogance, therefore Job opens his mouth rashly; without knowledge he multiplies words.'

⁴ To show how far God is above our comprehension, Elihu proceeds to take an extensive range, embracing God's providential dealings, especially in the protection and deliverance of the poor and afflicted (vers. 5—15). After applying this to Job (16—21), he celebrates the power, wisdom, supremacy, justice, and eternity of God (22—26). He then refers to various remarkable displays of Divine power and majesty in the natural world; particularly in the formation of rain from vapours (27, 28), the functions of the clouds, thunder and lightning (vers. 29—33; ch. xxxvii. 1—5), snow and ice (6—10), and other mysterious processes of nature (11—22). And he concludes by asserting that God's moral attributes are perfect, though we may be unable to understand his more mysterious dispensations (23, 24).

⁵ That is, correct. Elihu means himself.

⁶ Rather, 'in strength of heart' or 'mind.'

⁷ Rather, 'And he [placeth them] with kings,' etc.: figuratively expressing the honours and rewards of righteousness.

⁸ Or, 'in which they have strengthened themselves.'

⁹ Rather, 'And the polluted in heart,' etc.

- 15 ^k He delivereth the poor in his affliction,—and ^l openeth their ears in oppression.
 16 Even so ¹ would he have removed thee out of the strait
^m Into a broad place, where there is no straitness;
 And ⁿ that which should be set on thy table should be full of ^o fatness.
 17 But ^p thou hast fulfilled the judgment of the wicked:
 Judgment and justice take hold on thee.
 18 Because there is wrath, beware lest he take thee away with his stroke:
 Then ^q a great ransom cannot deliver thee.²
 19 ^r Will he esteem thy riches?—no, not gold, ^s nor all the forces of strength.³
 20 ^t Desire not the night,—when people are ^u cut off in their place.⁴
 21 Take heed, ^x regard not iniquity:—for ^y this hast thou chosen rather than affliction.
 22 Behold, ^z God exalteth⁵ by his power:—^a who teacheth like him?
 23 ^b Who hath enjoined him his way?—or ^c who can say, Thou hast wrought iniquity?
 24 Remember that thou ^d magnify his work,—which men behold.⁶
 25 Every man may see it;—man may behold it afar off.
 26 Behold, ^e God is great, and we ^f know him not,
^g Neither can the number of his years be searched out.
 27 For he ^h maketh small⁷ the drops of water:

 29 Also ^k can any understand the spreadings of the clouds,

 30 Behold, he ^m spreadeth his light upon it,⁹—and ⁿ covereth the bottom of the sea.¹⁰
 31 For ^o by them¹¹ judgeth he the people;—he ^p giveth meat in abundance.
 32 ^q With clouds he covereth the light;
 And commandeth it not to shine by the cloud that cometh betwixt.¹²
 33 ^r The noise thereof sheweth concerning it,—^s the cattle also concerning the vapour.¹³
 37 At this also my heart trembleth,—and is moved out of his place.
 2 Hear attentively ^t the noise of his voice,

 3 ^u He directeth it under the whole heaven,

¹ If thou wouldest obey and submit. See vers. 11, 15.

² The general meaning of this difficult passage (vers. 17, 18) probably is, 'Thou hast taken the part of the wicked, with which God has connected punishment. When his anger is inflicted upon them, take care lest thou be cut off with the same stroke; for then there will be no redemption.'

³ This expression probably denotes all that gives power.

⁴ Or, 'Long not for the night to come up; [the night of] the nations below,' i. e. the dead. See John ix. 4.

⁵ Rather, 'is exalted.'

⁶ The Heb. perhaps means 'sing;' i. e. praise.

⁷ Rather, 'draws up,' by evaporation.

⁸ That is, thunder; the clouds being regarded as God's tent. See Psa. xviii. 11.

⁹ Or, 'upon (i. e. around) himself;' alluding to lightning.

¹⁰ That is, with water. His agency is seen in every part of creation.

¹¹ That is, by the rain, tempest, etc., he dispenses both punishment and blessing.

¹³ Some translate this verse thus: 'The noise makes known concerning it, the cattle also [announce] its coming up.' These are perhaps indications of the approaching tempest, whose effects are further described with inimitable beauty in the following verses, and from the midst of which God speaks.

¹⁴ That is, after the lightning.

¹⁵ This may mean either the lightnings, or, more probably, the thunderings; peal follows peal.

¹⁶ The rains in hot countries are sometimes excessively heavy—far exceeding anything that is known in our climate.

¹⁷ That is, he restrains. Very inclement weather stops the labours of the field, and keeps the beasts in their dens (vers. 7, 8).

¹⁸ Literally, 'from the chamber;' see ch. ix. 9. The whirlwind of the south is the hot Samiel. See Isa. xxi. 1.

¹⁹ Literally, according to most critics, 'scatterers,' or north winds; so called because they scatter the clouds. But some translate the word 'lodgings;' which is sustained by the parallelism.

²⁰ Rather, 'Also with moisture he loadeth the cloud; he scattereth the cloud of his light' (i. e. the thunder-cloud). Thus rain falls.

- That they¹ may 'do whatsoever he commandeth them
Upon the face of the world in the earth.
- 13 ^m He causeth it to come, whether for correction,—or ⁿ for his land, or ^o for mercy.
- 14 Hearken unto this, O Job :
^p Stand still, and ^q consider the wondrous works of God.
- 15 Dost thou know when² God disposed them,
And caused the light of his cloud to shine ?
- 16 ^r Dost thou know the balancings of the clouds,³
The wondrous works of ^s him which is perfect in knowledge ?
- 17 How thy garments are warm,—^t when he quieteth⁴ the earth by the south wind ?
- 18 Hast thou with him ^u spread out the sky,
Which is strong, and as a molten looking glass ?⁵
- 19 Teach us what we shall say unto him ;
*For we cannot order our speech by reason of darkness.*⁶
- 20 ^v Shall it be told him that I speak ?
If a man speak, surely he shall be swallowed up.⁷
- 21 And now men ^y see not the bright light which is in the clouds :
But the wind passeth, and cleanseth them.
- 22 ^z Fair weather cometh out of the north :—^a with God is terrible majesty.⁸
- 23 Touching the Almighty, ^b we cannot find him out :
^c He is excellent in power, and ^d in judgment,
And in plenty of justice : ^e he will not afflict.⁹
- 24 Men do therefore ^f fear him :—he respecteth not any that are ^g wise of heart.¹⁰
- Jehovah's address to Job.*
- 38 THEN the LORD answered¹¹ Job ^h out of the whirlwind, and said,
- 2 ⁱ Who is this¹² that darkeneth counsel—by ^k words without knowledge ?
- 3 ^l Gird up now thy loins like a man ;¹³
For I will demand of thee, and answer thou me.
- 4 ^m Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth ?
Declare, if thou hast understanding.
- 5 ⁿ Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest ?
Or who hath stretched the line upon it ?
- 6 Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened ?¹⁴
Or who laid the corner stone thereof ;
- 7 When the morning stars¹⁵ sang together,—and all ^o the sons of God shouted for joy ?
- 8 ^p Or who shut up the sea with doors,
When it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb ?
- 9 When I made the cloud the garment thereof,
And ^q thick darkness a swaddlingband for it,
- 10 And ^r brake up for it my decreed place,¹⁶—and set bars and doors.
- 11 And said, ^s Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further :
And here shall thy proud waves ^t be stayed ?

1 Rather, 'According as they [i. e. men] do whatsoever,' etc.

2 Rather, 'how?' by what means?

3 How are they suspended in the air?

4 Referring to the sultry stillness of summer heat, and its unpleasant effects upon the body.

5 Or, 'mirror,' made of molten and polished metal. The sky is often represented in ancient poetry as a vast solid concave mirror.

6 Only he who can explain the works of God may contend with him: we must be silent.

7 Or, 'Or shall a man say that he is destroyed?' How can any one dare to complain of him?

8 Rather, 'And now they see not the light shining among the clouds; but the wind passeth, and cleareth it (the sky). From the north cometh gold (a golden splendour); with God is terrible glory.'

9 Or, 'oppress;' i. e. he will not deal unjustly.

10 'Therefore men should fear him; for he will not regard any that are wise' [in their own opinion]. If men hope for God to regard them favourably, they must reverence him, and not indulge self-conceit.

11 At length, God himself interposes to put an end to the protracted controversy; but it is remarkable that, in this sublime discourse, he gives no explanation of the difficulties which had so much embarrassed Job and his friends. He does not vindicate his proceedings, or state why the wicked often prosper and the righteous suffer; nor does he refer to the retributions of a future world. The great truth held up to view is, that there ought to be entire confidence in a Being whose works prove him to be infinitely great and wise. Various Divine operations in nature are introduced, relating to the earth and the ocean (ch. xxxviii. 4—18), the heavens (19—38), and the animal creation (39—41; xxxix. 1—30); and, as man is unable to give an explanation of these, it is declared to be awfully presumptuous to arraign God's moral government, and to complain of his secret counsels and purposes.

12 Probably referring to Job. See ver. 1.

13 That is, 'Prepare for thy greatest effort.'

14 Or, 'sunk.' The earth is poetically represented, in vers. 5, 6, as a building.

15 This word may be taken literally, as in Psa. cxlviii. 3; or figuratively, as in Isa. xiv. 12; and may refer to angels, and to the acclamations with which the foundation or completion of great edifices were celebrated. See Ezra iii. 10; Zech. iv. 7.

16 Rather, 'when I apportioned to it my limit.'

- 13 That it might ^xtake hold of the ends of the earth,
That ^ythe wicked might be shaken out of it?²
- 14 It is turned as clay to the seal;³—and they stand as a garment.⁴
- 15 And from the wicked their ^zlight⁵ is withholden,
And ^athe high arm shall be broken.
- 16 Hast thou ^bentered into the springs of the sea?
Or hast thou walked in the search of the depth?⁶
- 17 Have ^cthe gates of death been opened unto thee?

The light, spreading to the ends of the earth, disperses the wicked (ch. xxiv. 13—17).³ Rather, 'It (the earth) turns itself as clay to the seal.' The objects upon the earth, before enveloped in darkness, at the return of light are rendered visible and prominent, like the impression formed by a seal.⁴ As if the earth were clothed in a beautiful robe.⁵ The night being the daytime of the wicked (i. e. their time for action), the light is to them as darkness. Comp. ch. xxiv. 13—17.⁶ Rather, 'into the depths of the ocean.'⁷ Or, 'Where is the way to the abode of light?'⁸ When all these things were arranged.⁹ A season of judgment, when God inflicts great calamities upon a nation or community.¹⁰ Rather, 'In what way is light distributed, and how does the east wind spread itself over the earth?'¹¹ Or, 'torrents of rain.'¹² Consequently, without man's agency.¹³ That is, 'Is it of human origin?'¹⁴ Or, 'bands;' referring to the cluster of the Pleiades, consisting of seven stars.¹⁵ See note on ch. ix. 9. The constellations Pleiades and Orion are mentioned here perhaps because of their connection with the seasons; the former appearing in spring, and the latter in winter.¹⁶ See note on 2 Kings xxiii. 5.¹⁷ See note on ch. ix. 9. It is to be remembered that, if modern discoveries seem to explain some of these things, they only advance our knowledge a few steps further, and then we are met by questions as difficult to us as these were to Job.¹⁸ Referring to the influence of the heavenly bodies upon the seasons, etc.¹⁹ Some render this, 'Who hath put wisdom in the dark clouds? or who hath given to meteors intelligence?' But it is better to retain the old rendering; taking it to mean, 'Who hath made thee wise enough to do these things?' implying the answer, 'No one.'

1 Or, 'pour out.' The Arabs still compare heavy clouds to water-skins.

2 Rather, 'is poured into mire;' the effect of rain.

3 There is here a transition from the inorganic to the organic creation—the region of life, instinct, and appetite, in which creatures are governed by other laws than those of matter. These nobler productions of Almighty power and wisdom are so depicted as to deepen our impressions of the littleness of man, in comparison with Him who made and sustains them all.

4 As the mere knowledge of these habits and properties of animals is easily acquired, 'knowing' seems to be used here, as elsewhere, in the sense of watching over and providing for them; and to 'number the months,' means to appoint the number. These animals are independent of man's care and control.

5 The mountain goat of the deserts of Idumea is extremely shy.

6 Rather, 'grow fat.'

7 Rather, 'they grow up in the open country.'

8 The wild ass was found anciently in Palestine, Syria, Arabia, and the neighbouring countries; but is now almost entirely confined to Tartary, parts of Persia and India, and Africa. It is exceedingly shy, vigilant, and fleet.

9 See note on Numb. xxiii. 22.

10 Rather, 'The wing of the ostriches exults! Is it the pinion and plumage of the stork?' The ostrich is contrasted with the stork, as being unable to fly, though remarkable for speed. Perhaps a further contrast is intended between the stork's care of her young, for which she is proverbial, and that neglect of them, suitable to a wandering desert life, which is attributed to the ostrich in the next verse.

11 The ostrich forms a nest in the sand of the desert, the heat of which supplies the want of continuous incubation.

12 Rather, 'without solicitude.' She has none of a mother's usual care for her young.

13 The folly of the ostrich is proverbial in the East. The instincts of some animals bear a nearer resemblance to human reason than those of others; yet every one of them has just those which best suit its nature and purposes.

14 The ostrich is so swift that it is scarcely possible to capture it by direct pursuit.

15 Rather, 'rage.' This highly poetical description of the war-horse (vers. 19—25) well accords with the accounts given by eyewitnesses of their fierce cries and bristled necks, when rushing to the attack.

16 Or, 'make him leap as a locust.' Comp. Joel ii. 4.

17 Or, 'The strength of his snorting is terrible.'

- 22 ^a He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted ;
Neither turneth he back from the sword.

The thunder of the captains, and the shouting.
26 Doth ^p the hawk fly by thy wisdom,—and stretch her wings towards the south?⁴

1 Rather, 'javelin.' Some suppose these to be the arms of his rider ; but ver. 22 suggests rather his disdain of the enemy's arms.

2 'Nor pauses through fear when the trumpet sounds.'

3 He neighs exultingly.

4 Referring to the migratory habits of the bird.

5 Rather, 'Will he who censured the Almighty contend? Will he who reproved God reply to this?' i. e. to the interrogations of the foregoing chapters. Job had complained of God's dispensations, as if he meant to contend with him (ch. xxiii. 3—7 ; xxxi. 35—37).

6 Job replies to the demand of God by a penitential confession (vers. 3—5) ; after which God again addresses him, rebuking him (7, 8) ; and continuing the argument in proof of his own majesty and power as displayed in executing his judgments (9—14), and in the formation of the behemoth (15—24) and leviathan (ch. xli.)

7 That is, 'repeatedly.' Comp. ch. xxxiii. 14, 29. This confession of Job shows that a right view of the glorious perfections and wonderful works of God is fitted to produce a deep sense of our own sinfulness. See Isa. vi. 5.

8 Perhaps alluding to imprisonment, or to the covering of the faces of criminals. See note on Esther vii. 8.

9 This is generally thought to be the hippopotamus ; the word 'behemoth' being derived from an Egyptian word meaning water-ox : but some eminent critics and naturalists remark that the description does not altogether suit any one animal at present known ; and they suppose it to be a poetical representation of the larger pachydermatous animals, the elephant and hippopotamus being specially kept in view.

10 That is, 'equally with thee.'

11 Probably alluding to the elevation and rigidity of the tail when the animal is enraged.

12 Rather, 'the sinews of his thighs are firmly twisted.'

13 Or, 'tubes.'

14 That is, chief in size and strength. So the word is used in Numb. xxiv. 20 ; Amos vi. 1, 6.

15 Rather, 'He that made him has furnished him with a sword ;' i. e. with means of attack and defence.

16 These animals not being carnivorous (see ver. 15), are not dreaded by others.

The Jordan is the nearest considerable river to Idumæa, and is therefore poetically used to give force to the description.³ Rather, 'Will any one, in his eyes (i. e. when he is on his guard), take him? When taken in snares, can any one pierce his nose?' i. e. insert a cord or ring to tame or lead him (Isa. xxxvii. 29).⁴ Most probably the crocodile, or the great saurian reptiles in general.⁵ Rather, 'a rope of rushes.'⁶ Literally, 'Canaanites' (as in Isa. xxiii. 8; Prov. xxxi. 24), who were the great merchants of ancient times. This verse may be rendered, 'Do the companions (fishers in company) dig [pitfalls] for him?' Or, 'Do the companions (company of merchants) make merchandize of him?' The latter agrees best with the next clause.⁷ Or, 'Thou wilt not do it again.'⁸ That is, who attempts to attack him.⁹ The meaning of this interrogation is, 'If one of God's creatures is so formidable, how can man contend with Him?'

¹⁰ Or, 'anticipated me.'¹¹ Or, 'Who will uncover the surface of his clothing [of scales]? Within the doubling of his bridle [i. e. his rows of teeth] who will enter?'¹² Or, 'his strong pieces of shields.'¹³ This highly figurative language (vers. 18—21) describes the terrible respiration of the animal rising out of the water.¹⁴ As his eyes are the first part that appears above the water, they are used in Egyptian hieroglyphics to represent the dawn of day.¹⁵ Rather, 'Strength dwells in his neck, and sorrow (fear) dances before him.'¹⁶ Heb., 'hanging,' or soft parts, such as dewlaps. Where other animals have these his flesh is firmly compacted.¹⁷ The nether or lower millstone was of harder material than the upper.¹⁸ Rather, 'By terror they are bewildered.'¹⁹ That is, can effect nothing.²⁰ Rather, 'Clubs.'

42 THEN Job answered³ the LORD, and said,

- 2 I know that thou ^h canst do every thing,
 And that ⁱ no thought can be withholden from thee.
 3 ^h Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge ?⁴
 Therefore have I uttered that I understood not ;

 4 Hear, I beseech thee, and I will speak :

 5 I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear :—but now mine eye seeth thee.⁵
 6 Wherefore I ⁿ abhor myself,—and repent ^o in dust and ashes.

The conclusion of the history.

- 7 AND it was so, that after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite, ^p My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends : for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath.⁶ Therefore take unto you now ^q seven bullocks and seven rams, and ^r go to my servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt offering ; and my servant Job shall ^s pray for you :⁷ for him will I accept : lest I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.
 9 So Eliphaz the Temanite and Bildad the Shuhite and Zophar the Naamathite went, and did according as the LORD commanded them. The LORD also accepted Job.
 10 ^t And the LORD turned the captivity⁸ of Job, when he prayed for his friends :
 11 also the LORD gave Job ^u twice as much as he had before. Then came there unto him ^v all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house : and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the LORD had brought upon him :
^y every man also gave him a piece of money,⁹ and every one an earring¹⁰ of gold.
 12 So the LORD blessed ^z the latter end of Job more than his beginning : for he had ^a fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she asses. ^b He had also seven sons and three daughters.
 14 And he called the name of the first, Jemima ;¹¹ and the name of the second, Kezia ;¹²
 15 and the name of the third, Keren-happuch.¹³ And in all the land were no women found so fair as the daughters of Job : and their father ^c gave them inheritance¹⁴ among their brethren.
 16 After this ^d lived Job an hundred and forty years, and saw his sons, and his 17 ^e sons' sons, even four generations. So Job died, being old and ^f full of days.

3 This closing chapter contains Job's confession (2—6) ; the Divine decision against his friends, and Job's intercession for them (7—9) ; and his own restored prosperity (10—16).

4 This is quoted from the words of God in ch. xxxviii. 2 (as ver. 4 is from ch. xxxviii. 3 ; xl. 7) ; Job thus acknowledging the truth of the charges. The language of contrite confession in reply contrasts beautifully with the authoritative tone of the quotations themselves, and as strikingly with the presumptuous manner in which Job had formerly spoken of God.

5 A figure derived from the superior clearness and accuracy of the knowledge obtained by sight. The more we know of God, the more shall we see and feel our own sinfulness.

6 Job had indeed expressed himself with unbecoming impatience, and even with irreverence, respecting God and his government, in the agony of mental and bodily suffering, and when provoked by the severe and unjust accusations of his friends ; but his views on the main points were correct, and his confidence in God, though sorely shaken, never entirely failed. His friends, on the contrary, had maintained very erroneous views of Divine Providence in opposition to fact and reason, and had allowed their wrong notions to overpower every consideration of kindness and gentleness towards a suffering friend.

7 This is a beautiful instance of the duty and acceptableness of intercession for others. It also illustrates the nature of patriarchal worship ; and shows that in the earliest ages sacrifice was known to be essential to the acceptableness of prayer. See note on ch. xxxiii. 24. After the charges they had brought against Job, it was an appropriate humiliation to them to be indebted to his prayers.

8 He restored Job to his former prosperity.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

THIS book is entitled, in the Hebrew, 'The Book of Praises;' because many of these beautiful compositions are songs of praise, intended to be used in Divine worship. They derive from the Greek translation the name of 'Psalms,' being so denominated on account of their adaptation to instrumental music, to which many of the superscriptions refer.

They are commonly called 'The Psalms of David,' because he was the largest and most eminent contributor to the collection. It is probable that he also brought together all such as were extant in his time, and formed them into a book for use in public worship. This volume, and a similar one compiled by Asaph, appear to be referred to in the time of Hezekiah (2 Chron. xxix. 30). But many of the Psalms were written after these dates; and fresh collections were added to those already made, down to the period when the Old Testament canon of Scripture was completed. They thus formed five books, each concluding with a doxology, and comprising respectively, Psa. i.—xli., xlii.—lxxii., lxxiii.—lxxxix., xc.—cvi., cvii.—cl; but they were formed into one volume, and are referred to as such in the New Testament (Luke xx. 42; Acts i. 20). The authorship of these sacred poems will be noticed, so far as information is possessed, in the remarks on particular Psalms.

Most of the Psalms have titles prefixed to them, concerning the import of which expositors are by no means agreed. These inscriptions are undoubtedly very ancient; for they existed at the time when the Septuagint version was made; but they are not to be regarded as of equal authority with the text. Some of them are evidently not correct; but others are confirmed by internal evidence. In some instances they specify either the author, the subject, or the occasion of the Psalm; in others they appear to refer to the style of poetry or of music, or to the class of singers to whom they were allotted in the temple service. All knowledge of the temple music having been lost, it is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to explain all the terms employed in these inscriptions. Our translators have generally retained the Hebrew words. Explanations of them will be given in the notes, so far as the means exist of doing so.

The contents of the Psalms are very various. Some of them are utterances of praise and adoration, setting forth the majesty, power, wisdom, goodness, and faithfulness of God. Others are songs of thanksgiving for Divine favours. Many are prayers for pardoning mercy or sanctifying grace, or for deliverance from danger or affliction; while in others intercession is made for the church and for the world. Others are didactic; describing the excellency of God's law, the characters of good and bad men, and the results of their respective courses, both here and hereafter. Not a few are occupied with religious experience; recording the trials and vicissitudes of the spiritual life, with its hopes and fears, its conflicts and victories; sometimes penitential and mournful, at others triumphant and joyous; and frequently passing quickly from sorrowful prayer to grateful praise. Some of the Psalms are historical, preserving the remembrance of the most important events which befel the Jewish nation: and, as these events foreshadowed God's dealings with his church in subsequent ages, these historical Psalms have often a predictive bearing. Lastly, some are more directly and entirely prophetical, containing many illustrious predictions concerning our Lord Jesus Christ, and gospel times and blessings. These are among the earliest intimations of the exalted nature and dignity of the promised Messiah. The promise which had been made to Abraham (Gen. xxii. 18) spoke rather of the magnitude of the benefit than of the personal and official glory of the Benefactor. But the Psalms make known the King set upon the holy hill of Zion—the promulgation of his law—the vain opposition of earthly potentates—his sceptre of righteousness—his everlasting priesthood—his Divine Sonship—his exalted nature—his death, and early resurrection—and his ultimately universal reign. (See especially Psa. ii., xlv., lxxii., cx.) The form in which these great promises were delivered, and the place which they held in both public and private worship, were eminently adapted to secure their remembrance, and to make them useful in the maintenance of faith and piety.

We derive from the Psalms much light as to the religious views and hopes of good men under the ancient dispensation. If we would know what insight they had into the signification of the Levitical institutions, the way of acceptance with God, and the good things prepared for his people, we cannot ascertain it better than from the expressions they used when pouring out their hearts to God in prayer and thanksgiving, and when meditating upon his works and ways. We see from what evils and dangers they asked for deliverance, for what special benefits they gave thanks, what particular blessings they most earnestly sought, and what pleas they urged in support of their petitions. And we may learn much from observing their eminently devotional spirit and habits, notwithstanding the comparative darkness of the dispensation under which they lived. We see how closely many of them walked with God; how they acknowledged him in all their ways, and delighted in his service. We meet with many indications of filial confidence and love, and holy joy in God; great steadfastness of faith in the midst of trials; and many expressions of tender and holy feeling. And the contemplation of all these may well stir us up to strive to excel their attainments in proportion to the superior light and privileges with which we are favoured.

The Psalms are for all time, and their use can never be outgrown while the world lasts; for whilst they abound in allusions to the affairs and circumstances of the former dispensation, in which they originated, they are yet so accordant with the ways of God as exhibited in the gospel, and with the spirit of the later and more glorious economy, that they are most loved, and used with greatest profit, by those who are most established in grace. To us, as to the ancient church, the Psalms are of unspeakable value as a guide and directory to communion with God; affording us divinely-approved examples of acceptable prayer and praise, and utterances of holy thought and feeling suitable to all the diversified circumstances of the Christian life. They have gladdened the hearts, elevated the hopes, and strengthened the faith of unnumbered thousands, of every age, clime, and colour; and will continue to maintain their hold on the sanctified affections of believers till time shall be no more.

The Psalms are more frequently cited in the New Testament than any other book; being quoted or referred to by our Lord and his apostles more than fifty times: and in the early ages of the Christian church they were held in such estimation that the whole book was frequently learned by heart. The Psalms have been well called, by an eminent expositor, 'an epitome of the Bible, adapted to the purposes of devotion.' In the language of this Divine book, the prayers and praises of the people of God have been offered up to the throne of grace from age to age. Even He who had the Spirit 'not by measure,' in whom were 'hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge,' and who 'spake as never man spake,' found here his solace in his greatest agony, and at last breathed out his soul in the Psalmist's words.

PSALM I.

- 1 ¹ BLESSED ^a is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, Nor standeth in ^b the way of sinners,—^c nor sitteth in the seat of the ^d scornful.²
- 2 But ^e his delight is in the law³ of the LORD;
^f And in his law doth he meditate day and night.
- 3 And he shall be like a tree ^g planted by the rivers of water,
That ^h bringeth forth his fruit in his season;
His leaf also ⁱ shall not wither;—and whatsoever he doeth shall ^k prosper.
- 4 The ungodly are not so:—but are ^l like the chaff⁴ which the wind driveth away.
- 5 Therefore the ungodly shall ^m not stand in the judgment,⁵ ⁿ Nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous.⁶
- 6 For ^o the LORD knoweth⁷ the way⁸ of the righteous:
But ^p the way of the ungodly shall perish.

- 3 ^u Let us break their bands asunder,—and cast away their cords from us.
- 4 ^v He that sitteth in the heavens ^w shall laugh:¹³

- 5 Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath,—and vex them in his sore displeasure.
- 6 ^x Yet have I set [anointed] my king—^a upon my holy hill of Zion.¹⁴
- 7 I will declare the decree:—the LORD hath said unto me, ^b Thou art my Son;—^c this day have I begotten¹⁵ thee.
- 8 ^d Ask of me—and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance,
And the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

1 Psalm i. was placed at the beginning as an introduction to the whole collection, probably on account of its general character. It exhibits the connection between piety and blessedness;—describing the characteristics of the godly man, both what he is not (ver. 1), and what he is (ver. 2); and his blessedness, both directly (ver. 3), and in contrast (vers. 4—6).

2 The terms here employed seem to denote a progression in wickedness;—first occasional conformity to the practices of sinners, then constant association with them, and, at last, haughty and presumptuous profanity.

3 The 'law' frequently means the whole revealed will of God. Habitual delight in the study and practice of this is an evidence of real piety.

4 Intrinsically worthless, and liable to easy and complete destruction.

5 That is, at the bar of God. 'Stand' is a forensic term, denoting to stand acquitted.

6 They shall not continue intermingled with the righteous, as at present. Whatever apparent confusion may now exist, the time is coming when an entire separation shall be made between the righteous and the wicked.

7 To 'know' sometimes in Scripture signifies to regard with interest, approbation, or affection. See Matt. vii. 23.

8 That is, his course of conduct.

9 Psalm ii. is a sublime vision, representing, 1. The nations in tumultuous revolt against the kingdom which Jehovah was establishing in the world (vers. 1—3). 2. Jehovah securely despising and severely threatening the rebels, and repeating his determination to sustain the Anointed King (4—6). 3. The Sovereign proclaiming his rights and power (7—9); upon which the psalmist exhorts all rulers to submit, pronouncing wrath on the disobedient, and a benediction on all who confide in the King (10—12). Few expressions in this Psalm can be applied to David without the greatest license of explanation; whilst all of them are true, without hyperbole, of Christ, to whom the psalm is expressly referred in Acts iv. 25; xiii. 33; Heb. i. 5; v. 5; Rev. ii. 27. The first of these passages clearly shows David to be its author.

10 Or, 'the nations;' and in the next clause the word is also in the plural, 'peoples;' meaning large communities, or masses of mankind.

11 In Acts iv. 25—27, this is applied to the combination of Herod and Pilate—Jews and Gentiles—against Jesus Christ; but the terms are general, and may be applied to every combination against Christ and his religion. It need not be supposed that the rebellion is always avowedly against the Lord. Many of the worst efforts against the kingdom of God have been professedly for it.

12 Or, 'his Messiah;' which is a modified form of the Hebrew word here used, and corresponds to the Greek word 'Christ.' On official anointing, see note on Exod. xxx. 25. The name 'Messiah' was in use among the Jews, long before the incarnation of our Lord (see Dan. ix. 26), as a common designation of the expected Deliverer, to whom it was appropriated by this passage.

13 This highly figurative language must not be taken to represent the Most High as exulting over the crimes or miseries of mortals; but as a vivid expression of the perfect tranquillity with which Jehovah regards all the opposition of his enemies, however formidable it may appear to us. It suggests, too, the cheerful confidence with which the Christian should await the developments of God's providence respecting his church.

14 As the conquest of Zion, and the establishment of David's government there, were the first acts of his sovereignty over Israel, they afford a natural representation of the establishment of Messiah's kingdom; which, however, is to extend over the whole earth (ver. 8).

15 That is, I have announced thee as my only-begotten Son. (A similar mode of expression occurs in Jer. i. 10.) Hence the apostle Paul (Acts xiii. 33; Rom. i. 4) applies these words to the resurrection of Christ; that being the time when his humiliation was terminated, and he was 'declared to be the Son of God with power.'

16 As the occasion of this royal proclamation was a rebellion, the Messiah here speaks of his power to punish rather than of his power to save; in accordance with the uniform doctrine of the New Testament, that those who reject the Divine Saviour will incur a sentence of aggravated condemnation. See refs.

1 That is, ‘Do him homage; own him as your Sovereign :’ a kiss being an ancient mode of expressing homage or veneration. See 1 Sam. x. 1; 1 Kings xix. 18; Job xxxi. 27; Hos. xiii. 2.

2 Rather, ‘in the way;’ the way of error which ye have chosen.

3 Or, ‘For his wrath will within a little (i. e. shortly) be kindled.’

4 This clause exhibits the power of Messiah to make all his faithful subjects happy. To propose any mere earthly sovereign as the object of trust would be inconsistent with the whole tenor of Scripture. See Ps. cxlvi. 3; Jer. xvii. 5, 6.

5 The contents of psalm iii. correspond with the statement in the superscription as to its occasion. This and the two following psalms were probably written as evening and morning hymns, with reference to the first night of David’s flight from Absalom (2 Sam. xvi., xvii.), when his life seemed to hang by a hair; for, had not God heard his prayer and defeated Ahithophel’s counsel, he could hardly have escaped. These three psalms show the tranquillizing power of true religion in seasons of overwhelming calamity.

6 The rebellion of Absalom was a punishment for David’s sin; and the success of the insurrection at first might seem to show that God had withdrawn his protection.

7 ‘Selah’ is in all probability a musical term, meaning pause. But, as the pauses in music generally agreed with the pauses in sense, it often assists in ascertaining the right division of a psalm.

8 Or, ‘around me;’ a protection on every side.

9 This, in David’s days, was Mount Zion, the place of the ark (see 2 Sam. vi. 12), where God visibly dwelt among his people.

10 The psalmist’s enemies are represented as wild beasts eager to devour him, whose power of injuring he expected God would take away.

11 That is, ‘stringed instruments :’ see Hab. iii. 19.

13 That is, ‘Vindicator of my righteous cause.’

14 This probably refers to David’s royal dignity, which God had given him, and from which his enemies were seeking to displace him.

15 Or, ‘falschood;’ referring probably to the deceitful policy of Absalom and his abettors. See 2 Sam. xv. 4, 8.

16 One who lives under the influence of Divine love. The psalmist describes himself; feeling himself to be the subject, he believes himself to be also the object of the love of God.

17 The rendering of the Sept. is, ‘Be ye angry, and sin not;’ and is quoted by the apostle Paul in Eph. iv. 26. It may have been addressed either to David’s comrades, exhorting them to keep their just indignation within bounds; or to his enemies, altogether condemning their rage.

18 That is, ‘during the silence of the night;’ a season well adapted for calm reflection.

Their inward part is very wickedness;
^sTheir throat is an open sepulchre;⁸—^tthey flatter with their tongue.
- 10 Destroy⁹ thou them, O God; ^ulet them fall by their own counsels;
Cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions;
For ^vthey have rebelled against thee.
- 11 But ^wlet all those that put their trust in thee ^xrejoice:
Let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them:
Let them also ^ythat love thy name be joyful in thee.
- 12 For thou, LORD, ^bwilt bless the righteous;
With favour wilt thou ^ccompass him as with a ^dshield.

PSALM VI.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth ^eupon Sheminith¹⁰ [or, upon the eighth^f], A Psalm of David.¹¹

- 1 O ^gLORD, rebuke me not in thine anger,
Neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.
- 2 ^hHave mercy upon me, O LORD; ⁱfor I am weak:
O LORD, ^kheal me; for ^lmy bones are vexed.¹²
- 3 ^mMy soul is also sore vexed:—but thou, O LORD, ⁿhow long? ¹³
- 4 ^oReturn, O LORD, ^pdeliver my soul:—oh save me ^qfor thy mercies' sake!

sciousness of the Divine favour. This prayer perhaps refers to the form of benediction in Numb. vi. 24—26.

¹ Corn, wine, and oil, being the principal products of Canaan, are often used to represent all earthly good. See Deut. xxxiii. 28; Hos. ii. 8.

² Some render this, 'Thou, Lord, makest me to dwell alone in safety;' supposing the words to allude to Numb. xxiii. 9 (on which see note); Deut. xxxiii. 28. But the common rendering agrees better with the context, and with the use of the word in Deut. xxxii. 12.

³ The word 'Nehiloth' is probably derived from a root signifying to perforate, denoting some kind of pipes.

⁴ See note on title to Ps. iii.; and compare ver. 10 with 2 Sam. xv. 31. Some, however, consider Psalm v. to refer to the persecution by Saul.

⁵ Holy desires are known to God, even when not expressed in words (Rom. viii. 26, 27).

⁶ Rather, 'look out;' as a watchman expecting deliverance. True faith is not content with the mere act of supplication, but waits, with earnest expectation, for an answer. See Mic. vii. 7; Hab. ii. 1; where the same word occurs.

⁷ See note on 1 Sam. i: 9. The psalmist confidently anticipates the blessing which he asks, and engages gratefully to acknowledge it.

⁸ The meaning seems to be, they are waiting to devour me, like a sepulchre opened to receive its victim.

⁹ These maledictions were not expressions of a malignant spirit; but they proceeded from a righteous indignation against flagrant sin, and a deep sympathy with the cause of justice. If the various passages in which such imprecations occur be examined, proofs will be found in almost all of them that the psalmist regarded these evil-doers rather as enemies to God and his people than as personal enemies to himself. This is particularly obvious in this verse.

¹⁰ The term 'Sheminith' means eighth, and may denote an instrument with eight strings; or, which is more likely, music played with the lower notes. See notes on 1 Chron. xv. 20, 21, where 'Alamoth' and 'Sheminith' clearly signify different parts of music; the former answering probably to our treble, and the latter to the bass, or, perhaps, an octave below the treble.

¹¹ Psalm vi. is commonly reckoned as one of the penitential psalms of David, of which, according to the Jews, there are seven. If so, the occasion of its composition was probably the same as that of Ps. li. It was evidently written under the pressure of mental anguish, arising from a consciousness of the Divine displeasure, combined perhaps with bodily disease.

¹² Or, 'violently agitated.' The 'bones' are mentioned as the strength and framework of the body. The suffering was so intense as to affect the whole frame.

¹³ That is, 'How long wilt thou delay to help!' The incomplete sentence expresses strong emotion.

PSALM VII.

^f Shiggaion⁵ of David, which he sang unto the LORD, ^g concerning the words [or, business] of Cush⁶ the Benjamite.

- 1 O LORD my God, ^h in thee do I put my trust :
ⁱ Save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me :
 2 ^h Lest he tear my soul like a lion,
ⁱ Rending it in pieces, while there is none to deliver.
 3 O LORD my God, ^m if I have done this ;⁷—if there be ⁿ iniquity in my hands ;
 4 If I have rewarded evil unto him that was at peace with me ;
 Yea, ^o I have delivered⁸ him that ^p without cause is mine enemy :
 5 Let the enemy persecute my soul, and take it ;
 Yea, let him tread down my life upon the earth,
 And ^q lay mine honour⁹ in the dust. Selah.
 6 ^r Arise, O LORD, in thine anger,
^s Lift up thyself because of the rage of mine enemies :
 And ^t awake for me to ^u the judgment that thou hast commanded.
 7 ^z So shall the congregation of the people compass thee about :
 For their sakes therefore return thou on high.¹⁰
 8 The LORD shall ^v judge the people :
 Judge me, O LORD, ^z according to my righteousness,¹¹
 And according ^a to mine integrity that is in me.
 9 Oh ^b let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end ;—but ^c establish the just :
^d For the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins.

 11 God judgeth¹² the righteous,—and God is angry with the wicked every day.

¹ The psalmist contemplates death, not as the close of his existence, but as putting an end to all opportunity of praising God among his fellow-men. See Isa. xxxviii. 18.

² That is, 'with tears:' a hyperbolical expression, to denote intense anguish.

³ Or, 'grown dim,' with weeping.

⁴ This abrupt change from sorrow to joy shows the psalmist's confidence that his prayer had been heard, and would be answered. Many of the plaintive psalms end thus triumphantly. See Ps. xiii., xxxi.

⁶ 'Cush' is the Hebrew name for Ethiopia. No person of this name is mentioned in the history of David ; but some think the designation to be enigmatical, significant of blackness of heart (see Jer. xiii. 23), and regard it as applying either to Saul or to Shimai, both of whom were Benjamites. In Psalm vii., David, praying to be saved from his foes (vers. 1, 2), protests his uprightness (3—5), intreats God's judicial interference (6—9), and expresses his reliance on God's retributive justice (10—13), which shall turn the plots of the wicked against themselves (14—16) and call forth the praises of the righteous (17).

⁷ That is, 'the wickedness with which my enemies charge me ;' referring to 'the words of Cush ;' see title.

⁸ Rather, 'And [if] I have spoiled him,' etc.

⁹ This word is probably a poetical designation for soul, in like parallelism with which it is put in Gen. xlix. 6. See Ps. xvi. 9 ; lvii. 8 ; cviii. 1 ; and note on Job xxx. 15.

¹¹ That is, in this particular matter—'according to my innocence of the charges brought against me.' The confessions of unworthiness made elsewhere plainly show that the psalmist laid no claim to absolute sinlessness.

¹² That is, does him justice ; or it may be rendered, 'God is a righteous judge.' It is obvious that the object of God's anger, though not expressed in these lines, is the enemy (ver. 5), the wicked (ver. 9) ; of whom it is said, 'If he turn not, he (God) will sharpen,' etc.

¹³ Probably 'disappointment,' i. e. to himself ; a figurative representation of the way in which mischievous designs are made to injure their inventors. See vers. 15, 16.

PSALM VII. 15—IX. 6.

- 15 He made a pit,¹ and digged it,—ⁱ and is fallen into the ditch which he made.
 16 ^k His mischief shall return upon his own head,
 And his violent dealing shall come down upon his own pate.
 17 I will praise the LORD 'according to his righteousness:²
 And will sing praise to the name of the LORD most high.

 2 ^p Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength
 Because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still ^q the enemy and the avenger.⁶

PSALM IX.

To the chief Musician upon Muth-labben,¹¹ A Psalm of David.¹²

- 1 I WILL praise thee, O LORD, ^e with my whole heart;
 I will show forth all thy marvellous works.
 2 I will be glad and ^f rejoice in thee:
 I will sing praise to thy name, O ^g thou Most High.
 3 When mine enemies are turned back,
^h They shall fall and perish at thy presence.
 4 For ⁱ thou hast maintained my right and my cause;
 Thou satest in the throne judging right.
 5 Thou hast rebuked the heathen,—thou hast destroyed the wicked,
 Thou hast ^k put out their name for ever and ever.
 6 O thou enemy,¹³ ^l 'destructions are come to a perpetual end:
 And thou hast destroyed cities;—their memorial is perished with them.

^h Ps. 68. 1, 2.
ⁱ Ps. 16. 5.
^k Deu. 9. 14; Pro. 10. 7.
^l Ps. 46. 9.

1 Alluding to the method of catching wild beasts by pits covered over slightly with reeds or branches of trees.

2 That is, his justice; manifested in the deliverance of the persecuted, and in the destruction of the persecutors.

3 The word 'Gittith' probably means an instrument, or tune, brought from the city of Gath.

4 The allusions in ver. 3 have led many to suppose that David wrote Psalm viii. in his early life, when his nightly watches as a shepherd gave him frequent opportunities of observing the wonders of the heavens. The subject is the glory of God as manifested in nature, and especially in the capacities and the dignity which he has bestowed on man; who is here contemplated apart from his sinfulness, such as he was before he fell, and such as he is to be when restored by Christ; to whom, as the great representative of perfect human nature, the psalm is emphatically applicable. See Heb. ii. 6—9.

5 Or, 'Who diffusest thy glory abroad over the heavens.'

6 Or, 'vindictive.' Some take 'babes and sucklings' figuratively, referring to Matt. xi. 25. But it may be understood literally as meaning, 'The instinctive admiration of thy works which is shown even by very young children strongly rebukes those who would malignantly question thy being, or obscure thy glory.'

7 A figurative mode of representing the skill and delicacy of the work.

8 The Hebrew word 'Elohim' is used here, and in a few other places, apparently with some latitude, so as to be applied to any superhuman beings.

9 Alluding obviously to that dominion over the inferior creation which formed a part of man's original likeness to God. See Gen. i. 26. This dominion is fitly used to represent the authority of Him into whose hands, as Mediator, 'all power in heaven and on earth' has been committed. See Heb. ii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 27; Eph. i. 22.

10 'Oxen' is a generic term for larger cattle. 'Beasts of the field' always, in Scripture, mean wild beasts.

11 Some take 'labben,' in this difficult title, as an anagram of Nabal; and render it, on the death of the fool (see 1 Sam. xxv. 25): others, slightly changing the Hebrew vowels, suppose the former part of the clause to denote female voices, or soprano; and the latter to mean, 'for Ben,' or '[the children of] Ben,' a Levitical singer mentioned in 1 Chron. xv. 18. But it is most likely that 'Muth-labben' is the title of another poem, in the style or to the tune of which this psalm was composed. See note on 2 Sam. i. 18. Thus it would mean, 'according to the song Muth-labben (Death of the Son).'

12 Psalm ix. was evidently written whilst the tabernacle was on Zion (ver. 11), and on occasion of some national danger, from which David was as yet only partially delivered. It suits the time of the great Syrian confederacy (see note on 2 Sam. viii. 13); for it combines praise for past victories (vers. 1—6, 11, 12, 15, 16) with trust in God for further help (7—10, 17, 18), and petitions for salvation from impending danger (13, 14, 19, 20).

13 Or, 'As to the enemy,' etc. 'Thou' in the second clause probably means Jehovah, as in ver. 5.

PSALM IX. 7—X. 9.

- 7 ^m But the LORD shall endure for ever :
ⁿ He hath prepared his throne for judgment.
 8 And ^o he shall judge the world in righteousness,
 He shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness.
 9 ^p The LORD also will be a refuge for the oppressed,—a refuge ^q in times of trouble.
 10 And they that ^r know thy name will put their trust in thee :
 For thou, LORD, ^s hast not forsaken them that seek thee.
 11 Sing praises to the LORD, ^t which dwelleth in Zion :
^u Declare among the people his doings.
 12 ^v When he maketh inquisition for blood,¹ he remembereth them :
^w He forgetteth not the cry of the humble [or, afflicted].
 13 ^x Have mercy upon me, O LORD ;
 Consider my trouble which I suffer of them that hate me,
^y Thou that liftest me up from the gates of death :
 14 ^z That I may show forth all thy praise in the gates of ^a the daughter of Zion :
 I will ^b rejoice in thy salvation.
 15 ^c The heathen are sunk down in the pit that they made :
 In the net which they hid is their own foot taken.
 16 The LORD is ^d known by the judgment which he executeth ;
^e The wicked is snared in the work of his own hands. ^f Higgaion.² Selah.
 17 ^g The wicked shall be turned into hell,—and all the nations ^h that forget God.
 18 ⁱ For the needy shall not alway be forgotten :
^m The expectation of the poor shall not perish for ever.
 19 ⁿ Arise, O LORD ; ^o let not man prevail :—let the heathen be judged in thy sight.
 20 ^p Put them in fear, O LORD :
That the nations ^q may know themselves to be but men. Selah.

PSALM X.

- 1 ³ WHY ^r standest thou afar off, O LORD ?
 Why ^s hidest thou thyself in times of trouble ?
 2 The wicked in his pride doth persecute the poor :
^t Let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined.
 3 For the wicked ^u boasteth of his heart's desire,
 And ^v blesseth the covetous, ^w whom the LORD abhorreth.⁴
 4 The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, ^x will not seek after God :
 God is not in all his ^y thoughts⁵ [or, All his thoughts are, There is no God].
 5 His ways are always grievous ;⁶—^b thy judgments are far above out of his sight :
As for all his enemies, ^c he puffeth at them.
 6 ^d He hath said in his heart, I shall not be moved :
^e For I shall never be in adversity.
 7 ^f His mouth is full of cursing and deceit and fraud :
^g Under his tongue⁷ is mischief ^h and vanity [or, iniquity].
 8 He sitteth in ⁱ the lurking places of the villages :
^j In the secret places doth he murder the innocent :
^k His eyes are privily set against the poor.
 9 ^m He lieth in wait secretly as a lion in his den :
 He lieth in wait ⁿ to catch the poor :

1 Heb., 'bloods.' The plural form of this word always refers to effusion of blood, and generally implies violence. The plural pronoun 'them,' in the next clause, may therefore refer to blood shed; but more probably to the 'afflicted' in the next clause. All unjust blood-shedding provokes God's judgments; which, though deferred, are not abandoned.

2 The word 'Higgaion' may mean meditation, being a direction (stronger than 'Selah' alone) to pause reverently and thoughtfully. But the use of the word in Ps. xcii. 3, with reference to the sound of the harp, makes it more likely that it was designed to call for instrumental music whilst the singers paused.

3 In the Septuagint, and some other ancient versions, Psalm x. is joined to the preceding; but there seems to be no sufficient reason for such an arrangement. Psalm ix. is one mainly of thanksgiving; this of complaint and distress, on account either of the incursions of enemies, or of a disorganized state of society at home. Its style and position, however, make it probable that it proceeded from the same author. It contains a complaint of the pride and malice of the wicked (vers. 1—11); and a prayer for, with confidence in, Divine interposition (12—18).

4 Perhaps, 'And, making [unjust] gain, blesses [while he] despises Jehovah.' But the clause may be translated, 'and curseth and despiseth Jehovah;' rendering the word as in Job i. 5, 11; ii. 5, 9. See note on Job i. 5.

5 Or, 'The wicked in his pride [God] will not seek; No God [are] all his thoughts.' See ver. 13. All sin is practical atheism.

6 This word probably means 'enduring,' or 'firm;' and describes the sinner's fallacious security. For a season he is exempt from judgments, and his life is apparently prosperous. See Ps. lxxiii. 4—7.

7 This is supposed to allude to the poison of serpents, which is concealed beneath their teeth.

PSALM XI.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.⁵

- 1 ^l IN the LORD put I my trust :
^m How say ye to my soul, Flee as a bird to your mountain ?⁶
- 2 For, lo, ⁿ the wicked bend their bow,
^o They make ready their arrow upon the string,
That they may privily shoot at the upright in heart.
- 3 ^p If the foundations⁷ be destroyed,—what can the righteous do ?
- 4 ^q The LORD is in his holy temple,⁸—the LORD's ^r throne is in heaven :
^s His eyes behold, his eyelids try, the children of men.
- 5 The LORD ^t trieth the righteous :
But ^u the wicked and him that loveth violence his soul hateth.
- 6 ^v Upon the wicked he shall rain snares,⁹
Fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest :
^w This shall be the portion of their cup.
- 7 For the righteous LORD ^x loveth righteousness ;
^y His countenance doth behold¹⁰ the upright.

PSALM XII.

To the chief Musician ^b upon Sheminith [or, upon the eighth], A Psalm of David.¹¹

- 1 HELP, LORD ; for ^c the godly man ceaseth ;
For ^d the faithful fail from among the children of men.
- 2 ^e They speak vanity every one with his neighbour :
^f With flattering lips and with ^g a double heart do they speak.
- 3 The LORD ^h shall cut off all flattering lips,
And the tongue that speaketh ⁱ proud things :

¹ The wicked man is compared first to a lion, and then to a hunter, to show that he employs craft as well as force.

² Meaning probably his strong claws or teeth ; recurring to the metaphor of a lion.

³ Or, 'afflicted.' The difference is not important, as the context here and in many other places shows that humble sufferers are spoken of.

⁴ Rather, 'so that he (i. e. the sinner already described) shall no longer terrify the feeble from the land ;' dislodging them from their homes and possessions.

⁵ Psalm xi. was evidently composed by David at some period of danger ; but whether during his persecution by Saul, or the rebellion of Absalom, is quite uncertain. In opposition to the timid counsels of desponding friends, who did but utter the doubting thoughts of his own heart, he expresses a firm confidence in the watchful care of Providence, and in the ultimate retribution of Divine rectitude. The general character of the psalm makes it applicable to all God's people in every season of danger and difficulty.

⁶ A refuge inaccessible to the archer (ver. 2).

⁷ This means, probably, the foundations of social order ;

the principles of justice, and laws based upon them. When these are not respected, innocence ceases to afford protection, and society is hastening to dissolution.

⁸ This is David's animated reply to his desponding friends, and it well suggests the source of consolation which is provided for suffering integrity in every age.

⁹ Some render this word 'burning coals ;' but it is better to retain the usual meaning. The verse contains a variety of figures expressive of the numerous ways in which God punishes the wicked. 'Snares' are a frequent metaphor with the psalmist for inextricable difficulties. See Ps. vii. 15 ; ix. 15 ; x. 9. 'Fire and brimstone' are familiar types of sudden and complete destruction ; and refer doubtless to the great historical example of Sodom and Gomorrah. See Job xviii. 15 ; Ezek. xxxviii. 22.

¹⁰ He regards him with approbation and favour. See note on Ps. i. 6.

¹¹ Psalm xii. contains nothing to determine the particular occasion on which it was composed. It refers in general terms to the increase of the wicked in numbers and power, and it affords important instruction and encouragement whenever the interests of truth and godliness appear to be depressed.

^o Ps. 9. 9; 142. 5.

1 The meaning perhaps is, 'We will utter what we please.' If so, this forcibly describes the license of speech in which the wicked indulge.

2 Or, 'I will place in safety him that panteth for it.'

3 Rather, 'the sayings;' i. e. what Jehovah had said in the preceding verse. His promises are declared to be certainly true.

4 That is, this contemporary race of wicked men, whose number was so fearfully disproportionate to that of the righteous. See ver. 1.

5 This rendering of the Hebrew is free, but not incorrect. This verse probably describes the 'generation' mentioned in ver. 7; and the connection will be made apparent by supplying the word 'when' before 'the wicked,' etc. Many other interpretations have been given, but none of them appear satisfactory.

6 When Psalm xiii. was written, David had evidently been brought by outward hostility to the deepest dejection (vers. 1, 2); from which he here seeks (3, 4) and finds (5, 6) relief by earnest prayer. All this perhaps best agrees with the period of Saul's persecutions. It is a beautiful specimen of the way in which the soul of the believer is sometimes raised by devotion from the borders of despair to assured hope.

7 By anxiously thinking over many expedients, without finding any that would answer his purpose, the psalmist had only increased his sorrows.

8 That is, 'enlighten.' This may mean, 'Dispel my anxieties' (ver. 2); or, more probably, 'Deliver me from imminent destruction, lest I sleep,' etc. See note on 1 Sam. xiv. 27, where the same expression is used.

9 Psalm xiv. appears to refer to the oppression of ungodly and depraved men. The language of ver. 7 has led many to assign its date to the exile in Babylon. But it is clear, from Job xlii. 10, that no reliance can be placed upon such an argument; whilst the mention of Zion, with Jacob and Israel (ver. 7), seems to point to the time when Jerusalem was the metropolis of the whole nation, and the distinction between Judah and Israel was unknown. Many, therefore, refer the psalm to the period of Absalom's rebellion; but this is quite uncertain. Its description of the character of the wicked is so general as to be applied by the apostle Paul to all mankind. With some slight variations, Psa. liiii. is the same as this; but which of the two is the original, and how the variations arose, are points which cannot now be determined with certainty.

10 To himself, if not to others. We have here a striking delineation of the close connection and mutual reaction of false principles and practical wickedness. Blinded by the foolish love of sin, men wish there were no God, and sometimes come to believe that what they wish is true; and then, all restraint being removed, they give unbridled license to their abominable desires.

11 See Gen. vi. 12; the language of which, as also of ch. xi. 5 and xviii. 21, is probably alluded to here.

12 Or, 'act wisely.' It is the proof of wisdom to seek God. See Job xxviii. 28, and refs.

13 That is, 'who oppress and persecute them.'

14 With the same indifference and unconcern.

15 Despising the invisible resources on which he relies. Those who forget God regard with contempt the hopes of one who trusts in the protection of an invisible Being.

- 7 ^q Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion !
^r When the LORD bringeth back the captivity of his people,
 Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

- 1 LORD, ^s who shall abide² in thy tabernacle?—who shall dwell in ^t thy holy hill?
 2 ^u He that walketh uprightly,—and ^x worketh righteousness,

1 Psalm xv. is, with much probability, supposed to have been composed on the occasion of bringing up the ark of the covenant to Mount Zion, as described in 2 Sam. vi. 12—19, and 1 Chron. xv., xvi. The writer describes the qualifications and privileges of the inmates of God's house. As there has always been a strong propensity in men to substitute attention to ceremonial observances in place of the sanctity and rectitude of heart and conduct which God requires, the psalmist here, omitting all reference to the former, shows that the latter are essential to acceptable worship.

2 This 'abiding' includes the idea of God's favour and protection, and of happy communion with Him. The image present to the psalmist's mind seems not so much that of a worshipper as of a guest.

3 That is, he departs not from any solemn agreement into which he has entered, though adherence to it may occasion him personal loss or suffering. See Lev. v. 4.

4 The Israelites were forbidden to lend money on usury (or interest) to their brethren, though they might do it to foreigners. See Deut. xxiii. 20.

5 That is, 'removed;' with allusion to the 'abiding' mentioned in ver. 1.

6 The word 'Michtam' is derived from a root which means to 'hide' or 'treasure up,' and is applied to gold; whence some critics suppose this title to be given to certain psalms on account of their peculiar excellence, or because they were written in golden letters: others render it 'secret,' and suppose that the psalms with this title have, more than others, an occult sense, or are specially adapted for use in private devotion: whilst others regard the word as another form of 'Michtab,' which is found as a title to the song of Hezekiah (Isa. xxxviii. 9), and signifies 'a writing.'

7 We have inspired authority (see Acts ii. 25—31; xiii. 34—37) for ascribing Psalm xvi. to David, who expresses in it confiding dependence on Jehovah and delight in him, entire devotion to his service, and satisfaction with the lot assigned by his providence. The psalm, taken as a whole, is doubtless appropriate to devout believers in every age; but there are parts of it which rise far above their attainments, and find their fullest meaning only in the personal history and experience of our Lord Jesus Christ. To him, accordingly, the psalm is applied in the passages referred to above.

8 Rather, 'My good is not besides thee;' i. e. is wholly in thee. See Ps. lxxiii. 25.

9 Or (continuing ver. 2), I have said 'to the saints,' etc., 'all my delight is in them.' That is, My trust is in Jehovah, my delight is in his people.

10 This alludes to the Israelite's inheritance in Canaan, allotted to him by Jehovah, and marked out by the measuring lines (ver. 6).

11 See note on Ps. iv. 4. The same subject occupied the psalmist's thoughts by night as by day.

12 That is, as my guard or protector.

13 See note on Ps. vii. 5.

14 Heb., 'Sheol,' the unseen state of the dead. The language of these verses would be extravagantly hyperbolic, if it were not admitted that the psalmist connected his own future life with the resurrection of Christ, who, though he died, yet 'saw no corruption.' Such a prophetic reference is required also by the reasoning of the apostle Paul in Acts xiii. 35—37.

Neither wilt thou suffer ^s thine Holy One to see corruption.

- 11 Thou wilt show me the ^h path of life:—ⁱ in thy presence is fulness of joy;
^k At thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.

PSALM XVII.

A Prayer of David.¹

- 1 'HEAR the right,² O LORD,—^m attend unto my cry,
Give ear unto my prayer, that goeth not out of feigned lips.
2 ⁿ Let my sentence come forth³ from thy presence;
Let thine eyes behold ^o the things that are equal.
3 ^p Thou hast proved mine heart;—^q thou hast visited me in the night;
^r Thou hast tried me, and ^s shalt find nothing;
^t I am purposed that my mouth shall not transgress.⁴
4 Concerning the works of men,⁵
^u By the word of thy lips I have kept me from the paths of ^v the destroyer.
5 ^w Hold up my goings in thy paths,—^x that my footsteps slip not.⁶
6 ^a I have called upon thee, for thou wilt hear me, O God:
^b Incline thine ear unto me, and hear my speech.
7 ^c Show thy marvellous lovingkindness,—O thou that savest ^d by thy right hand
Them which put their trust in thee—from those that rise up against them.
8 ^e Keep me as the apple of the eye,—^f hide me under the shadow of thy wings,⁷ 9 From the wicked that oppress me,
From my deadly enemies, who compass me about 10 ^g They are inclosed in their own fat:⁸—with their mouth they ^h speak proudly.
11 They have now ⁱ compassed us in our steps:
^k They have set their eyes bowing down to the earth;⁹
12 Like as a lion that is greedy of his prey,
And as it were a young lion lurking in secret places.
13 'Arise, O LORD, disappoint him, cast him down:
Deliver my soul from the wicked, ^m which is thy sword [or, by thy sword ⁿ]:¹⁰
14 From men, which are thy hand [or, From men by thine hand], O LORD,
From men of the world, ^o which have their portion in this life, ^p And whose belly¹¹ thou fillest with thy hid treasure:
They are full of children,¹² and leave the rest of their substance to their babes.
15 As for me, ^q I will behold thy face in righteousness:
^r I shall be satisfied,¹³ when I awake, ^s with thy likeness.¹⁴

PSALM XVIII.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David,¹⁵ 'the servant of the LORD, who spake unto the LORD the words of ^u this song in the day that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: And he said,

- 1 I ^v WILL love thee, O LORD, ^w my strength.
2 ^x The LORD is my rock, and ^a my fortress, and my deliverer;
My God, my strength, ^b in whom I will trust;
^c My buckler, and ^d the horn of my salvation, and ^e my high tower.
3 ^f I will call upon the LORD, ^g who is worthy to be praised:
^h So shall I be saved from mine enemies.

¹ Expositors generally agree in referring Psalm xvii. to the period of Saul's persecution of David; but what the particular occasion was is not easily determined. On the grounds of his own uprightness (vers. 1—5), of God's former mercies (6, 7), and of the wickedness of his foes (8—12), David confidently prays for salvation (13—15).

² In the matters here referred to, David was conscious of uprightness, and especially freedom from guile.

³ That is, Let it come forth to the view of others; so that my character may be vindicated.

⁴ Or, 'My mouth shall not exceed my thoughts;' i. e. thou shalt find no discrepance between my words and thoughts.

⁵ Their sinful courses. See Hos. vi. 7.

⁶ Or (continuing ver. 4), 'My steps have laid hold of thy paths; my feet have not swerved.' Comp. Job xxiii. 11.

⁷ In both parts of this verse there is an evident reference to Deut. xxxii. 10—12. See refs.

⁸ This is a common image in Scripture for moral and spiritual insensibility. See Psa. cxix. 70; Isa. vi. 10.

⁹ Or, 'to go astray in the land.'

¹⁰ That is, 'thy instrument of correction;' as the Assyrian king is called 'the rod of Jehovah's anger' (Isa. x. 5). But the marginal reading of our translators is more suitable to the context.

¹¹ That is, 'appetite.' God often bestows the most coveted gifts of his providence upon the ungodly.

¹² Or, 'Their children [also] are full (i. e. as well as themselves), and leave [in their turn] their superfluity to their babes:' their prosperity continuing from age to age.

¹³ Or, 'full;' the same word as in ver. 14. David evidently designs to contrast his own choice and portion with those of his enemies.

¹⁵ We learn from 2 Sam. xxii. the occasion on which David composed this most sublime and beautiful ode. See note on 2 Sam. xxii. 1. It is a solemn and grateful retrospect of the deliverances and mercies of a most eventful life. 'Saul' is mentioned in this title, not as the last of David's enemies, but rather the chief.

- 4 ⁱ The sorrows¹ of death compassed me,
And ^k the floods of ungodly men made me afraid.
5 The sorrows of hell compassed me about: ^l the snares of death prevented² me.
6 ^m In my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried unto my God:
ⁿ He heard my voice ^o out of his temple,
And ^p my cry came before him, even into his ears.
7 ^q Then the earth shook and trembled;
^r The foundations also of the hills moved and were shaken,—because he was wroth.
8 There ^s went up a smoke out of his nostrils,³
And ^t fire out of his mouth devoured:—coals were kindled by it.
9 ^u He bowed the heavens also, and came down:—and ^v darkness was under his feet.
10 ^w And he rode upon a cherub,⁴ and did fly:
Yea, ^z he did fly upon the wings of the wind.
11 He made darkness ^a his secret place;
^b His pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies.
12 ^c At the brightness that was before him his thick clouds passed, Hail stones and coals of fire.
13 The LORD also ^d thundered in the heavens,
And the Highest gave ^e his voice;—hail stones and coals of fire.
14 ^f Yea, he sent out his arrows, and scattered them;
And he shot out lightnings, and discomfited them.
15 ^g Then the channels of waters were seen,
And the foundations of the world were discovered
^h At thy rebuke, O LORD,—ⁱ at the blast of the breath of thy nostrils.
16 ^k He sent from above, he took me,—^l he drew me out of many waters.⁵
17 He delivered me from my strong enemy,
And from them which hated me:—for ^m they were too strong for me.
18 They prevented me in the day of my calamity:—but the LORD was my stay.
19 ⁿ He brought me forth also into a large place;⁶
He delivered me, because ^o he delighted in me.
20 ^p The LORD rewarded me according to my righteousness;⁷
^q According to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.
21 For I have kept the ways of the LORD,
And have not wickedly departed from my God.
22 For ^r all his judgments were before me,
And ^s I did not put away his statutes from me.
23 ^t I was also upright before him,—and I kept myself from mine iniquity.
24 ^u Therefore hath the LORD recompensed me—according to my righteousness,
According to the cleanness of my hands in his eyesight.
25 ^v With the merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful;
^w With an upright man thou wilt show thyself upright;
26 ^x With the pure thou wilt show thyself pure;
And with the froward thou wilt show thyself froward.⁸
27 For ^y thou wilt save the afflicted people;—but wilt bring down ^z high looks.
28 ^a For thou wilt light my candle:⁹—the LORD my God will enlighten my darkness.
29 For ^b by thee I have run through a troop:
And by my God have I leaped over a wall.¹⁰
30 As for God, ^c his way is perfect:—^d the word of the LORD is tried:¹¹

¹ Or, 'cords;' either bonds or snares. The expressions in vers. 4—16 are to be regarded as highly figurative; representing in poetical style the urgent distress of David's situation (comp. Jonah ii. 3); and then, in similar terms, describing the nature and efficacy of the Divine interposition, its promptitude, energy, majesty, and triumphant success. The images employed seem to be partly those of a thunderstorm, and partly those of an earthquake. Comp. Ps. civ. 6—8.

² That is, 'were beforehand with me,' like a net or snare; and so in ver. 18.

³ Representing God's wrath.

⁴ See note on Gen. iii. 24. This description of Jehovah being borne on a cherub, signifies that he was coming in all his Divine majesty.

⁵ Those mentioned in ver. 4, on which see note.

⁶ As confinement or pressure is a common figure for distress, so relief from such distress is often represented as a coming forth into an open place. See Ps. xxxi. 8; cxviii. 5.

⁷ David here shows the connection between personal holiness and Divine favour. His claim, as other psalms show, was not to perfect sinlessness, but to 'a conscience void of offence,' especially with respect to the accusations of his enemies. See note on Ps. xvii. 1.

⁸ This is an emphatic mode of saying that God's dealings with men correspond to their characters and behaviour; and is parallel to Matt. vii. 2; Gal. vi. 8.

⁹ Or, 'lamp.' A lamp lighted in the house is a common Hebrew figure for prosperity, as its extinction is for distress. See Job xviii. 5, 6; xxi. 17; Prov. xxiv. 20.

¹⁰ Referring to the walls of cities. Both clauses are descriptive of the military triumphs which the Divine assistance enabled him to achieve.

¹¹ Meaning especially, that the promise of God, when tried, stands the test.

- 31 ^h For who is God save the LORD?—ⁱ or who is a rock save our God?
 32 It is God that ^h girdeth me with strength,—and maketh my way perfect.
 33 ⁱ He maketh my feet like hinds' feet,¹—and ^m setteth me upon my high places.
 34 ⁿ He teacheth my hands to war,—^o so that a bow of steel is broken² by mine arms.
 35 Thou hast also given me ^p the shield of thy salvation:
 And ^q thy right hand hath holden me up,—and thy gentleness³ hath made me great.
 36 Thou hast ^r enlarged my steps under me,—^s that my feet did not slip.
 37 ^t I have pursued mine enemies, and overtaken them:
 Neither did I turn again till they were consumed.
 38 I have wounded them that they were not able to rise:
 They are fallen under my feet.
 39 For ^u thou hast girded me with strength unto the battle:
^v Thou hast subdued under me those that rose up against me.
 40 Thou hast also given me the necks of mine enemies;
 That I might destroy ^y them that hate me.
 41 They cried, but there was none to save them:
^z Even unto the LORD, but he answered them not.
 42 Then did ^a I beat them small as the dust before the wind:
 I did ^b cast them out as the dirt in the streets.⁴
 43 ^c Thou hast delivered me from the strivings of the people:
 And ^d thou hast made me the head of the heathen:⁵
^e A people whom I have not known shall serve me.
 44 As soon as they hear of me, they shall obey me:
 The strangers ^f shall submit themselves unto me.
 45 ^g The strangers shall fade away,⁶—and be afraid out of their close places.
- 46 ^h The LORD liveth; and blessed be my rock;
 And let ⁱ the God of my salvation be exalted.
 47 It is God that avengeth me,—^h and subdueth the people under me.
 48 He delivereth me from mine enemies:
 Yea, ^j thou liftest me up above those that rise up against me:
 Thou hast delivered me from the violent man.
 49 ^m Therefore will I give thanks unto thee, O LORD, among the heathen,
 And sing praises unto thy name.
 50 ⁿ Great deliverance giveth he to his king;—and sheweth mercy to ^o his anointed.
 To David, and to his seed ^p for evermore.

PSALM XIX.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.⁷

- 1 THE ^q heavens declare the glory of God;
 And the firmament sheweth his handywork.
 2 Day unto day uttereth⁸ speech,—and night unto night sheweth knowledge.
 3 *There is no speech nor language,—where their voice is not heard.*⁹
 4 ^r Their line¹⁰ is gone out through all the earth,
 And their words to the end of the world.
^s In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun,
 5 Which is as ^t a bridegroom coming out of his chamber,
^u And rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race.¹¹

1 That is, very swift. See note on 2 Sam. i. 19.
 2 Rather, 'a bow of brass is bent by my arms.' This is mentioned as an indication of extraordinary strength. In the Homeric legends, Ulysses is represented as leaving a bow behind him at home which no one but himself could bend.

3 That is, 'condescending kindness;' the kindness of a superior to his inferiors.

4 These terms usually refer to contemptuous treatment.

5 Such was the extraordinary prosperity with which God crowned the latter years of David's life. Rebellion was at last entirely suppressed; surrounding nations were made tributary; and more distant tribes hastened to pay him homage. As Jehovah had promised to David that his kingdom should be raised to the highest glory under the Messiah, part of this description was doubtless intended to refer to the future triumphs of Christ and his gospel, and is so used by the apostle Paul in Rom. xv. 9.

6 That is, 'like withering plants.' Of course such only of 'the strangers' are meant as refused submission. See ver. 44.

7 In this beautiful psalm, David passes, by abrupt but natural transitions, from the glory of the Creator in his material works (vers. 1—6), to the spiritual power and excellence of His revealed word (7—11); and finally, as the great object of the whole, to the bearing of the word upon his own experience as a sinner and as a believer (12—14).

8 Literally, 'poureth forth;' marking the fulness of the testimony. The idolatry of the heathen nations is consequently inexcusable. See Rom. i. 19—21.

9 Or, 'There is no speech nor language; their voice is not heard:' i. e. they bear a silent, though most significant, witness.

10 Some, following the ancient versions, regard this word as meaning a musical chord, and render it 'sound.' But others give it the usual meaning, 'measuring line.' The testimony is coextensive with the earth. This is applied, by the apostle Paul, to illustrate the universality of gospel blessings. See Rom. x. 18.

11 Suggesting to every beholder the ideas of lively cheerfulness and unfailing power.

1 The variety of names given to the word of God in vers. 7—9 is evidently intended, as in Ps. cxix., to bring out its value as a whole, and in all its parts and bearings ; but it is unnecessary to attach a distinct shade of meaning to each of the words employed.

2 Rather, 'restoring the soul ;' as the same Hebrew word is rendered in Ps. xxiii. 3. See also Ruth iv. 15 ; Lam. i. 11, 16. The effects of the word of God in restoring the cheerful tone of the soul, when depressed by calamity, seem principally intended.

3 Free from all taint of error or iniquity.

4 That is, the law, considered as that which leads or teaches men to fear God. See Deut. xvii. 19.

5 The Hebrew word here rendered 'errors' denotes sins of inadvertence or infirmity, as distinguished from wilful and high-handed sins, such as are deprecated in the next verse. See Lev. iv. 2, 27 ; Numb. xv. 27, where a kindred word is used.

6 Rather, 'from great transgression ;' not referring to any particular offence.

7 Psalm xx. was evidently written while the ark was on Mount Zion (ver. 2), and probably was suggested by some of David's wars against the nations on the north and east of Palestine, who trusted in horses and chariots (comp.

ver. 7 with 1 Chron. xix. 6). It contains, however, nothing to confine it to any particular occasion ; and was probably designed for a general war-psalm, indicating the object and spirit of the pious Israelite when he fought under his Divinely-appointed king. The first part (vers. 1—5) appears to have been sung by the whole assembly ; the prayers thus offered are then regarded as accepted, and the king, or some one representing him, utters ver. 6 alone ; after which the whole assembly probably sang the remainder (vers. 7—9).

8 It was customary with the Israelites, when entering on a campaign or a battle, to offer sacrifices to Jehovah. See 1 Sam. xiii. 8, 9. Both the burnt sacrifices and the meat-offering are here mentioned as being presented on such occasions. See Lev. i. 3 ; ii. 1, and notes.

9 The Sept. and Vulg. render, 'O Lord ! save the king : hear us when we call.'

10 As the preceding psalm was to be used before battle, so Psalm xxi. appears to be a thanksgiving for victory ; probably composed about the same time. The psalmist's mind is clearly carried beyond his present triumphs to anticipate the permanent exaltation of the kingdom under the rule of the Messiah (vers. 4—6), to whom the ancient Jews applied it.

- 3 For thou preventest¹ him with the blessings of goodness :
^oThou settest a crown of pure gold on his head.
 4 ^pHe asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him;²
^q*Even* length of days for ever and ever.
 5 His glory is great in thy salvation :—honour and majesty hast thou laid upon him.
 6 For ^rthou hast ^smade him most blessed for ever :
^tThou hast made him exceeding glad with thy countenance.
 7 ^uFor the king trusteth in the LORD,
 And through the mercy of the Most High he ^xshall not be moved.
 8 Thine hand shall ^yfind out all thine enemies :
 Thy right hand shall find out those that hate thee.
 9 ^zThou shalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger :³
 The LORD shall ^aswallow them up in his wrath,—^band the fire shall devour them.
 10 ^cTheir fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth,
 And their seed from among the children of men.
 11 For they intended evil against thee :
 They ^dimagined a mischievous device,—which ^ethey are not able to perform.
 12 ^fTherefore shalt thou make them turn their back :⁴
^hWhen thou shalt make ready thine arrows upon thy strings against the face of them.
 13 ⁱBe thou exalted, LORD, in thine own strength
 So will we sing and praise thy power.

PSALM XXII.

To the chief Musician upon Ajeleth Shahar,⁴ A Psalm of David.⁵

- 1 MY ^kGod, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?⁶
 Why art thou so far from helping me, and from ^lthe words of my roaring?
 2 O my God, I cry in the daytime, ^mbut thou hearest not ;
 And ⁿin the night season, and am not silent.
 3 But thou art holy,⁷—O thou that inhabitest the ^opraises of Israel.
 4 Our fathers trusted in thee :—they trusted, and thou didst deliver them.
 5 ^pThey cried unto thee, and were delivered :
^qThey trusted in thee, and were not confounded.
 6 But I am ^ra worm,⁸ and no man ;—^sa reproach of men, and despised of the people.
 7 ^tAll they that see me laugh me to scorn :
 They shoot out the lip, ^uthey shake the head, saying,
 8 ^xHe trusted⁹ on the LORD that he would deliver him :
^yLet him deliver him, seeing he delighted in him.
 9 ^zBut thou art he that took me out of the womb :
 Thou didst make me hope when I was upon my mother's breasts.
 10 ^aI was cast upon thee from the womb :
 Thou art ^bmy God ^cfrom my mother's belly.
 11 ^dBe not far from me ; for trouble is near ;—for there is none to help.
 12 ^eMany bulls have compassed me :—strong bulls of Bashan¹⁰ have beset me round.
 13 ^fThey gaped upon me with their mouths,—as a ravening and a roaring lion.
 14 I am poured out like water,¹¹—^gand all my bones are out of joint :
^hMy heart is like wax ; it is melted in the midst of my bowels.

1 That is, 'thou meetest him in a friendly manner,' with help ; as in Deut. xxiii. 4.

2 If this psalm is viewed historically as a thanksgiving for the fulfilment of the prayers in the foregoing, it will show that David regarded, and taught his people to regard, his own life and kingdom, chiefly in their relation to the great promises given to him.

3 Rather, 'presence ;' whenever thou appearest.

4 That is, 'the hind of the morning.' Of the numerous explanations which have been given of this title, the most probable is that which takes it as the designation of a song to the melody of which the psalm was to be sung ; but some critics suppose the words to be a description of the subject of the psalm ; the 'hind' being a figure for persecuted innocence, and the 'morning' for deliverance after long distress. See the next note.

5 In Psalm xxii., David, speaking as a pious sufferer, earnestly pleads his relation to Jehovah (vers. 1—10), describes the persecution and anguish he endured (11—21), and then breaks out into praise for signal deliverance (22—31). In all this he doubtless had some reference to his own experience of God's dealings with his people ; but he was led on by the Spirit of prophecy to point with particular significance to Him whose sufferings were at once most severe, and most important to the welfare of man.

6 Our Lord uttered these words when on the cross (see Matt. xxvii. 46), substituting for the Hebrew verb its Aramaic equivalent then in use.

7 God's moral perfections, here comprehensively called holiness, are the sure basis on which his servant rests.

8 A worm in the estimation of those who are worms themselves (see Job xxv. 6) ; and doubtless in his own.

9 Or, 'Let him trust in Jehovah ; let Him deliver him ; let Him save him, since He delights in him.' These were almost the very words derisively addressed to our Saviour on the cross. See Matt. xxvii. 43.

10 Bashan was celebrated for producing wild cattle and other beasts of extraordinary size. These are metaphorical expressions for fierce and powerful enemies.

11 Language like this is used elsewhere (see Josh. vii. 5) to describe dismay and fear ; here it seems rather descriptive of extreme debility and exhaustion.

- 15 ⁱ My strength is dried up like a potsherd ;—and ^k my tongue cleaveth to my jaws ;¹

1 From excessive thirst, which commonly attended the agonies of crucifixion. See John xix. 28.

2 Dogs in the East are seldom domesticated; and so become gregarious and wild. They were regarded by the Jews as unclean, and as objects of abhorrence; and they are used to represent the worst of men. See Job xxx. 1.

3 This is the rendering of many ancient versions, and is, on the whole, the best sense which can be given to the passage; but it is not a literal translation of the present Hebrew text, nor is it quoted in the New Testament, though it would have furnished as striking a description of our Lord's treatment by his enemies as ver. 18, which is cited in John xix. 23, 24.

4 Heb., 'My only one;' which is perhaps poetically put for 'my life;' but the use of the word elsewhere (Psa. xxv. 16) indicates the meaning 'my desolate one.' 'Sword' is often used for any instrument of death. See 2 Sam. xi. 25.

5 'Hearing' often includes answering, and therefore delivering. Perhaps, however, the language is still that of petition, 'Hear me from the horns of the unicorns.' On 'unicorns,' see note on Numb. xxiii. 22.

6 The tone here changes from the deepest despondency to the most joyful praise. The sufferer, now delivered, sees that both his agonies and his release will be productive of perfect satisfaction to himself, of eternal benefit to his brethren of mankind, and of the highest glory to God. This verse is quoted in Heb. ii. 11 to show the intimate relation between Christ and his people.

7 See note on Psa. xl. 9.

8 In vers. 25—29, there is probably an allusion to the sacrificial feasts which were connected with the fulfilment of vows made in distress or danger. See Deut. xii. 18. These were occasions of festivity not only to the offerer and his family, but also to a wide circle of invited guests.

9 That is, 'shall rejoice.' The joy of this festival is to be perpetual.

10 The inhabitants of the most distant lands.

11 That is, all the rich and noble.

12 Or, 'All going down (i. e. who are ready to go down) to the dust (i. e. those in extreme indigence and misery) shall bow before him at this festal sacrifice, and [even] he that is unable to keep himself alive.' None, not even the poorest and most abject, shall be excluded from this rich repast; distinction of ranks being as little regarded as that of nations.

13 Rather, 'Posterity shall serve him; [this] shall be told of the Lord to the [next] generation. They (the next generation) shall come, and shall declare,' etc. The praises rendered to God for this great work shall be handed down from age to age.

14 Psalm xxiii. is a beautiful effusion of holy gratitude and confidence, describing God's care of his people under the figure of a shepherd providing for his flock. The images were, no doubt, suggested by David's remembrances of pastoral habits; though the reference to enemies and the death-shade indicate that the Psalm was composed at a later period in his history, when he had had a more varied experience of human life.

15 This figure is frequently used in the Old Testament with reference both to individual believers and to the collective people of God. See refs. It is also applied, with an affecting particularity of detail, by our Lord to himself (John x. 11).

16 The confidence here expressed rests on Jehovah's perfections and his relation to us. These assure us that nothing really beneficial to body or soul will be withheld.

17 'Waters of rest,' or 'repose.'

- 3 ^s He restoreth¹ my soul:
^h He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness ⁱ for his name's sake.
4 Yea, though I walk through the valley of ^h the shadow of death,² ⁱ I will fear no evil:

PSALM XXIV.

A Psalm of David.⁷

- 1 THE ^s earth is the LORD's, and the fulness⁸ thereof;
ⁱ The world, and they that dwell therein.
2 ⁿ For he hath founded it upon the seas,—and ^x established it upon the floods.
3 ^y Who shall ascend into ^z the hill of the LORD?
Or who shall stand in his holy place?
4 He that hath ^a clean hands, and ^b a pure heart;
Who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity,⁹ nor ^c sworn deceitfully.
5 ^d He shall receive the blessing from the LORD,
And ^e righteousness from ^f the God of his salvation.
6 This is the generation of them that seek him,
That ^g seek thy face, O Jacob¹⁰ [or, O God of Jacob]. Selah.
7 ^h Lift up your heads, O ye gates;—and be ye lift up, ye everlasting¹¹ doors;
ⁱ And the King of glory shall come in.
8 Who is this King of glory?
^k The LORD strong and mighty,—the LORD mighty in battle.
9 Lift up your heads, O ye gates;—even lift them up, ye everlasting doors;
And the King of glory shall come in.
10 Who is this King of glory?
The LORD of hosts,¹² he is the King of glory. Selah.

PSALM XXV.

A Psalm of David.¹³

- 1, 2 UNTO ^t thee, O LORD, do I lift up my soul.—O my God, I ^m trust in thee:
Let me not be ashamed,—ⁿ let not mine enemies triumph over me.
3 Yea, let none that wait on thee ^o be ashamed:
^p Let them be ashamed which transgress ^q without cause.
4 ^r Show me thy¹⁴ ways, O LORD;—teach me thy paths.
5 ^s Lead me in thy truth, and ^t teach me:
For thou art the God of my salvation;—ⁿ on thee do I wait all the day.

1 That is, from depression. He reanimates it when exhausted. See note on Psal. xix. 7.

2 See note on Job iii. 5. The phrase refers to any season of extraordinary distress.

3 The 'rod and staff' are mentioned not as weapons, but as badges of the shepherd and marks of his presence.

4 Notwithstanding their enmity, and even though they may enviously look on.

5 Oil, being used at festive entertainments, came to be a common token of joy.

6 That is, as an inmate of his family; constantly enjoying his protection, bounty, and communion. See note on Psal. xv. 1.

7 Psalm xxiv. was probably composed by David when he brought the ark up to the fortress on Zion. Vers. 1—6 may have been sung as the procession ascended the hill towards the gates of the city, within which the tabernacle had been erected; and vers. 7—10 when it arrived at them. There can be little doubt that different parts of the psalm were sung responsively by different choirs of singers.

8 That which fills it; all that it contains.

9 That is, 'who has not given his heart to falsehood.'

10 Some translate this clause, 'They that seek thy face [are] Jacob;' i. e. are the true Jacob, the true Israel of God (see Psal. lxxiii. 1); but the reading of the old versions, 'O God of Jacob,' is better.

11 The word 'everlasting' is sometimes used to express very long duration, either past or future. See Gen. xlix. 26; 1 Kings viii. 13; Eccles. i. 4; Isa. xxxii. 14. The gates of Zion are poetically called on to raise their heads, in token of reverence to Him whose entrance is an act of condescension.

12 In Exod. xii. 41, the Israelites are termed the 'hosts' of Jehovah: but the word is more frequently applied to the hosts of heaven; by which are sometimes meant the heavenly bodies (see Deut. iv. 19; xvii. 3; 2 Kings xvii. 16), sometimes the angels (see 1 Kings xxii. 19; Psal. ciii. 21; cxlviii. 2); in both of which senses Jehovah may be appropriately described as 'the LORD OF HOSTS.'

13 Psalm xxv. is one of the acrostic or alphabetical psalms, in which the first words of the several verses begin with the different Hebrew letters in their order. The series of the letters in this and some similar psalms is imperfect, either through errors of copyists, or more probably because the author kept the form subordinate to the full expression of his thought. Such psalms generally have a single theme or idea, which is repeated in a series of aphorisms under various forms. This is chiefly supplicatory, mingling requests for deliverance from enemies with entreaties for Divine forgiveness.

14 That is, 'the ways ordained and approved by thee.'

PSALM XXVI.

*A Psalm of David.*⁵

- 1 JUDGE ^ame, O LORD;—for I have ^bwalked in mine integrity:
^cI have trusted also in the LORD;—therefore ^dI shall not slide.
- 2 ^eExamine me, O LORD, and prove me;—try my reins and my heart.
- 3 For thy lovingkindness is before mine eyes:⁶
 And ^fI have walked in thy truth.
- 4 ^gI have not sat with vain persons,—neither will I go in with dissemblers.
- 5 I have ^hhated the congregation of evil doers;—ⁱand will not sit with the wicked.
- 6 ^kI will wash mine hands in innocency:⁷—^lso will I compass thine altar, O LORD:
- 7 ^mThat I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, ⁿAnd tell of all thy wondrous works.
- 8 LORD, ^oI have loved the habitation of thy house,
 And the place where thine honour dwelleth.
- 9 ^pGather not my soul with sinners,—nor my life with bloody men:
- 10 In whose hands is mischief,—and their right hand is full of ^qbribes.
- 11 But as for me, I will ^rwalk in mine integrity:
^sRedeem me, and be merciful unto me.
- 12 ^tMy foot standeth in an ^ueven place:⁸—^xin the congregations will I bless the LORD.

1 His dispensations towards his creatures.
 2 The greatness of sin not only shows the urgent need of pardon, but illustrates the greatness of the grace which bestows it. See Rom. v. 20.

3 Rather, 'the land.' As peaceful possession of Canaan was one chief promise of the law (see Exod. xx. 12), it came afterwards to include the other blessings of the Jewish covenant; and it is so used by our Lord in Matt. v. 5. The term 'his soul' is commonly used for himself; hence the verse means, he shall have a happy life, and his posterity shall be blessed after him.

4 This probably means, 'on my own part.'

5 No particular occasion can be assigned to Psalm xxvi.; but it strongly resembles others which appear to belong to the period when David was persecuted by Saul. It contains an appeal of conscious rectitude to God's equity and omniscience (vers. 1, 2); an avowal of hearty dislike to the company of the wicked and of love to the house of God (3—8); with an earnest prayer, rising to full confidence, that God will separate him from sinners, and permit him to enjoy His service (9—12).

6 That is, it is never forgotten.

7 Such ablutions betokened the removal of all that would unfit him for the Divine service. Some suppose there is an allusion here to the regulation in Exod. xl. 32, or in Deut. xxi. 1—9.

8 A place of ease and safety.

9 All that can be said respecting the occasion of Psalm xxvii. is that it appears to have been composed when David was suffering from false accusations, which threatened, if they had not already caused, attempts upon his life, and his banishment from the sanctuary. It begins with expressions of confidence in God and delight in his worship (vers. 1—6); but sinks to an humbler tone of earnest petition (7—12); closing, however, with the utterance of patient faith (13, 14).

- 2 When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, Came upon me ^c to eat up my flesh,—they stumbled and fell.
- 3 ^d Though an host should encamp against me,—my heart shall not fear :
Though war should rise against me,—in this ¹ will I be confident.
- 4 ^e One thing have I desired of the LORD,—that will I seek after ;
That I may ^f dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life,
To behold ^g the beauty ² of the LORD,—and to inquire in his temple.
- 5 For ^h in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion :
ⁱ In the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me ;
He shall ^k set me up upon a rock.
- 6 And now shall ^l mine head ^l be lifted up above mine enemies round about me :
Therefore will I offer in his tabernacle ^m sacrifices of joy ;
I will sing, yea, I will sing praises unto the LORD.
- 7 Hear, O LORD, when I cry with my voice :
Have mercy also upon me, and answer me.
- 8 When thou saidst, ⁿ Seek ye my face ;
My heart said unto thee, ^o Thy face, LORD, will I seek.
- 9 ^p Hide not thy face far from me ;—^q put not thy servant away in anger :
^r Thou hast been my help ; leave me not,
Neither forsake me, O God of my salvation.
- 10 ^s When my father and my mother ³ forsake me,—then ^t the LORD will take me up.
- 11 ^u Teach me thy way, O LORD,
And lead me in ^v a plain path, because of mine enemies.
- 12 ^w Deliver me not over unto the will of mine enemies :
For ^x false witnesses are risen up against me,—and such as ^a breathe out cruelty.
- 13 I had fainted, ⁴ unless I had believed to see the goodness of the LORD ^b in the land of the living.
- 14 ^c Wait on the LORD : ^d be of good courage,
And ^e he shall strengthen thine heart :—wait, I say, on the LORD.

PSALM XXVIII.

A Psalm of David. ⁵

- 1 UNTO thee will I cry, O LORD ^f my rock ; ^g be not silent to me :
^h Lest, if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit.
- 2 Hear the voice of my supplications, when I cry unto thee, ⁱ When I lift up my hands ^k toward thy holy oracle. ⁶
- 3 ^l Draw me not away with the wicked, ⁷ and with the workers of iniquity,
^m Which speak peace to their neighbours, but mischief is in their hearts.
- 4 ⁿ Give ⁸ them according to their deeds,
And according to the wickedness of their endeavours :
^o Give them after the work of their hands ;—render to them their desert.
- 5 Because ^p they regard not the works ⁹ of the LORD,
Nor the operation of his hands,
He shall destroy them, and not build them up.
- 6 Blessed be the LORD,—because he hath heard the voice of my supplications.
- 7 The LORD is ^q my strength and ^r my shield ;
My heart ^s trusted in him, and I am helped :
^t Therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth ;—and with my song will I praise him.
- 8 The LORD is their ¹⁰ strength,—and he is the ^u saving strength of ^v his anointed.
- 9 ^w Save thy people, and bless ^x thine inheritance :
Feed [or, rule ^a] them also, ^b and lift them up for ever.

4 See Ps. cxix. 92, where a similar sentence is found without ellipsis.

5 Psalm xxviii. was probably written after David had been anointed (ver. 8) as king of Israel. Beyond this nothing can be ascertained respecting its date or origin.

It contains a prayer (vers. 1—5) and thanksgiving (6—9), for deliverance from enemies.

6 See 1 Kings vi. 16 ; viii. 30 ; and note on 1 Kings viii. 27.

7 David prays that he may not be confounded in death with those whose life he abhors.

8 See note on Ps. v. 10.

9 By the 'works' of God is often meant his moral government, especially his infliction of penal judgments. See Ps. lxiv. 9 ; Isa. v. 12 ; xxviii. 21.

10 That is, the strength of the people afterwards mentioned, of whom David was the anointed head ; and he is spoken of as such in the next clause.

PSALM XXIX. 1—XXXI. 1.

PSALM XXIX.

A Psalm of David. 1

- 1 ^cGIVE unto the LORD, O ye mighty, ²—give unto the LORD glory and strength.
- 2 Give unto the LORD the glory due unto his name;
Worship the LORD in ^dthe beauty of holiness³ [or, in his glorious sanctuary].
- 3 ^cThe voice of the LORD is upon the waters:
^fThe God of glory ^gthundereth:—the LORD is upon many waters.
- 4 The voice of the LORD is powerful;—the voice of the LORD is full of majesty.
- 5 The voice of the LORD breaketh the cedars;
Yea, the LORD breaketh ^hthe cedars of Lebanon.
- 6 ⁱHe maketh them also to skip like a calf;
^kLebanon and ^lSirion like a young unicorn.
- 7 The voice of the LORD divideth ^mthe flames of fire.
- 8 The voice of the LORD ⁿshaketh the wilderness;
The LORD shaketh the wilderness of ^oKadesh.
- 9 The voice of the LORD maketh ^pthe hinds to calve,—and discovereth the forests:
And ^qin his temple doth every one speak of his glory.⁵
- 10 The LORD ^rsitteth upon the flood;—yea, ^sthe LORD sitteth King for ever.
- 11 ^tThe LORD will give strength unto his people;
The LORD ^uwill bless his people with peace.

PSALM XXX.

A Psalm and Song ^xat the dedication of the house of David. 6

- 1 I WILL extol thee, O LORD; for thou hast ^ylifted me up,
And hast not made my foes ^zto rejoice over me.
- 2 O LORD my God, I cried unto thee,—and thou hast ^ahealed me.
- 3 O LORD, ^bthou hast brought up my soul from the grave:
Thou hast kept me alive, that I should not ^cgo down to the pit.
- 4 ^dSing unto the LORD, O ye saints of his,
And give thanks at the remembrance of ^ehis holiness.
- 5 For ^fhis anger endureth but a moment;—^gin his favour is life:
Weeping may endure for a night,—^hbut joy cometh ⁱin the morning.⁷
- 6 And ^kin my prosperity I said,—I shall never be moved.
- 7 LORD, ^lby thy favour thou hast made my mountain to stand strong:⁸
^mThou didst hide thy face,—and I was troubled.
- 8 I cried to thee, O LORD;—and unto the LORD I made supplication.
- 9 What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit?
ⁿShall the dust praise thee?—shall it declare thy truth?
- 10 Hear, O LORD, and have mercy upon me:—LORD, ^obe thou my helper.
- 11 ^pThou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing:
Thou hast put off my ^qsackcloth, and ^rgirded me with gladness;
- 12 To the end that my ^sglory may sing praise to thee, ^tand not be silent.
O LORD my God, I will give thanks unto thee for ever.

^p Ps. 143. 1.

1 Part of Psalm xxix. is to be found in 1 Chron. xvi. 8—36; on which see note. It represents the irresistible power of God, the Protector and Benefactor of his people (ver. 11). Its imagery is taken from one of those awful tempests which, coming up from the Great Sea on the west, sometimes sweep with terrific fury across the whole land, from Lebanon on the north to the wilderness of Kadesh in the south. It teaches us how to interpret the language of nature, and to turn it to our own edification.

2 Either 'kings' or 'angels,' as in Ps. lxxxix. 6.

3 Many explain this of the holy garments of the priests. But, if these are referred to, it is only as representing that spiritual 'holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord.'

4 Alluding probably to the forked flames of lightning.

5 Rather, 'And in his temple, all of it says Glory!' As if every peal were a proclamation of God's glory, echoing through his heavenly palace.

6 Rather, 'A psalm (a song of dedication for the house) of David.' If this inscription be correct, the occasion of Psalm xxx. will be found in 2 Sam. xxiv.; 1 Chron. xxi. David purchased the spot where, in answer to his prayer, the Divine mercy was displayed; and, having built an altar, and offered sacrifices, which were accepted, he dedicated the ground as 'the house of the Lord God,' and the site of the temple (1 Chron. xxii. 1). The psalm naturally refers more to the recent pestilence than to the sanctuary not yet built. It shows how a true penitent, when restored to the enjoyment of God's favour, forgets neither his sins, his chastenings, nor his pardon.

7 In the case of the pestilence, this was almost literally true; nor are any Divine chastisements continued longer than is necessary.

8 'I have now learned and acknowledge that I was strong by Thy favour, not by my own power.'

9 In Psalm xxxi. David expresses his confidence in God (vers. 1—8); describes his extreme peril and suffering, and asks help (9—18), which he gratefully acknowledges,

PSALM XXXI. 2—XXXII. 3.

- 2 ^x Bow down thine ear to me;—deliver me speedily:
Be thou my strong rock,—^y for an house of defence to save me.
- 3 ^z For thou art my rock and my fortress;
Therefore ^a for thy name's sake ^b lead me, and guide me.
- 4 ^c Pull me out of the net that they have laid privily for me:
For thou art my strength.
- 5 ^d Into thine hand I commit my spirit:
^e Thou hast redeemed me, O LORD ^f God of truth.
- 6 ^g I have hated them ^h that regard lying vanities: ¹—but I trust in the LORD.
- 7 I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy:
For ⁱ thou hast considered my trouble;—thou hast ^k known my soul in adversities;
- 8 And hast ^l not shut me up into the hand of the enemy:
^m Thou hast set my feet in a large room.
- 9 Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble:
ⁿ Mine eye is consumed with grief,—yea, my soul and my belly.
- 10 For my life is spent with grief,—and my years with sighing:
My strength faileth because of mine iniquity, ²—and ^o my bones are consumed.
- 11 ^p I was a reproach among all mine enemies,
But ^q especially among my neighbours,
And a fear to mine acquaintance: ³—^r they that did see me without fled from me.
- 12 ^s I am forgotten as a dead man out of mind:—I am like a broken vessel.
- 13 ^t For I have heard the slander of many:—^u fear was on every side:
While they ^x took counsel together against me,—they devised to take away my life.
- 14 But I trusted in thee, O LORD:—I said, Thou art my God.
- 15 ^y My times are in thy hand:
Deliver me from the hand of mine enemies,—and from them that persecute me.
- 16 ^z Make thy face to shine upon thy servant:—^a save me for thy mercies' sake.
- 17 ^b Let me not be ashamed, O LORD; for I have called upon thee:
^c Let the wicked be ashamed,—and ^d let them be silent in the grave.
- 18 ^e Let the lying lips be put to silence;
Which ^f speak grievous things proudly and contemptuously against the righteous.
- 19 ^g Oh how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee;
Which thou hast ^h wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men!
- 20 ⁱ Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence from the pride ⁴ of man:
^k Thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues.
- 21 Blessed be the LORD:
For ^l he hath showed me his marvellous kindness ^m in a strong city. ⁵
- 22 For ⁿ I said in my haste, ⁶—^o I am cut off from before thine eyes:
Nevertheless thou heardest the voice of my supplications—when I cried unto thee.
- 23 ^p Oh love the LORD, all ye ^q his saints:
For ^r the LORD preserveth the faithful,—and plentifully ^s rewardeth the proud doer.
- 24 ^t Be of good courage, and ^u he shall strengthen your heart, ^x All ye that hope in the LORD.

PSALM XXXII.

A Psalm of David, ⁷ Maschil [or, giving instruction].

- 1 BLESSED is he whose ^y transgression is forgiven,—whose sin is ^z covered.
- 2 Blessed is the man unto whom the LORD ^a imputeth not iniquity,
And ^b in whose spirit there is no guile.
- 3 ^c When I kept silence, ^d my bones waxed old Through ^e my roaring all the day long.

and exhorts others to expect (19—24). No oppressive sense of guilt is expressed; which favours the ancient opinion that the psalm refers to the events related in 1 Sam. xxiii., and also makes it more appropriate to the sufferings of Christ, who, in his last agonies on the cross, adopted its words in ver. 5. See Luke xxiii. 46.

¹ This means both idols and all other professed sources of help and happiness which draw men away from God, and deceive those who trust in them (Jonah ii. 8).

² Rather, 'my affliction.'

³ It is dangerous to be connected with me.

⁴ Or, 'the plots of men.' See ver. 13.

⁵ Representing the security of Divine protection.

⁶ The hurry of fear.

⁷ Psalm xxxii. was probably composed by David after he had obtained forgiveness from God, on repenting of his sin in the matter of Uriah. See 2 Sam. xii., and notes. It shows the happiness, not of one who is conscious of innocence, but of one who, humbly confessing his guilt and trusting only in the Divine mercy, has received forgiveness; and it puts this in instructive contrast with the misery of an impenitent concealment of sin. The psalmist, having announced his subject (vers. 1, 2), addresses God, recounting his painful and his blessed experiences (3—7), and applies to his fellow-men the important lesson he had learned (8—11). Perhaps it is on this account that the psalm has the name 'Maschil' (didactic), which is borne also by twelve others.

⁸ That is, 'So long as I did not acknowledge my sins to God.'

- 4 For day and night thy ^f hand was heavy upon me :
My moisture is turned into the drought of summer. ¹ Selah.
- 5 ^g I acknowledged my sin unto thee,—and mine iniquity have I not hid.
^h I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the LORD ;
And ⁱ thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. Selah.
- 6 ^k For this shall every one that is godly ^l pray unto thee
In a time when thou mayest be found :
Surely ^m in the floods of great waters ²—they shall not come nigh unto him.
- 7 ⁿ Thou art my hiding-place ;—thou shalt preserve me from trouble ;
Thou shalt ^o compass me about with ^p songs of deliverance. Selah.
- 8 ^q I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go :
I will guide thee with mine eye.
- 9 ^r Be ye not as the horse,—or as the mule, which have ^s no understanding :
Whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle,
Lest they come near unto thee. ³
- 10 ^t Many sorrows shall be to the wicked :
But ^u he that trusteth in the LORD, mercy shall compass him about.
- 11 ^v Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous :
And shout for joy, all ye that are ^w upright in heart.

PSALM XXXIII. 4

- 1 REJOICE ^z in the LORD, O ye righteous :
For ^a praise is comely for the upright.
- 2 Praise the LORD with harp :
Sing unto him with the psaltery ^b and an instrument of ten strings.
- 3 ^c Sing unto him a new song : ⁵—play skilfully with a loud noise.
- 4 For ^d the word ⁶ of the LORD is right ;—and ^e all his works are done in truth.
- 5 ^f He loveth righteousness and judgment :
^g The earth is full of the goodness of the LORD.
- 6 ^h By the word of the LORD were the heavens made ;
And ⁱ all the host of them ^k by the breath of his mouth.
- 7 ^l He gathereth the waters of the sea together ^m as an heap :
He layeth up the depth in storehouses.
- 8 Let all the earth fear the LORD :
Let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him.
- 9 For ⁿ he spake, and it was done ;—he commanded, and it stood fast.
- 10 ^o The LORD bringeth the counsel of the heathen to nought :
^p He maketh the devices of the people of none effect.
- 11 ^q The counsel of the LORD standeth for ever,
The thoughts of his heart to all generations.
- 12 ^r Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD ;
And the people whom he hath ^s chosen for his own inheritance.
- 13 ^t The LORD looketh from heaven ;—^u he beholdeth all the sons of men.
- 14 From the place of his habitation—he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth.
- 15 ^v He fashioneth their hearts alike ; ⁷—^w he considereth all their works.
- 16 ^z There is no king saved by the multitude of an host :
^a A mighty man is not delivered by much strength.
- 17 ^b An horse is a vain thing for safety :
Neither shall he deliver any ^c by his great strength.
- 18 ^d Behold the eye of the LORD is ^e upon them that fear him,
Upon them that hope in his mercy ;

1 Like a plant shrivelled and dried up by intense heat.

2 The psalmist, like the apostle Paul, regards his own experience of forgiveness as designed to be an example to others. See 1 Tim. i. 16.

3 Rather, 'With bit and bridle must its ornament (or, trappings) be, to compel [it], or it will not approach thee ;' that is, it will not obey. The true believer's submission to the will of God is not compulsory, but voluntary.

4 Psalm xxxiii. is a jubilant hymn of God's people ; exulting (vers. 1—3), even in view of the power and number of their foes, in contemplating, 1. God's attributes and works (4—11) ; 2. His government of all, and protection of themselves (12—22). It is quite general, and cannot be referred to any special occasion ; nor does it need illustration from any particular facts. Its style is not unlike that of David, to whom it is ascribed in the Sept.

5 Every fresh contemplation of God may furnish new subjects of praise.

6 His word of promise ; which, in the next clause, he is said truthfully to fulfil.

7 This means, not that he makes one to resemble another, but that he fashions them all.

- 20 ^h Our soul waiteth for the LORD :—ⁱ he is our help and our shield.
 21 For ^k our heart shall rejoice in him,—because we have trusted in his holy name.
 22 Let thy mercy, O LORD, be upon us,—according as we hope in thee.

PSALM XXXIV.

*A Psalm of David,*¹ when he changed his behaviour before Abimelech [or, Achish¹]; who drove him away, and he departed.

- 1 I WILL ^m bless the LORD at all times :
 His praise shall continually be in my mouth.
 2 My soul shall ⁿ make her boast in the LORD :
^o The humble shall hear thereof, and be glad.
 3 Oh ^p magnify the LORD with me,—and let us exalt his name together.
 4 I ^q sought the LORD, and he heard me,—and delivered me from all my fears.
 5 They² looked unto him, and ^r were lightened :—and their faces were not ashamed.
 6 ^s This poor man³ cried, and the LORD heard him,
 And ^t saved him out of all his troubles.
 7 ^u The angel of the LORD ^x encampeth⁴ round about them that fear him,
 And delivereth them.
 8 Oh ^v taste and see that ^z the LORD is good :
^a Blessed is the man that trusteth in him.
 9 ^b Oh fear the LORD, ye his saints :—for ^c there is no want to them that fear him.
 10 ^d The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger :
^e But they that seek the LORD shall not want any good thing.
 11 Come, ye children, hearken unto me :—^f I will teach you the fear of the LORD.
 12 ^g What man is he that desireth life,
 And loveth many days, that he may see good ?
 13 ^h Keep thy tongue from evil,—and thy lips from ⁱ speaking guile.
 14 ^k Depart from evil, and ^l do good ;—^m seek peace, and pursue it.
 15 ⁿ The eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous,
 And his ears are open unto their ^o cry.
 16 ^p The face of the LORD is against them that do evil,
^q To cut off the remembrance of them from the earth.
 17 The righteous cry, and ^r the LORD heareth,
 And delivereth them out of all their troubles.
 18 ^s The LORD is nigh⁵ unto them that are of a broken heart ;
 And saveth such as be of a contrite spirit.
 19 ^t Many are the afflictions of the righteous :
^u But the LORD delivereth him out of them all.
 20 He keepeth all his bones :—^v not one of them is broken.
 21 ^z Evil shall slay the wicked :⁵
 And they that hate the righteous shall be desolate.
 22 The LORD ^a redeemeth the soul of his servants :
 And ^b none of them that trust in him shall be desolate.

PSALM XXXV.

*A Psalm of David.*⁶

- 1 PLEAD⁷ ^c my cause, O LORD, with them that strive with me :
^d Fight against them that fight against me.
 2 ^e Take hold of shield and buckler,—and stand up for mine help.
 3 Draw out also the spear,—and ^f stop the way against them that persecute me :
 Say unto my soul, I am thy salvation.

¹ Psalm xxxiv., like Psa. xxv., is alphabetical. As to the statement in the title respecting its origin, the quiet tone pervading it, its didactic character, and its artificial arrangement, seem inconsistent with the idea that it was called forth by the very critical and exciting circumstances in which David was then placed; and compel us to suppose that, if it refers at all to such events, it was composed long afterwards. The psalmist declares his intention publicly to praise Jehovah (vers. 1—3), because of the answers which he has given to prayer (4—7); and exhorts all to fear and trust him (8—14), showing the great blessings which he confers on them who do so (15—22).

² That is, the 'humble' sufferers mentioned in ver. 2. Looking to God in prayer, they were enlightened or gladdened by a gracious answer.

³ The psalmist probably refers particularly to himself, but uses general terms to encourage others to bring their wants to God.

⁴ For remarkable illustrations of this truth, see refs.

⁵ While the sufferings of the righteous are but temporary, those of the wicked shall end in his destruction.

⁶ The incidents recorded in 1 Sam. xxiv. 1—15 may have suggested Psalm xxxv.; but its language is applicable to every godly man suffering from the malice of persecutors, and pre-eminently to our Lord, who appears to refer to ver. 19 in John xv. 25. It is divisible into three parts: an earnest prayer for the punishment of foes (vers. 1—10); a description of their calumnies and ingratitude (11—16); and a prayer, with promise of praise, for the expected deliverance (17—28).

⁷ Rather, 'Strive, O Lord, with them that strive with me.'

PSALM XXXV. 4—XXXVI. 1.

- 4 ^g Let them be confounded and put to shame ^h that seek after my soul :
Let them be ⁱ turned back and brought to confusion that devise my hurt.
- 5 ^k Let them be as chaff before the wind :
^l And let the angel of the LORD chase them.
- 6 Let their way be ^m dark and slippery :
And let the angel of the LORD ¹ persecute them.
- 7 For ⁿ without cause have they ^o hid for me their net in a pit,
Which without cause they have digged for my soul.
- 8 Let ^p destruction come upon him ² at unawares ;
And ^q let his net that he hath hid catch himself :
Into that very destruction let him fall.
- 9 And my soul shall be joyful in the LORD :—^r it shall rejoice in his salvation.
- 10 ^s All my bones shall say,—LORD, ^t who is like unto thee, ^u Which deliverest the poor from him that is too strong for him,
Yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him ?
- 11 ^x False witnesses did rise up ;—they laid to my charge things that I knew not.
- 12 ^y They rewarded me evil for good—to the spoiling of my soul. ³
- 13 But as for me, ^z when they were sick, my clothing was sackcloth :
I humbled my soul with fasting ;
^a And my prayer returned ⁴ into mine own bosom.
- 14 I behaved myself as though he had been my friend or brother :
^b I bowed down heavily, ^c as one that mourneth for his mother.
- 15 But ^d in mine adversity they rejoiced, and gathered themselves together :
Yea, ^e the abjects gathered themselves together against me, and I knew it not ;
They did ^f tear me, and ceased not :
- 16 ^g With hypocritical mockers in feasts, ⁵ ^h they gnashed upon me with their teeth.
- 17 Lord, how long wilt thou ⁱ look on ?
Rescue my soul from their destructions,—^k my darling ⁶ from the lions.
- 18 ^l I will give thee thanks in the great congregation :
I will praise thee among much people.
- 19 ^m Let not them that are mine enemies wrongfully rejoice over me :
Neither ⁿ let them wink with the eye ^o that hate me without a cause.
- 20 For ^p they speak not peace :
But they devise deceitful matters against them that are quiet in the land.
- 21 Yea, they ^q opened their mouth wide against me,
And said, ^r Aha ! aha ! our eye hath seen it.
- 22 This thou hast ^s seen, O LORD :—^t keep not silence : O LORD, be not ^u far from me.
- 23 ^x Stir up thyself, and awake to my judgment,
Even unto my cause, my God and my Lord.
- 24 ^y Judge me, O LORD my God, ^z according to thy righteousness ;
And ^a let them not rejoice over me.
- 25 ^b Let them not say in their hearts, Ah ! so would we have it :
Let them not say, ^c We have swallowed him up.
- 26 ^d Let them be ashamed and brought to confusion together—that rejoice at mine hurt :
Let them ^e be clothed with shame and dishonour
That ^f magnify themselves against me.
- 27 ^g Let them shout for joy, and be glad,—that favour my righteous cause :
Yea, let them ^h say ⁷ continually, Let the LORD be magnified, ⁱ Which hath pleasure in the prosperity of his servant.
- 28 ^k And my tongue shall speak of thy righteousness
And of thy praise, all the day long.

PSALM XXXVI.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David ⁸ the servant of the LORD.

- 1 THE transgression of the wicked saith ⁹ within my heart,
That ^l there is no fear of God before his eyes.

^l Ro. 3. 18.

1 See note on 2 Kings xix. 35.

2 The word 'him' may refer to some leading persecutor among the psalmist's foes ; or the meaning may be, 'Let destruction come on each of my adversaries.'

3 Rather, 'bereavement to my soul.' This is the 'evil' with which he was rewarded.

4 Probably referring to one of the postures of prayer, in which the head was bowed down very low, so that the words might be said to return into the bosom.

5 Literally, 'with profligate cake-jesters,' or parasites :

time-serving flatterers, who attended at the tables of the great, to gain a living by buffoonery.

6 See note on Psa. xxii. 20.

7 Let signal mercy cause them to say.

8 Psalm xxxvi. is so general in its terms as to afford no clue to its origin. It forcibly contrasts the devices of the wicked (vers. 1—4) with the gracious dealings of Jehovah (5—9) ; concluding with the prayer and expectation that the Lord will triumph over them (10—12).

9 The Hebrew word here used is uniformly appropriated

- 2 For ^m he flattereth himself in his own eyes,
Until his iniquity be found to be hateful.¹
- 3 The words of his mouth are iniquity and ⁿ deceit:
^o He hath left off to be wise, and to do good.
- 4 ^p He deviseth mischief upon his bed;
He setteth himself ^q in a way that is not good;—he abhorreth not evil.
- 5 ^r Thy mercy, O LORD, is in the heavens;
And ^s thy faithfulness reacheth unto the clouds.
- 6 ^t Thy righteousness is like the great mountains;—^u thy judgments are a great deep:²
O LORD, ^x thou preservest man and beast.
- 7 ^y How excellent is thy lovingkindness, O God!
Therefore the children of men ^z put their trust under the shadow of thy wings.
- 8 ^a They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house:³
And thou shalt make them drink of ^b the river ^c of thy pleasures.
- 9 ^d For with thee is the fountain of life:—^e in thy light shall we see light.⁴
- 10 Oh continue thy lovingkindness ^f unto them that know thee;
And thy righteousness to the ^g upright in heart.
- 11 Let not the foot of pride come against me,
And let not the hand of the wicked remove me.⁵
- 12 ^h There are the workers of iniquity fallen:
They are cast down, ⁱ and shall not be able to rise.

PSALM XXXVII.

A Psalm of David.⁶

- 1 ^k FRET not thyself because of evildoers,
Neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity.
- 2 For they shall soon be cut down ^l like the grass,—and wither as the green herb.
- 3 ^m Trust in the LORD, and do good;
So shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily ⁿ thou shalt be fed.
- 4 ^o Delight thyself also in the LORD;
And ^p he shall give thee the desires of thine heart.
- 5 ^q Commit thy way unto the LORD—trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass.⁸
- 6 ^r And he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light,
And thy judgment⁹ as the noonday.
- 7 ^s Rest in the LORD,¹⁰ ^t and wait patiently for him:
^u Fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, ^x Because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass.
- 8 Cease from anger, and forsake wrath:—^y fret not thyself in any wise to do evil.
- 9 ^z For evildoers shall be cut off:
But those that wait upon the LORD, they shall ^a inherit the earth.¹¹
- 10 For ^b yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be:
Yea, ^c thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be.
- 11 ^d But the meek shall inherit the earth;
And shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.
- 12 ^e The wicked plotteth against the just,—^f and gnasheth upon him with his teeth.
- 13 ^g The Lord shall laugh at him:—for he seeth that ^h his day¹² is coming.
- 14 ⁱ The wicked have drawn out the sword, and have bent¹³ their bow, to a Divine (or prophetic) declaration; and the best rendering of this difficult passage appears to be, 'As to the wicked, [his] iniquity says, like an oracle, within my heart, No fear of God before his eyes.' His crimes produce in me the strongest conviction that he disregards God.

1 Rather, 'For he flattereth himself in his own eyes with respect to [God's] finding and hating his sin.'

2 Or, 'a vast ocean;' referring rather to God's all-comprehending providence than to the mysteriousness of his doings.

3 That is, 'with the abundant provision made for thy household;' for the members of thy family. See note on Psa. xxiii. 6. There is in the word 'house' no necessary reference to the services of the Jewish sanctuary.

4 'Thou alone art the exhaustless source of all blessedness; in thy favour only shall we realize true happiness.'

5 Or, 'expel me' from my home. Let me not suffer the insults and tyranny of my foes.

6 Psalm xxxvii. is alphabetical; differing, however, from Psa. xxv., xxxiv., in that the successive letters recur at more distant intervals. It is a collection of maxims, the result of long experience (ver. 25); which are all variations of one leading thought, that the sinner, however apparently prosperous, is far from being an object of envy or of fear; and that ultimately 'it will be well only with those who fear God' (Eccles. viii. 12).

7 Rather, 'and thou shalt feed on (or enjoy) truth.'

8 Or, 'do it;' i. e. whatever is necessary to make thy 'way' prosperous.

9 Or, 'thy cause.'

10 Or, 'Be silent to Jehovah;' i. e. Await patiently his doings. 'The wrath of man,' whoever may be its objects (see ver. 8), 'worketh not the righteousness of God' (James i. 20).

11 Rather, 'the land.' This expression, which is repeated four times in this psalm, signifies the enjoyment of God's promised favours. See note on Psa. xxv. 13.

12 His day of punishment. See Job xviii. 20.

13 Literally, 'have trodden;' the bow being bent by putting it under the feet. See Psa. vii. 12.

- To cast down the poor and needy,—and to slay such as be of upright conversation.¹
- 15 ^k Their sword shall enter into their own heart,—and ^l their bows shall be broken.
- 16 ^m A little that a righteous man hath—is better than the riches of many wicked.
- 17 For ⁿ the arms of the wicked shall be broken :
But ^o the LORD upholdeth the righteous.
- 18 The LORD ^p knoweth ^q the days of the upright :
And their inheritance shall be ^r for ever.
- 19 They shall not be ashamed in the evil time :
And ^s in the days of famine they shall be satisfied.
- 20 But ^t the wicked shall perish,
And the enemies of the LORD shall be as the fat² of lambs :
They shall consume ; ^u into smoke shall they consume away.
- 21 The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again :³
But ^v the righteous showeth mercy, and giveth.
- 22 ^w For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth ;
And they that be cursed of him ^x shall be cut off.
- 23 ^y The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD :
And ^z he delighteth in his way.
- 24 ^a Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down :
For ^b the LORD upholdeth him with his hand.
- 25 I have been young, and now am old ;
Yet have I not seen ^c the righteous forsaken,—nor his seed ^d begging bread.⁴
- 26 ^e He is ever merciful, and lendeth ;—and ^f his seed is blessed.⁵
- 27 ^g Depart from evil, and ^h do good ;—and dwell for evermore.
- 28 For the LORD ⁱ loveth judgment,—and ^j forsaketh not his saints ;
They are preserved for ever :—^k but the seed of the wicked shall be cut off.
- 29 ^l The righteous shall inherit the land,—and dwell therein for ever.
- 30 ^m The mouth of the righteous speaketh wisdom,
And his tongue talketh of judgment.⁶
- 31 ⁿ The law of his God is in his heart ;—^o none of his steps shall slide.
- 32 The wicked ^p watcheth the righteous,—and seeketh to slay him.
- 33 The LORD ^q will not leave him in his hand,—nor ^r condemn⁷ him when he is judged.
- 34 ^s Wait on the LORD, and ^t keep his way,—and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land :
^u When the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it.
- 35 ^v I have seen the wicked in great power,⁸
And spreading himself like a green⁹ bay tree.
- 36 Yet he ^w passed away, and, lo, he was not :
Yea, I sought him, but he could not be found.
- 37 Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright :—for ^x the end of that man is peace.
- 38 ^y But the transgressors shall be destroyed together :
The end of the wicked shall be cut off.
- 39 But ^z the salvation of the righteous is of the LORD :
He is their strength ^a in the time of trouble.
- 40 And ^b the LORD shall help them, and deliver them :
He shall deliver them from the wicked,—and save them, ^c because they trust in him.

¹ Heb., 'way,' i. e. mode of life. Our translators always use the word 'conversation' in this sense.

² Either the sacrificial fat, which was burned upon the altar ; or perhaps 'the preciousness (beauty) of the fields.' See ver. 2 ; Ps. xc. 5 ; Isa. xl. 6—8.

³ This seems to refer not so much to the disposition as to the ability of the righteous and the wicked : the former, being prospered by God, can practise the generosity which his heart prompts ; the latter, being under a Divine curse, has nothing to give if he would. See Deut. xv. 8 ; xxviii. 12 ; and comp. Prov. xxii. 7.

⁴ This is not to be understood absolutely, but generally, and with due regard to the peculiar promises of the law of Moses, which connected temporal prosperity with obedience ; so that destitution was a token of Divine displeasure.

⁵ Rather, 'for a blessing ;' to himself and to others.

⁶ Rather, 'uttereth judgment,' or rectitude.

⁷ God will vindicate him from false accusations.

⁸ Rather, 'I saw a wicked [man], a terrible [one].'

⁹ The Hebrew word signifies indigenous ; native to the soil, and therefore flourishing in it.

¹⁰ This is a penitential psalm ; in which the sufferer, confessing his sin, complains of sickness (vers. 1—10), and of the desertion and enmity of men (11—20) ; interspersing urgent prayers for relief (1, 9, 15, 21, 22). There is nothing in the psalm itself to determine its author or occasion ; but it has been thought to refer to David's sufferings during the rebellion of Absalom.

- 3 There is ^a no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger ;
^o Neither is there any rest [or, health] in my bones because of my sin.
- 4 For ^p mine iniquities are gone ^q over mine head :¹
 As an heavy burden they are too ^r heavy for me.
- 5 My wounds stink and are corrupt—because of my foolishness.
- 6 I am troubled ;² ^s I am bowed down greatly ;—^t I go mourning all the day long.
- 7 For my loins are filled with ^u a loathsome disease :³
 And there is ^v no soundness in my flesh.
- 8 I am feeble and sore broken :
^x I have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart.
- 9 Lord, all my desire is before thee ;—and my groaning is not hid from thee.
- 10 ^y My heart panteth, my strength faileth me :
 As for ^z the light of mine eyes, it also is gone from me.
- 11 ^a My lovers and my friends ^b stand aloof from my sore [or, stroke] ;
 And my kinsmen [or, my neighbours] ^c stand afar off.
- 12 They also that seek after my life ^d lay snares for me :
 And they that seek my hurt ^e speak mischievous things,
 And ^f imagine deceits all the day long.
- 13 But ^g I, as a deaf man, heard not ;
 And I was as a dumb man that openeth not his mouth.⁴
- 14 ^h Thus I was as a man that heareth not,—and in whose mouth are no reproofs.
- 15 For in thee, O LORD, ⁱ do I hope :—thou wilt hear, O LORD my God.
- 16 For I said, Hear me, ^k lest otherwise they should rejoice over me :
 When my ^l foot slippeth, they ^m magnify themselves against me.
- 17 For I am ready to halt,—and my sorrow is continually before me.
- 18 For I will ⁿ declare mine iniquity ;—I will ^o be sorry for my sin.
- 19 But ^p mine enemies are lively, and they are strong :
 And they that ^q hate me wrongfully are multiplied.
- 20 They also ^r that render evil for good are mine adversaries ;
^s Because I follow the thing that good is.⁵
- 21 Forsake me not, O LORD :—O my God, ^t be not far from me.
- 22 ^u Make haste to help me,—O LORD ^x my salvation.

PSALM XXXIX.

To the chief Musician, even to ^y Jeduthun, 6 A Psalm of David.

- 1 I SAID, I will ^z take heed to my ways,—that I sin not with my tongue :
 I will keep ^a my mouth with a bridle,⁷—^b while the wicked is before me.⁸
- 2 ^c I was dumb with silence,—I held my peace, ^d even from good ;
 And my sorrow was stirred.⁹
- 3 My heart was hot within me,—while I was musing ^e the fire burned :
 Then spake I with my tongue.
- 4 LORD, ^f make me to know mine end,¹⁰—and the measure of my days, what it is ;
 That I may know how frail I am [or, what time I have here].
- 5 Behold, ^g thou hast made my days as an handbreadth ;
 And ^h mine age is as nothing before thee :
ⁱ Verily every man at his best state is altogether vanity. Selah.
- 6 Surely every man walketh in ^k a vain show :—surely they are disquieted in vain :
^l He heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them.
- 7 And now, LORD, ^m what wait I for ?—ⁿ my hope is in thee.
- 8 Deliver me from all my transgressions :—make me not ^o the reproach of the foolish.
- 9 ^p I was dumb, I opened not my mouth ;—because ^q thou didst it.

1 Like a flood of waters.

2 Or, 'I have writhed ;' i. e. with pain.

3 Some, with greater probability, render this, 'with a burning,' or fever.

4 This is mentioned both as an aggravation of his sufferings, and as an instance of his patience under them.

5 Rather, 'because I follow good,' i. e. earnestly endeavour to do what is right. Comp. Acts xxiv. 16.

6 Jeduthun was one of the leaders of sacred music in the time of David : see 1 Chron. xvi. 41 ; xxv. 1. Psalm xxxix. is supposed by some to record first (vers. 1—6) the writer's former thoughts respecting the Divine dispensations, which he now regrets, and for which he proceeds (7—13) to substitute the utterance of more correct feelings. But it is more likely that vers. 1—3 describe the occasion and feelings which prompted the expressions in the rest of the psalm (4—13) ; which contains a mixture of querulousness and submission, the latter gradually prevailing over the former. It thus resembles some portions of the book of Job, with which even verbal coincidences may be traced.

7 Rather, 'a muzzle.'

8 This may mean either while they are personally present, or while their conduct and prosperity are before my mind.

9 His constrained silence, so far from producing any good, only gave intensity to his painful feelings.

10 The end of my sufferings ; and, coincident with these, of my life.

- 10 ^r Remove thy stroke away from me :—^s I am consumed by the blow of thine hand.
 11 When thou with rebukes dost correct man for iniquity,
 Thou makest his beauty ^t to consume away like a moth :¹
^u Surely every man is vanity. Selah.
 12 Hear my prayer, O LORD, and give ear unto my cry ;
^x Hold not thy peace at my tears :
^y For I am a stranger with thee,—and a sojourner,² ^z as all my fathers were.
 13 ^a Oh spare me, that I may recover strength,³—before I go hence, and ^b be no more.

PSALM XL.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.⁴

- 1 I ^c WAITED patiently for the LORD ;
 And ^d he inclined unto me, and heard my cry.
 2 ^e He brought me up also out of an horrible pit,⁵—out of ^f the miry clay,
 And ^g set my feet upon a rock,—and ^h established my goings.
 3 ⁱ And he hath put a new song in my mouth,—even praise unto our God :
^k Many shall see it, and fear,—and shall trust in the LORD.
 4 ^l Blessed is that man that maketh the LORD his trust,
 And ^m respecteth not the proud, nor such as ⁿ turn aside to lies.
 5 ^o Many,⁶ O LORD my God, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done,
^p And thy thoughts which are to us-ward :
 They cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee :
 If I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered.
 6 ^q Sacrifice and offering⁷ thou didst not desire ;—^r mine ears hast thou opened :⁸
 Burnt offering and sin offering hast thou not required.
 7 Then said I, Lo, I come :—in the volume of the book it is ^s written of me,
 8 ^t I delight⁹ to do thy will, O my God :—yea, thy law is ^u within my heart.
 9 ^v I have preached righteousness in the great ^x congregation :¹⁰
 Lo, ^y I have not refrained my lips, O LORD, ^z thou knowest.
 10 ^a I have not hid ^b thy righteousness within my heart ;
 I have declared thy faithfulness and ^c thy salvation :
 I have not concealed thy lovingkindness and thy truth from the great congregation.
 11 Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O LORD :
^d Let thy lovingkindness and thy truth continually preserve me.
 12 For ^e innumerable evils have compassed me about :
^f Mine iniquities¹¹ have taken hold upon me,—so that I am not able to look up ;
^g They are more than the hairs of mine head :—therefore ^h my heart faileth me.
 13 ⁱ Be pleased, O LORD, to deliver me :—O LORD, ^k make haste to help me.
 14 ^l Let them be ashamed and confounded together
 That seek after my soul to destroy it ;
 Let them be driven backward and put to shame—that wish me evil.
 15 ^m Let them be ⁿ desolate for a reward of their shame—^o that say unto me, Aha ! aha !

1 Either (as in Job iv. 19) as a moth perishes, or (as in Job xiii. 28) as a moth consumes a garment.

2 One who is living in a foreign country, without the rights of citizenship, and who therefore especially needs the kindness of those around him. The psalmist appeals to the Divine compassion, that, as his life was so precarious in its tenure, it should not be calamitous also.

3 Rather, 'Oh turn from me, that I may be comforted ;' i. e. Do not look upon me to chastise me any more.

4 In Psalm xl., David rises from praise for recovery from severe suffering (vers. 1—4) to a devout and joyful contemplation of God's marvellous works of salvation (5—10) ; from which he takes occasion to pray for continued protection (11—17). The general views of the second part (vers. 5—10) become decidedly prophetic ; the psalmist evidently speaking rather in the name of the great 'Captain of salvation' than in his own. Vers. 13—17 are repeated in Psa. lxx., having been detached, perhaps, for separate use in religious worship.

5 Or, from 'a pit of roaring ;' i. e. of roaring waters. See Psa. lxxix. 2.

6 Or, 'Thou, O Jehovah my God, makest thy wonders and thy thoughts toward us many ; nothing can be compared unto thee : I will declare and speak of them ; they are not to be numbered.' The psalmist then goes on to speak of these incomparable wonders.

7 See note on Psa. li. 16.

8 Literally, 'Ears hast thou digged for me :' a phrase which may refer either to the removal of deafness, or to the command in Exod. xxi. 6 ; in either case implying attention and obedience (Isa. 1. 5). It is clear that God's thoughts (spoken of in ver. 5) contemplate the superseding of the numerous meal, burnt, and sin-offerings of the law, by the voluntary obedience of Him to whom the great work of salvation had been already assigned in God's revealed will (vers. 7, 8). And in this sense the passage is quoted and commented on in Heb. x. 5—10 ; where the Septuagint version is used, as its variation from the Hebrew does not affect the general sense, or interfere with the object of the quotation.

9 Whilst all genuine obedience must be willing and hearty, such especially was the character of Christ's obedience unto death ; by which God's will was done, his law honoured, and a way opened for the acceptance of the willing and hearty service of all those who approach unto God through Him.

10 The whole community of the people of Israel is repeatedly so termed, especially when convened for religious objects. See refs.

11 Some, who apply the whole psalm to Christ alone, render this word 'calamities' or 'punishments ;' i. e. of the sins of men. But see note on title.

- 16 ^p Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee :
Let such as love thy salvation ^q say continually, The LORD be magnified.
17 ^r But I am poor and needy;—yet ^s the LORD thinketh upon me :
Thou art ^t my help and my deliverer;—^u make no tarrying, O my God.

PSALM XLI.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.¹

- 1 BLESSED ^x is he that considereth the poor [weak, or, sick] :
^y The LORD will deliver him in time of trouble.
2 The LORD will ^z preserve him, and keep him alive ;
And he shall be blessed upon the earth :
^a And thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies.
3 The LORD will ^b strengthen him upon the bed of languishing :
Thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness.
4 I said, ^c LORD, be merciful unto me :
^d Heal my soul ; for I have sinned against thee.
5 Mine enemies speak evil of me,—When shall he die, and ^e his name perish ?
6 And if he² come to see me, he ^f speaketh vanity :
His heart gathereth iniquity³ to itself;—^g when he goeth abroad, he telleth it.
7 All that hate me ^h whisper together ⁱ against me :
Against me do they devise my hurt.
8 An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him :
^k And now that he lieth he shall rise up no more.
9 ^l Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted,
^m Which did eat of my bread,—hath lifted up his heel⁴ against me.
10 But thou, O LORD, be merciful unto me,
And raise me up, ⁿ that I may requite them.
11 By this I know that thou favourest me,
^o Because mine enemy doth not triumph over me.
12 And as for me, thou upholdest me in mine integrity,
And ^p settest me before thy face⁵ for ever.
13 ^q Blessed⁶ be the LORD God of Israel—from everlasting, and to everlasting.
^r Amen, and Amen.

PSALMS XLII., XLIII.

To the chief Musician, Maschil,⁷ for [or, A Psalm giving instruction of^s] the sons of Korah.⁸

- XLII. AS the hart panteth after the water brooks, So⁹ panteth my soul after thee, O God.
2 ^t My soul thirsteth for God, for ^u the living God :
^v When shall I come and appear¹⁰ before God ?

While ^x they continually say unto me, Where is thy God ?
4 When I remember these things, ^y I pour out my soul in me :
For I had gone with the multitude, ^z I went with them to the house of God,
With the voice of joy and praise,—with a multitude that kept holyday.

1 A season of bodily suffering, heightened by the consciousness of guilt, and aggravated by ingratitude and calumny, appears to have given occasion to the composition of this psalm; in which the psalmist pronounces a blessing on those who kindly regard the sufferer (vers. 1—3), complains of his foes (5—9), and entreats Divine mercy (4, 10—12).

2 That is, any of my enemies.

3 That is, collects materials for calumnious reports.

4 A metaphor taken either from wrestlers, who try to supplant their antagonists; or from a horse which kicks at its master. Our Lord applies the latter part of this verse expressly to Judas (see John xiii. 18); omitting the former part, for he had not trusted in the traitor (see John vi. 64).

5 'Thou makest me continually the object of thy compassionate care.'

6 This doxology is supposed not to form a part of the original psalm, but to have been added when the psalms were collected together, in order to mark the close of the first book or division.

7 See note on title of Ps. xxxii. Either Psalms xlii.

and xliii. were at first one (as they are still in more than forty ancient manuscripts), and were separated perhaps for liturgical use; or the second was a later continuation of the first, the spirit of which it carries out with greater cheerfulness. The subject is the complaint of an exile from Divine worship, who longs for deliverance and restoration.

8 The sons of Korah were a Levitical family of singers (see 1 Chron. vi. 31—37, and note), who continued in that employment from the time of David as late as the reign of Jehoshaphat: see 2 Chron. xx. 19. It is not unlikely that this and other psalms with a similar title were composed by inspired poets of this family. The experience here described would agree with that of David and his pious friends when he was excluded from the sanctuary in consequence of Absalom's rebellion: see 2 Sam. xv. 25. These two psalms are remarkable for beauty of imagery, depth of religious emotion, and a noble and victorious struggle against despondency.

9 That is, with intense desire, and an overwhelming sense of want.

^d Hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him—^e for the help of his countenance.¹
- 6 O my God, my soul is cast down within me:
^f Therefore will I remember thee ^g from the land of Jordan,
And of the Hermonites,² from the hill Mizar [or, the little hill ^h].
- 7 ⁱ Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy waterspouts;³
^k All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me.
- 8 Yet the LORD will ^l command his lovingkindness in the daytime,
And ^m in the night his song shall be with me,
And my prayer unto the God of my life.⁴
- 9 I will say unto "God my rock, ⁿ Why hast thou forgotten me?

- 10 As with a sword in my bones,⁵ mine enemies reproach me;

XLIII. "Judge me, O God, and ^x plead my cause against an ungodly⁶ nation:
Oh deliver me from the deceitful and unjust man.

- 2 For thou art the God of ^y my strength: why dost thou cast me off?
^z Why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?
- 3 "Oh send out thy light and thy truth;⁷—let them lead me;
Let them bring me unto ^b thy holy hill, and to ^c thy tabernacles.
- 4 Then will I go unto the altar of God,—unto God my exceeding joy:
Yea, upon the harp will I praise thee,—O God, my God.

Hope in God: for I shall yet praise him,
Who is the health of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLIV.

To the chief Musician, for the sons of Korah, Maschil.⁸

- 1 WE have heard with our ears, O God,—^e our fathers have told us,
What work thou didst in their days,—in the times of old.
- 2 How ^f thou didst drive out the heathen with thy hand,—^g and plantedst them;
How thou didst ^h afflict the people,—and cast them out,⁹
- 3 For ⁱ they got not the land in possession by their own sword,
Neither did their own arm save them:
^k But thy right hand, and thine arm, and ^l the light of thy countenance,
^m Because thou hadst a favour unto them.
- 4 "Thou art my¹⁰ King, O God:—ⁿ command deliverances for Jacob.
- 5 ^o Through thee ^p will we push down our enemies:
Through thy name will we ^r tread them under that rise up against us.
- 6 For ^s I will not trust in my bow,—neither shall my sword save me.¹¹
- 7 But ^t thou hast saved us from our enemies,
And hast ^u put them to shame that hated us.¹²
- 8 ^x In God we boast all the day long,—and praise thy name for ever. Selah.

1 Many of the best critics follow the ancient versions, and some copies of the Hebrew, in joining the next word to this verse; and thus, without altering a single letter, read, 'the salvation of my countenance and my God:' thus making the three verses (5, 11, xliii. 5) all alike.

2 Rather, 'of the Hermons;' the mountain-range of which Hermon was the summit. This was on the east of Jordan, and is put here for the whole of the district on that side of the river. The 'hill Mizar' is probably a spur of these mountains.

3 A striking representation of a succession of calamities; one wave summoning another to succeed it.

4 The God to whom my life belongs, and upon whom it depends.

5 An expression denoting excruciating pain.

6 Or, 'unmerciful.' But see note on Psa. iv. 3.

7 That is, 'Manifest thy faithfulness' by fulfilling thy promises.

8 See notes on titles of Psa. xxxii., xlii. Psalm xlv. was evidently composed when the Hebrews had long been in possession of their land (vers. 1—3); but were now defeated, scattered, insulted, and many of them enslaved or slain (9—16); though they steadfastly rejected idolatry, and maintained their allegiance to their Divine King (4—8, 17—22). Thus it seems to apply either to the beginning of David's reign (see 1 Sam. xxxi.), or to the time of the Maccabees (see 1 Macc. i.; 2 Macc. v.); or more probably of Hezekiah (see 2 Kings xviii. 13; xix. 4): but in this case the protestations of faithfulness must be taken as being made in comparison with the apostasy of the kingdom of Israel, and in connection with Hezekiah's great reformation: see 2 Kings xviii. 5; 2 Chron. xxix.—xxxi.

9 Or, 'and didst cause them (viz. our fathers) to spread abroad:' answering to the 'planting' in the preceding line; whilst 'the people' answer to 'the heathen.'

10 The speaker throughout the psalm being the Jewish nation personified, the singular and plural numbers are used indifferently.

11 As these were not my fathers' confidence (see ver. 3), neither shall they be mine. There is also probably a reference to Josh. xxiv. 12.

12 That is, thou didst so in former times: see ver. 1.

A Song of loves.

- 1 MY heart is inditing a good matter:

My tongue is the pen of a ready writer.
- 2 ^d Thou art fairer than the children of men:—^e grace is poured into thy lips:⁷

- 3 Gird thy ^g sword upon thy thigh, ^h O Most Mighty,
With thy glory and thy majesty.
- 4 ⁱ And in thy majesty ride prosperously
^k Because of truth ^l and meekness and righteousness;
And thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things.
- 5 ^m Thine arrows are sharp ⁿ in the heart of the king's enemies;
Whereby the people fall under thee.
- 6 ^o Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever:
The sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre.
- 7 ^p Thou lovest righteousness, and hatest wickedness:

3 Wild animals of the deserts; here put figuratively for savage enemies.
4 On account of our attachment to thy service and worship. The apostle Paul (Rom. viii. 36) applies these words to the sufferings of himself and his fellow-Christians.
5 Images denoting extreme dejection and depression.
6 'Shoshannim' signifies lilies, particularly the scarlet martagon (see Sol. Song v. 13); and probably denotes some tune, or some musical instrument which bore a resemblance to lilies: but some apply the word to the subject of the psalm, and remark that lilies are a natural emblem of female beauty. The psalmist here describes the personal grace (2), warlike prowess (3—5), righteousness (6, 7), and rich adornments (8) of a royal Bridegroom.
He then depicts the beauty, dress, and attendants of the bride (9); whom he exhorts to leave her home, and give herself wholly to her husband; promising her his favour and the homage of the nations (10—12). The bride, gorgeously attired within her father's palace (13), is then led in marriage procession to the King (14, 15); and nuptial benedictions are pronounced, predicting a numerous progeny (16, 17). Some royal festival may be allowed to have suggested the form of the poem; but it cannot be doubted that the inspired poet had before his mind no merely human monarch, but the Divine Messiah (see vers. 6, 7; Heb. i. 8, 9) whose union with his church in an indissoluble bond of everlasting love is thus rapturously celebrated.

Hence the term 'loves' in the title; which, whether referring to the emotion itself or to its objects, must be taken in this peculiar sense. See Pref. to Song of Solomon.
7 See Luke iv. 22. But personal grace here represents our Lord's spiritual excellence and perfections.

- Therefore ¹ God, thy God, ² hath anointed thee
With the oil ³ of gladness ⁴ above thy fellows. ¹
- 8 ⁵ All thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia,

- 9 ⁷ Kings' daughters were among thy honourable women :
⁸ Upon thy right hand did stand ⁹ the queen ³ in gold of Ophir.
- 10 Harken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear ;
¹⁰ Forget also thine own people, ⁴ and thy father's house ;
- 11 ¹¹ So shall the king greatly desire thy beauty :
¹² For he is thy LORD ; and worship thou him.
- 12 And the daughter of Tyre ⁵ shall be there ⁶ with a gift ;
Even ⁷ the rich among the people shall intreat thy favour.
- 13 ⁸ The king's daughter is all glorious within : ⁶—her clothing is of wrought gold.
- 14 ¹³ She shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needlework :
¹⁴ The virgins her companions ⁷ that follow her—shall be brought unto thee.
- 15 ¹⁵ With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought :
¹⁶ They shall enter into the king's palace.
- 16 Instead of thy fathers shall be ¹⁷ thy children, ⁸
¹⁸ Whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth.
- 17 ¹⁹ I will make thy name to be remembered in all generations :

That such palaces and chambers were not unknown in Jewish life may be inferred from 1 Kings xxii. 39 ; also S. Song vii. 4 ; Amos iii. 15 ; vi. 4.

³ By 'the queen' is meant the bride of the Messiah, the church of Christ.

⁵ According to the Hebrew idiom, the 'daughter of Tyre' denotes the city or its inhabitants, personified as a virgin. So the 'daughter of Zion,' Ps. ix. 14. In the times of David and Solomon, and long after, the Tyrians were the most commercial people in the world ; and with them the Israelites had most trading intercourse. Hence Tyre was naturally used as a type for the wealth of the world, which is to be subordinated to the use of Christ and his church ; an idea which is still more plainly brought out in the following part of the verse. See Ps. lxxii. 10 ; lxxxvii. 4 ; Isa. lx. 6.

⁶ That is, within doors. The bride is described as awaiting her removal from her father's to her husband's house.

⁷ Some regard this as a figurative representation of the admission of the Gentiles to the spiritual privileges of ancient Israel.

⁸ Literally, 'thy sons.' This passage predicts the numerous spiritual progeny of the Messiah, and the perpetuity of his reign over the whole earth.

¹⁰ Rather, 'a help in trouble he is found [to be] very greatly ;' alluding to the experience which God's people have of his all-sufficient help.

¹¹ Amidst the greatest convulsions, whether of nature or of society.

¹² A peaceful and refreshing river forms a natural contrast to the turbulent and threatening sea described in ver. 3. It is a frequent Scriptural emblem (derived perhaps from the river of Eden, Gen. ii. 10) of the favour of God and the blessings of his gospel : see Ps. xxxvi. 8 ; Zech. xiv. 8 ; Rev. xxii. 1. The assurance of Divine favour will calm the soul in the greatest trouble : see Phil. iv. 7.

¹³ Rather, 'who hath made desolations,' etc.

¹⁴ In these words, the prophet's thoughts appear to comprehend the future era of universal peace so often foretold in Scripture.

- ^k He breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder;
^l He burneth the chariot in the fire.
 10 ^m Be still, and ⁿ know that I am God:
^o I will be exalted among the heathen,—I will be exalted in the earth.
 11 ^p The LORD of hosts is with us;—the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

PSALM XLVII.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm for [or, of] the sons of Korah. 1

- 1 OH ^r clap your hands, all ye people;—^r shout unto God with the voice of triumph.
 2 For the LORD most high is ^s terrible:—^t he is a great King over all the earth.
 3 ^u He shall subdue the people under us,—and the nations under our feet.
 4 He shall choose our ^v inheritance for us,
 The excellency of Jacob³ ^y whom he loved. Selah.
 5 ^z God is gone up⁴ ^a with a shout,—the LORD with the sound of a trumpet.
 6 Sing praises to God, sing praises:—sing praises unto ^b our King, sing praises.
 7 ^c For God is the King of all the earth:—^d sing ye praises with understanding.⁵
 8 ^e God reigneth over the heathen:—God sitteth upon the throne of his holiness.
 9 The princes of the people are gathered together,
^f *Even*⁶ the people of the God of Abraham:
^g For the shields⁷ of the earth belong unto God:—he is greatly exalted.⁸

PSALM XLVIII.

A Song and Psalm for [or, of] the sons of Korah. 9

- 1 GREAT is the LORD, and ^h greatly to be praised ⁱ In the city of our God, in the ^k mountain of his holiness.¹⁰ 2 ^l Beautiful for situation,¹¹ ^m the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion, ⁿ *On*¹² the sides of the north, ^o the city of the great King.
 3 ^p God is known in her palaces for a refuge.
 4 For, lo, ^r the kings were assembled,—they passed by together.
 5 They saw it, and so they marvelled;—^r they were troubled, and hastened away.
 6 Fear ^s took hold upon them there,—^t and pain, as of a woman in travail.
 7 Thou ^u breakest the ships of Tarshish¹³—^x with an east wind.
 8 ^y As we have heard, so have we seen¹⁴
 In ^z the city of the LORD of hosts, in the city of our God:
 God will ^a establish it for ever. Selah.
 9 We have thought of ^b thy lovingkindness, O God,—^c in the midst of thy temple.
 10 According to ^d thy name,¹⁵ O God,—so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth:
^e Thy right hand is full of righteousness.
 11 Let mount Zion rejoice,

1 Some think that Psalm xlvii. was composed after the destruction of Sennacherib, which must have been a relief to other nations (see ver. 1) beside the Jews: others refer it to the events related in 2 Chron. xx. 1—30; when, by a most remarkable Divine interposition, Judah obtained a victory without a battle. In any case, the psalmist regards the present triumph as an earnest of the future glories of the people of God.

2 Rather, 'to be feared;' or, 'venerated.'

3 These words probably mean the sacred territory, called in prophecy 'the glory of all lands' (Ezek. xx. 15). Every victory re-established the people in their land.

4 Some refer this to the return of the ark to its mountain sanctuary, after it had been with the army. Others regard it as poetically describing God's return to heaven, after having come down to deliver his people.

5 Rather, 'sing a Maschil,' or psalm.

6 Rather, 'And the people of the God of Abraham;' i. e. the heathen princes hasten to join the Lord's people: see Psa. lxxxvii. 4; Zech. ix. 7. The designation 'God of Abraham' probably refers to the promise made to that patriarch that he should be a blessing to all people.

7 So the princes or rulers are called, as the protectors of their people: see Hos. iv. 18, margin.

8 When all the principalities and powers of the earth acknowledge their subjection to Jehovah, then will He be duly exalted.

9 Psalm xlviii. celebrates Jerusalem as the residence of Jehovah (vers. 1—3), and particularly as having been recently saved by him (4—8), for which he is worthy of praise from age to age (9—14). It may probably be referred to the discomfiture of the allied kings of Moab, Ammon, and Edom, in the time of Jehoshaphat: see 2 Chron. xx.

10 That is, 'his holy mountain;' so called on account of the temple, which stood upon it.

11 Rather, 'for elevation:' an allusion to the lofty site of Jerusalem. To this verse Jeremiah pathetically refers in Lam. ii. 15.

12 This may perhaps be a description of the whole city; 'Mount Zion [on the south, with] the northern quarters,' forming together 'the city of the great King.' But it more probably refers to its appearance as seen by an army coming from Edom on the south. Jerusalem was near the northern frontier of the kingdom of Judah.

13 On 'ships of Tarshish,' see note on 1 Kings x. 22. This verse may perhaps be joined with the preceding thus: ['And as] thou breakest,' etc. How naturally a writer in Jehoshaphat's time would use this figure to express sudden terror and destruction will appear from 1 Kings xxii. 48, 49; 2 Chron. xx. 35—37.

14 That is, 'What we have heard of as occurring in other times and places we have now experienced ourselves.' See Job xlii. 5.

15 This may mean either, 'Wherever thy perfections (expressed in thy name) are known, there thou wilt be praised;' or, 'Thou shalt be praised in all the earth for thy recent salvation, in which thou hast repeated the previous manifestations of thy name,' i. e. of thyself. See 2 Chron. xx. 29.

PSALM XLIX.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm for [or, of] the sons of Korah.²

- 1 HEAR this, all ye people;—give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world:
 2 Both ⁱ low and high,—rich and poor, together.
 3 ^k My mouth shall speak of wisdom;
 And the meditation of my heart shall be of understanding.
 4 ^l I will incline mine ear to a parable:
 I will open my ^m dark saying upon the harp.³
 5 Wherefore should I fear in the days of evil,
 When ⁿ the iniquity of my heels⁴ shall compass me about?
 6 They that ^o trust in their wealth,
 And ^p boast themselves in the multitude of their riches;
 7 None of them can by any means redeem his brother,
 Nor ^q give to God a ransom for him:
 8 (For ^r the redemption of their soul is precious,⁵ and it ceaseth for ever)
 9 That he should still live for ever,—and ^s not see corruption:
 10 For⁶ he seeth that ^t wise men die,
 Likewise the fool and the brutish person perish,
^u And leave their wealth to others.
 11 Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever,
 And their dwelling places to all generations;
 They ^x call their lands after their own names.
 12 Nevertheless ^y man being in honour abideth not:
^z He is like the beasts that perish.
 13 This⁷ their way is their ^a folly:—yet their posterity approve their sayings. Selah.
 14 ^b Like sheep⁸ ^c they are laid in the grave;—death shall feed on them;
 And ^d the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning;⁹
^e And their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling.¹⁰
 15 But God ^f will redeem my soul from the power of the grave:
 For ^g he shall receive me. Selah.
 16 ^h Be not thou afraid when one is made rich,
 When the glory of his house is increased;
 17 ⁱ For when he dieth he shall carry nothing away:
^k His glory shall not descend after him.
 18 Though while he lived ^l he blessed his soul:
 And men ^m will praise thee, when thou doest well to thyself.¹¹
 19 He shall ⁿ go to the generation of his fathers;—they shall never see ^o light.
 20 ^p Man that is in honour, and understandeth not,—^q is like the beasts that perish.¹²

PSALM L.

A Psalm ^r of [or, for] Asaph.¹³

- 1 THE ^s mighty God, even the LORD, hath spoken,
 And called the earth ^t from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof.

1 The Septuagint and Vulgate rendering, 'for ever,' which does not require the change of a single letter in the Hebrew, agrees better with the first clause.

2 The writer of Psalm xlix., after calling attention to his important subject (vers. 1—4), shows how little reason the righteous has to envy the delusive prosperity of the wicked (5—12); especially when viewed in contrast with his own better portion and hopes (13—20). Of the occasion on which it was composed there is no trace. It should be compared with Psa. xxxvii., xxxix., lxxiii.

That is, in a song. What the writer hears from God he will open or expound to man.

4 Rather, 'my supplanters;' 'my insidious adversaries.'

5 That is, 'costly.' The meaning is, 'The ransom price of their life is costly; beyond all power of being attained, so as for a man to escape death and live for ever.'

6 Or, 'For he shall see [corruption]: wise men shall die, together shall the fool and the brutish perish,' etc.

7 'Such is the destiny of the foolish, yet their posterity approve their sayings.'

8 That is, blindly, in confusion, and without choice or foresight of their own.

9 Or, 'shortly.' This word is rendered 'early' in Psa. xlv. 5; xc. 14.

10 Or, 'So that they shall have no [longer any] dwelling,' i. e. in this world.

11 That is, 'takest care of thyself.'

12 This verse is, with a slight but significant variation, a repetition of the sentiment expressed in ver. 12, where the pleasures and possessions of the worldling are spoken of as uncertain; whilst here they are stigmatized as irrational.

13 Asaph was one of the chief musicians whom David 'set over the service of song in the house of the Lord;'

- 2 Out of Zion, ^u the perfection of beauty,—^x God hath shined.¹
 3 Our God shall come, and shall ^v not keep silence :
 ^z A fire shall devour before him,
 And ^a it shall be very tempestuous round about him.
 4 ^b He shall call to the heavens from above,
 And to the earth,² that he may judge his people.
 5 ^c Gather ^d my saints³ together unto me ;
 ^e Those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.
 6 And ^f the heavens shall declare his righteousness :
 For ^g God is judge himself. Selah.
 7 ^h Hear, O my people, and ⁱ I will speak ;
 O Israel, and I will testify against thee :—^h I am God, even thy God.
 8 ⁱ I will not reprove thee ^m for thy sacrifices⁴
 Or thy burnt offerings, to have been continually before me.
 9 ⁿ I will take no bullock out of thy house,—nor he-goats out of thy folds.
 10 ^o For every beast of the forest is mine,—and the cattle upon a thousand hills.⁵
 11 I know all the fowls of the mountains :—and the wild beasts of the field are mine.
 12 If I were hungry, I would not tell thee :
 ^p For the world is mine, and the fulness thereof.
 13 Will I eat the flesh of bulls,—or drink the blood of goats ?
 14 ^q Offer⁶ unto God thanksgiving ;—and ^r pay thy vows unto the Most High :
 15 And ^s call upon me in the day of trouble :
 ^t I will deliver thee, and thou shalt ^u glorify me.
 16 But unto the wicked God saith,
 ^x What hast thou to do to declare my statutes,⁷
 Or that thou shouldest take my covenant in thy mouth ?
 17 ^y Seeing thou hatest instruction,—and ^z castest my words behind thee.
 18 When thou sawest a thief, then thou ^a consentedst with him,
 And hast been ^b partaker with adulterers.⁸
 19 Thou givest thy mouth to evil,—and ^c thy tongue frameth deceit.
 20 Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother ;
 Thou slanderest thine own mother's son.
 21 These things hast thou done, ^d and I kept silence ;⁹
 ^e Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself :
 But ^f I will reprove thee, and set them in order¹⁰ before thine eyes.
 22 Now ^g consider this, ye that ^h forget God,
 Lest I ⁱ tear you in pieces, and there be ^k none to deliver.
 23 ^l Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me :
 And ^m to him that ordereth his conversation¹¹ aright
 Will I show ⁿ the salvation of God.

he was also an inspired psalmist : see 1 Chron. vi. 31, 39 ; xv. 17, 19 ; 2 Chron. xxix. 30. There are twelve psalms which bear his name. In this sublime psalm, the Divine Lawgiver, appearing on Zion, in glory similar to that of Sinai (vers. 2, 3), summons the whole world to witness his judgment of his people (vers. 1—6). With regard to the first table of the Decalogue, he charges them with losing sight of the purpose of their outward rites, and the spirituality of his worship (7—15). With respect to the second, he severely rebukes the hypocrites who professed to serve him whilst they violated all his moral commands (16—21) ; and then concludes with a warning and a promise (22, 23). This psalm would serve to prepare the minds of pious Israelites for the abolition of their peculiar ritual by the introduction of a more perfect economy ; whilst it fitly describes and solemnly threatens the formalists and hypocrites of every age.

1 Compare with this the sublime descriptions of God's appearance on Sinai in Exod. xix. and Deut. xxxiii. 2, which were evidently before the mind of the writer, and have supplied some of the very phrases employed.

2 For similar summonses of heaven and earth to be present at the Divine proceedings, see Deut. iv. 26 ; xxxii. 1 ; Isa. i. 2 ; Mic. vi. 1, 2. They increase the solemnity of the proceeding, and show its universal importance.

3 Those who profess to be such : the primary reference being to the Jewish nation, whom God set apart for himself.

4 That is, on account of their absence or omission.

5 Literally, 'hills of a thousand,' which may mean 'hills where the cattle rove by thousands.' God cannot be supposed either to need or to desire such supplies ; and, even if he did, he need not come to man for them, since the whole animal creation is his property, and at his disposal. These ritualists had forgotten both God's self-sufficiency and his spirituality.

6 Rather, 'sacrifice ;' i. e. 'Let the sacrifices you offer be regarded neither as needed by God, nor as meritorious actions of yours ; but as thanksgivings for God's mercy towards you.'

7 By professing to regard and obey them. The apostle Paul pointedly apostrophizes the same class of Jewish formalists in Rom. ii. 21—23.

8 Vers. 18—20 refer to the seventh, eighth, and ninth commands of the Decalogue. See note on title.

9 God is described as 'keeping silence' when he does not openly show his displeasure by reproof or punishment.

10 So that none shall be omitted or overlooked. God will lay hereafter before the wicked an exact catalogue, so to speak, of their misdeeds, which they shall be compelled to read and own, whether they will or not.

11 See note on Psa. xxxvii. 14. The former clause refers to the worship (see vers. 14, 15), the latter to the course of life which God approves.

PSALM LI.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David, ^o when Nathan the prophet came unto him, after he had gone in to Bath-sheba. ¹

- 1 HAVE mercy upon me, O God,—^p according to thy lovingkindness :
According unto ^q the multitude of thy tender mercies—^r blot out my transgressions.
- 2 ^s Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity,—and cleanse me from my sin.
- 3 For ^t I acknowledge my transgressions :—and ^u my sin is ever before me.
- 4 ^x Against thee, thee only, ³ have I sinned,—and done this evil ^y in thy sight :
^z That thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, ⁴
And be clear when thou judgest.
- 5 ^a Behold, I was shapen in iniquity ;—^b and in sin did my mother conceive me. ⁵
- 6 Behold, thou desirest truth ^c in the inward parts :
And in ^d the hidden ⁶ part thou shalt make me to know wisdom.
- 7 ^e Purge ⁷ me with hyssop, ⁸ and I shall be clean :
Wash me, and I shall be ^f whiter than snow.
- 8 Make me to hear joy and gladness ;
That ^g the bones which thou hast broken ⁹ ^h may rejoice.
- 9 ⁱ Hide thy face from my sins,—and ^k blot out all mine iniquities.
- 10 ^l Create in me a clean heart, O God ;—and ^m renew a right ¹⁰ spirit within me.
- 11 Cast me not away ⁿ from thy presence ;—and ^o take not thy ^p holy spirit from me.
- 12 ^q Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation ;—and ^r uphold me with thy ^s free spirit. ¹¹
- 13 ^t Then will I teach transgressors thy ways ; ¹²
And sinners shall be ^u converted unto thee.
- 14 Deliver me from ^x bloodguiltiness, O God, thou God of my salvation :
And ^y my tongue shall sing aloud of ^z thy righteousness.
- 15 O LORD, ^a open thou my lips ;—and ^b my mouth shall show forth thy praise.
- 16 For ^c thou desirest not sacrifice ; else would I give it :
Thou delightest not in burnt offering.
- 17 ^d The sacrifices ¹³ of God are a broken spirit :
A broken and a contrite heart, O God, ^e thou wilt not despise.
- 18 Do good in thy good pleasure unto Zion :—build ¹⁴ thou the walls of Jerusalem.
- 19 Then shalt thou be pleased with ^f the sacrifices of righteousness,
With burnt offering and whole burnt offering :
Then shall they offer bullocks ¹⁵ upon thine altar.

1 The character and contents of Psalm li. agree well with the historical occasion indicated by the title. Though written as the utterance of a single penitent, it is evidently designed for public use ; and is intended to make David's repentance as well known as his guilt had been. The first part of the psalm contains confessions of sin, mingled with prayers for pardon, sanctification, and renewed peace (vers. 1—12) ; the second part expresses his desires to testify his gratitude for Divine mercy (13—19). It should be read in connection with Ps. xxxii.

2 Those to whom God gives grace to confess their sins may expect his mercy in forgiving them.

3 The psalmist's mind is at first fully occupied with the offence and dishonour to God which his sin had occasioned ; though ver. 14 clearly shows that he was quite alive to the other aspects and mischievous consequences of his crime.

4 This may mean either, 'So that thou art just in passing sentence upon me, and clear in condemning me ;' or, 'I acknowledge my transgressions,' etc. (ver. 3), 'in order that it may appear that thou art just,' etc.

5 David adverts to this fact, not to extenuate his own transgression, but to humble himself the more deeply by acknowledging that his present sins were only the bitter waters flowing from a corrupt source within. We are never properly humbled for sin, until we see its power in the heart, as well as its fruits in the life.

6 In my inmost soul.

7 Literally, 'Thou wilt purge,' etc. ; 'thou wilt wash,' etc. 'Thou wilt make,' etc. (ver. 8). So in ver. 15, 'Thou wilt open,' etc. The desire for holiness and peace is sustained by confidence in God's merciful intentions. Comp. 1 Thess. iv. 3 ; v. 23.

8 See note on 1 Kings iv. 33. Hyssop was much used in the purifications under the Mosaic law : see Exod. xii. 22 ; Lev. xiv. 4, 6 ; Numb. xix. 18 ; Heb. ix. 19. To 'purge with hyssop,' therefore, suggests the idea of a purification from guilt, founded on atonement.

9 A forcible figure to express the anguish produced by the consciousness of aggravated and unforgiven guilt. See Ps. xxxii. 3.

10 Or, 'firm ;' i. e. constant, steadfast in thy service. This passage, and others in the Old Testament, so clearly teach the need of regeneration by Divine power, even though a man might be an Israelite after the flesh, that our Lord expressed surprise at the ignorance discovered by 'a master in Israel' on this important subject. See John iii. 3—10.

11 Or, 'and [with] a free spirit sustain me ;' i. e. a willing, generous spirit, prompting the cheerful obedience of love ; the spirit of adoption, as opposed to the 'spirit of bondage ;' see Rom. viii. 15.

12 This may mean either, God's method of dealing with men (see Ps. xviii. 26, and note), or the ways in which he requires us to walk. See Ps. cxix. 37. In both these senses the psalmist might desire to teach others the Divine ways. Of this resolution, a partial fulfilment is to be found in Ps. xxxii. 8—11.

13 A really contrite spirit is worth all, and more than all, the numerous sacrifices of the ritual.

14 That is, continue to build them. David had begun the work some years ago (see 2 Sam. v. 9), but it was not completed till the reign of Solomon (see 1 Kings iii. 1). Whether from the use of this psalm or for other similar reasons, building became a symbol of prosperity, as dismantling was of injury. See Ps. lxxxix. 40. A true penitent desires not only his own, but others' good.

15 These are mentioned as the finest and choicest victims.

PSALM LII.

To the chief Musician, Maschil, A Psalm of David, ^g when Doeg the Edomite came and ^h told Saul, and said unto him, David is come to the house of Ahimelech. ¹

- 1 WHY boastest thou thyself in mischief, O ⁱ mighty man?
^k The goodness of God endureth continually. ²
- 2 ^l Thy tongue deviseth mischiefs;—^m like a sharp ³ razor, ⁿ working deceitfully.
- 3 Thou ^o lovest evil more than good;
And ^p lying rather than to speak righteousness. Selah.
- 4 Thou lovest all ^q devouring words,—O thou deceitful tongue.
- 5 ^r God shall likewise destroy thee for ever,
He shall take thee away, and ^s pluck thee out of thy dwelling place,
And ^t root thee out of ^u the land of the living. Selah.
- 6 ^v The righteous also shall see, and fear,—^w and shall laugh at him:
- 7 Lo, this is the man that made not God his strength;
But ^x trusted in the abundance of his riches,
And strengthened himself in his wickedness.
- 8 But I am ^a like a green olive tree in the house of God:
^b I trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever.
- 9 I will praise thee for ever, because thou hast done it:
And I will ^c wait on thy name;—^d for it is good before thy saints.

PSALM LIII.

To the chief Musician upon Mahalath, ⁴ Maschil, A Psalm of David.

- 1 THE ^e fool hath said in his heart, There is no God.
Corrupt are they, and have done abominable iniquity:
^f There is none that doeth good.
- 2 God ^g looked down from heaven upon the children of men,
To see if there were any that did understand, that did ^h seek God.
- 3 Every one of them is gone back:—they are altogether become filthy;
There is none that doeth good, no, not one.
- 4 Have the workers of iniquity ⁱ no knowledge?
Who eat up my people as they eat bread:—they have not called upon God.
- 5 ^k There were they in great fear, where no fear was:
For God hath ^l scattered the bones of him that encampeth against thee:
Thou hast put them to shame, ^m because God hath despised them.
- 6 ⁿ Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion!
When God bringeth back the captivity of his people,
Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM LIV.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth, Maschil, A Psalm of David, ^o when the Ziphims came and said to Saul, Doth not David hide himself with us? ⁵

- 1 SAVE me, O God, ^p by thy name,—and ^q judge me by thy strength.
- 2 Hear my prayer, O God;—give ear to the words of my mouth.
- 3 For ^r strangers ⁶ are risen up against me,—and ^s oppressors seek after my soul:
^t They have not set God before them. Selah.
- 4 Behold, ^u God is mine helper:—^x the LORD is with them that uphold my soul.
- 5 He shall reward evil unto mine enemies:—cut them off ^y in thy truth. ⁷
- 6 ^z I will freely sacrifice unto thee:—I will praise thy name, O LORD; ^a for it is good.
- 7 For ^b he hath delivered me out of all trouble:
^c And mine eye hath seen his desire upon mine enemies.

¹ The contents of Psalm lii. seem fully to bear out this inscription: see 1 Sam. xxii. David states his subject (ver. 1), and contrasts the malignant intentions of his foes (2—4) with the punishment and disgrace which God will inflict on them (5—7), and the protection and deliverance which he will grant to his servant (8, 9). The psalm is well adapted to cheer the people of God in any season of persecution.

² As if he had said, 'Mighty and malicious as thou art, the might and mercy of Jehovah are far greater.'

³ Not merely sharp, but sharpened; whetted for the occasion, so as to move smoothly when cutting keenly.

⁴ The word 'Mahalath' may be the name of a sort of flute or lute, or of a tune, so named from the first word of some popular poem. Psalm liii. is another edition of Psa. xiv.: on which see notes. The chief variation is in ver. 5, which represents those who are described in Psa. xiv. as treating the pious with contumely, as having themselves become objects of contempt.

⁵ The Ziphites gave this information twice: see 1 Sam. xxiii. 19; xxvi. 1. Psalm liv. contains a prayer (vers. 1—3), and a confident expectation of an answer (4—7).

⁶ Though of the same tribe, they treat me as an alien.

⁷ That is, 'agreeably to the tenor of thy promises.'

PSALM LV.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth, Maschil, A Psalm of David.¹

- 1 ^d GIVE ear to my prayer, O God ;—and ^e hide not thyself from my supplication.
- 2 Attend unto me, and hear me :—I ^f mourn² in my complaint, and make a noise ;
- 3 Because of the voice of the enemy,—because of the oppression of the wicked :
^g For they cast iniquity³ upon me,—and in wrath they hate me.
- 4 ^h My heart is sore pained within me :—and ⁱ the terrors of death are fallen upon me.
- 5 ^k Fearfulness and trembling are come upon me,—and horror hath overwhelmed me.
- 6 And I said, Oh that I had wings like a dove!⁴
For then would I fly away, and be at rest.
- 7 Lo, then ^l would I wander far off,—and remain in the wilderness. Selah.
- 8 I would hasten my escape—from ^m the windy storm and tempest.
- 9 Destroy, O LORD, and ⁿ divide their tongues :⁵
For I have seen ^o violence and strife in the city.
- 10 Day and night they⁶ go about it upon the walls thereof :
Mischief also and sorrow are in the midst of it.
- 11 Wickedness is in the midst thereof :—deceit and guile depart not from her streets.
- 12 ^p For it was not an enemy that reproached me ;—then I could have borne it :
Neither was it he that hated me that did ^q magnify himself against me ;
Then I would have hid myself from him :
- 13 But it was thou, a man mine equal,—^r my guide,⁷ and mine acquaintance.
- 14 We took sweet counsel together,—and ^s walked unto the house of God in company.
- 15 ^t Let death seize upon them,—and let them ^u go down quick into hell :⁸
For wickedness is in their dwellings, and among them.⁹
- 16 As for me, ^v I will call upon God ;—and the LORD shall save me.
- 17 ^y Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud :
And he shall hear my voice.
- 18 ^z He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me :
For ^a there were many with me.¹⁰
- 19 God shall hear, and afflict them,—^b even he that abideth¹¹ of old. Selah.
Because they have ^c no changes,—therefore they fear not God.
- 20 He hath ^d put forth his hands against such as ^e be at peace with him :
He hath broken his covenant.¹²
- 21 ^f The words of his mouth were smoother than butter,—but war was in his heart :
His words were softer than oil,—yet were they drawn swords.
- 22 ^g Cast thy burden¹³ upon the LORD, and he shall sustain thee :
^h He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.
- 23 But thou, O God, shalt bring them down into the pit of destruction :
ⁱ Bloody and deceitful men ^k shall not live out half their days ;
But I will trust in thee.

1 In Psalm lv. a sufferer complains bitterly of persecution, from which he desires to escape (vers. 1—8); describes the prevalence of wickedness in the city where he has dwelt (9—11); particularizes the hypocrisy and treachery of a leader in the city (12—15), to which he again refers (19—21); and declares his determination to confide in God (16—19, 22, 23). There are no events in the sacred history to which the whole applies so well as to Absalom's rebellion and occupation of Jerusalem, and the treason of Ahithophel. Yet the terms used are so general as to admit of an application to other circumstances, and to suggest a comparison with our Lord's betrayal by Judas.

2 Rather, 'give loose to my thought.'

3 Either, iniquitous calumnies; or, injuries.

4 The pigeon, or dove, is one of the swiftest of birds. There is much plaintive elegance in this soliloquy.

5 That is, 'disconcert their counsels;' perhaps alluding to the confusion of tongues at Babel.

6 'Violence and Strife' (see ver. 9) are personified as keeping the walls of the city, whilst Mischief and its comrades occupy the interior.

7 Rather, 'my associate.'

8 That is, 'alive into the grave' (Heb. Sheol); obviously alluding to the destruction of Korah and his company: see Numb. xvi. 33.

9 Literally, 'in their heart;' i. e. not only around, but within them.

10 That is, fighting 'with (i. e. against) me.'

11 Rather, 'that sitteth (as judge and sovereign) of old.'

12 The covenant of friendship into which he had entered.

13 Or, 'what he gives thee' to bear.

14 These three words may be rendered, 'the dumb dove [among] strangers;' which may either be an enigmatical description of David as an innocent sufferer in a foreign land, agreeing with the remaining part of the title, or the first words of an ode to the tune of which this psalm was sung.

15 Referring probably to the incident related in 1 Sam. xxi. 11—15. The application of the psalm to that event is, however, attended with many difficulties. Psalm lvi. divides itself naturally into two stanzas, containing complaints, prayers, and hopes (vers. 1—4, and 5—11), followed by grateful praises and vows (12, 13).

16 Heb., 'Pants after me;' longing for my blood.

- 2 Mine enemies [observers^p] would daily ^qswallow me up:
For they be ^rmany that fight against me, O thou Most High.¹
- 3 ^sWhat time I am afraid, I will trust in thee.
- 4 ^tIn God I will praise his word,²—^uin God I have put my trust;
^vI will not fear what flesh can do unto me.
- 5 Every day ^wthey wrest my words:—all their thoughts are against me for evil.
- 6 ^xThey gather themselves together, ^ythey hide themselves, ^zThey mark my steps, ^awhen they wait for my soul.³
- 7 ^bShall they escape by iniquity?⁴—^cin thine anger cast down the people, O God.
- 8 Thou tellest ^dmy wanderings:
Put thou ^emy tears into thy bottle:⁵—^f*are they* not in thy book?
- 9 ^gWhen I cry unto thee, ^hthen shall mine enemies turn back:
This I know, for ⁱGod is for me.
- 10 ^mIn God will I praise his word:—in the LORD will I praise his word.
- 11 In God have I put my trust:—ⁿI will not be afraid what man can do unto me.
- 12 ^oThy vows are upon me, O God:⁶—I will render praises unto thee.
- 13 For ^pthou hast delivered my soul from death:
^q*Wilt not thou deliver* my feet from falling.
^rThat I may walk before God in ^sthe light of the living?

PSALM LVII.

To the chief Musician, Al-taschith,⁷ Michtam [or, Destroy not, A golden Psalm] of David, ^twhen he fled from Saul in the cave

- 1 BE ^umerciful unto me, O God, be merciful unto me:
For ^xmy soul trusteth in thee:
^yYea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, ^zUntil these calamities be overpast.
- 2 I will cry unto God most high;—unto God ^athat performeth⁸ all things for me.
- 3 ^bHe shall send from heaven, and save me
From the reproach of him that would ^cswallow me up.⁹ Selah.
God ^dshall send forth his mercy and his truth.
- 4 My soul is among lions:—and I lie even among them that are set on fire,¹⁰

And ^ftheir tongue a sharp sword.¹¹
- 5 ^gBe thou exalted,¹² O God, above the heavens;

- 8 ⁿAwake up, ^omy glory;¹⁴ awake, psaltery and harp:—I myself will awake early.¹⁵
- 9 ^pI will praise thee, O LORD, among the people:
I will sing unto thee among the nations.

1 Or, 'that fight highly (i. e. proudly) against me.'
2 The promise which he has made to me.
3 That is, 'my life.' Their object in so closely watching my movements is to destroy me. See Ps. cxix. 95.
4 Rather, 'They escape (i. e. they hope to escape) by iniquity;' they rely for deliverance and success on their nefarious schemes.
5 That is, 'preserve them in thy memory:' see the next clause. 'Tears' are here compared to a precious liquor, which is carefully preserved in a skin bottle.
6 The psalmist speaks as if he were already in possession of the object of his prayers. Extraordinary deliverances call for unusual expressions of gratitude and devotion to God.
7 'Al-taschith' means, 'Destroy not.' Some explain these words by a reference to their use in Deut. ix. 26; 1 Sam. xxvi. 9; supposing in the latter case that they had become the formula of deprecation. As they are prefixed to psalms of very various characters, it is most likely that they are the first words of a well-known poem. Psalm lvii.
resembles the preceding in its style and subject; but its tone is throughout somewhat more cheerful. It is naturally divided into two stanzas (vers. 1—5, and 6—11).

8 Rather, 'perfecteth.' Not only God's omnipotence, but his unchanging faithfulness, encourages the suppliant.
See Ps. cxxxviii. 8; Phil. i. 6.
9 Or, 'He reproacheth him that would swallow me up.'
10 Rather, 'among flaming ones;' i. e. persons breathing out flame; ferocious enemies, such as are described in Acts ix. 1.
11 The tongue is mentioned in this comparison on account of the slander and abuse which proceeded from it.
12 By displaying thy perfections in the deliverance of thy servant. It is the consolation of God's people that their safety is linked with his glory.
13 It is fortified against all fear, by reliance on thee.
14 This may mean, 'my soul;' see notes on Ps. vii. 5;
xvi. 9: but some explain the term to mean, 'my tongue;
and others, with considerable probability, 'my inspiration as a sacred poet.' See the next clause.
15 Literally, 'I will awake the dawn;' a bold figure of poetry, as if the writer had said, 'The morning shall not awake me to praise; but in my songs I will anticipate the dawn.'

PSALM LVIII.

To the chief Musician, ^sAl-taschith, Michtam [or, Destroy not, A golden Psalm] of David. 1

- 1 DO ye indeed speak righteousness, O congregation?²
Do ye judge uprightly, O ye sons of men?
- 2 Yea, in heart ye work wickedness;
^tYe weigh the violence of your hands in the earth.³
- 3 ^uThe wicked are estranged⁴ from the womb:
They go astray as soon as they be born, speaking lies.
- 4 ^xTheir poison is like the poison of a serpent:
They are like ^ythe deaf adder that stoppeth her ear;
- 5 Which will not hearken to the voice of charmers,⁵—charming never so wisely.
- 6 ^zBreak their teeth, O God, in their mouth:
Break out the great teeth of ^athe young lions, O LORD.
- 7 ^bLet them melt away as waters which run continually:
When he bendeth his bow to shoot his arrows, let them be as cut in pieces.⁶
- 8 As a snail which melteth,⁷ let every one of them ^cpass away:
^d*Like* the untimely birth of a woman, that they may not see the sun.
- 9 Before your pots can feel ^ethe thorns, ^fHe shall take them away ^gas with a whirlwind, both living, and in his wrath.⁸
- 10 ^hThe righteous shall rejoice when he seeth the vengeance:
ⁱHe shall wash his feet⁹ in the blood of the wicked.
- 11 ^kSo that a man shall say, Verily there is a reward for the righteous:
Verily he is a God that ^ljudgeth in the earth.

PSALM LIX.

To the chief Musician, ^mAl-taschith, Michtam [or, Destroy not, A golden Psalm] of David;
ⁿwhen Saul sent, and they watched the house to kill him. 10

- 1 DELIVER ^ome from mine enemies, O my God:
Defend me from them that rise up against me.
- 2 Deliver me from the workers of iniquity,—and save me from bloody men.
- 3 For, lo, they lie in wait for my soul:—^pthe mighty are gathered against me;
^qNot for my transgression, nor for my sin, O LORD.
- 4 They run¹¹ and prepare themselves without my fault:
^rAwake to help me, and behold.
- 5 Thou therefore, O LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel,
Awake to visit all the heathen:¹²
Be not merciful to any wicked transgressors. Selah.
- 6 ^sThey return¹³ at evening:
They make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city.
- 7 Behold, they belch out with their mouth:—'swords are in their lips:
For ^uwho, say they, doth hear?

1 See note on title of preceding Psalm. Psalm lviii. is directed against unjust rulers; describing their inveterate wickedness (vers. 1—5); praying for their speedy punishment (6—9); and expressing the satisfaction with which the righteous will contemplate it (10, 11). Many with good reason apply it particularly to Saul.

2 The Hebrew word here used is variously translated. Some render it as in the text; others, 'mighty ones,' or 'rulers'; others, 'dumb,' reading the whole clause, 'Are ye indeed dumb [when ye should] speak righteousness?' Others, again, with the ancient versions, take it adverbially as strengthening the preceding word 'indeed': 'Do ye in very deed speak righteousness?' And this is perhaps, upon the whole, the most probable rendering.

3 These wicked rulers, instead of 'weighing' or dispensing justice to their subjects, dispensed the most violent injustice.

4 That is, estranged from God and goodness. For similar expressions, see Eph. iv. 18; Col. i. 21.

5 In the East, there are professed enchanters, who exercise a remarkable influence over serpents, chiefly by means of musical instruments. Any species which should remain unaffected by such incantations would be regarded as peculiarly malignant.

6 Or, 'as if deprived of their points;' blunted.

7 This word seems to refer to the slimy track which the snail leaves behind it.

8 Rather, 'both living and burning:' meaning either,

'both the fresh green thorns gathered for fuel and those already set on fire;' or, with reference to the contents of the vessel, 'whether raw (as the word means in 1 Sam. ii. 15) or heated,' i. e. cooked. In either case the idea intended is that of a sudden change, which carries men away in the midst of their employments.

9 As the victorious survivor of a conflict, walking over the battle-field, might be said to do.

10 The contents of Psalm lix. correspond with the title, and with the history in 1 Sam. xix. 11. In subject and style, it resembles others of the same period; but it has a peculiar artificial division into two parts of two stanzas each (1—5, 6—10, 11—13, 14—17); so that the same thoughts are re-produced in the alternate stanzas, in nearly the same order, and often in nearly the same language: comp. vers. 6 and 14, 10 and 17.

11 Perhaps used as a military term. See Ps. xviii. 29.

12 Or, 'nations.' The psalmist feels confident that, when God exercises his punitive justice in the world, such flagrant transgressors as these persecutors cannot escape.

13 Or, as in ver. 14, 'Let them return,' etc. The verse describes the disappointment of the enemy, who are compared to the gregarious untamed dogs which prowl about the streets of Eastern cities. The psalmist desires that his enemies may become miserable outcasts like these animals; loathed as unclean, and howling for want of food.

- 8 But ^x thou, O LORD, shalt laugh at them;
Thou shalt have all the heathen in derision.
9 Because of ^y his strength¹ will I wait upon thee:—^z for God is my defence.
10 ^a The God of my mercy shall ^b prevent me:²
God shall let ^c me see my desire upon ^d mine enemies.
11 ^e Slay them not,³ lest my people forget:—scatter them by thy power;
And ^f bring them down, O LORD ^g our shield.
12 ^h For the sin of their mouth and the words of their lips⁴ let them even be ⁱ taken in their pride:
And ^k for cursing⁵ and lying which they speak.
13 ^l Consume them in wrath, consume them, that they may not be:
And ^m let them know that God ruleth in Jacob—unto the ends of the earth. Selah.
14 And ⁿ at evening let them return;
And let them make a noise like a dog,—and go round about the city.
15 Let them ^o wander up and down for meat,—and grudge if they be not satisfied.
16 But ^p I will sing of thy power;
Yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy ^q in the morning:
^r For thou hast been my defence and refuge ^s in the day of my trouble.
17 Unto thee, 'O my strength, will I sing:

1 If this reading be correct, it seems to mean the strength of the enemy. But some of the ancient copies and versions read as in ver. 17, 'my strength;' so that the rendering would be, 'O my strength, I will look to thee.'

2 He will give me speedy and timely succour. See note on Ps. xviii. 5.

3 The psalmist desires that his foes may be made an example of infamy; their humiliation being a warning to all others.

4 Or, 'The sin of their mouth is the word of their lips;' i. e. whatever they speak is spoken sinfully.

5 The profane imprecations which they utter against the innocent.

6 'Shushan-eduth' means 'lily of testimony;' and is probably the name of a tune, or the title of an ode, to the music of which this psalm was set.

7 This title, though it seems incorrect in some particulars, is evidently right in ascribing the psalm to the time of David, under whom Ephraim and Judah were united, and by whom Moab, Edom, and Philistia were conquered. See notes on 2 Sam. viii. 1—14, and on Ps. ix. 1. The psalm contains three stanzas, in which the national danger is represented (vers. 1—4), the hopes founded on God's promises are described (5—8), and their accomplishment is confidently asked (9—12). The last two stanzas are repeated in Ps. cviii. 7—13.

8 Either, 'in the cause of thy truth' which we maintain; or, 'according to thy veracity;' i. e. 'thou hast given a banner, etc., agreeably to thy promise.'

9 That is, 'thy beloved people;' as in Deut. xxxiii. 12.

10 The psalmist refers not so much to any particular declaration, as to the general tenor of the assurances given to the Israelites, both as to their possession of the land of Canaan in its largest extent, and as to their triumphs over the neighbouring heathen. See Gen. xlix.; Numb. xxiv.; Deut. xxxiii. The words that follow contain the expectations which the psalmist founded upon the Divine promises.

11 Shechem, Ephraim, and Judah, Succoth, Gilead, and Manasseh, represent the whole land both west and east of the Jordan.

12 Or, 'defence.' Ephraim and Judah were the most powerful tribes; and Judah had now the political superiority.

13 That is, used for the meanest purposes. The phrase denotes the most abject subjection.

14 Meaning either, I will utterly trample it down; or, I will treat it with the greatest contempt.

15 Rather, 'Shout aloud;' receive me thy conqueror with shouts of applause.

16 In reliance on God's promise, the people are ready to go forward into the very heart of their enemies' country. 'The strong city' is Petra, the famous capital of Idumea, hewn in the rock, and almost impregnable.

- 10 ^x Wilt not thou, O God, which ^y hadst cast us off?
And thou, O God, which didst ^z not go out with our armies?
11 ^a Give us help from trouble:—for ^b vain is the help of man.
12 Through God ^c we shall do valiantly:
For he it is that shall ^d tread down our enemies.

PSALM LXI.

To the chief Musician upon Neginah, ¹ A Psalm of David. ²

- 1 HEAR my cry, O God;—attend unto my prayer.
2 From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed:
Lead me to ^e the rock that is higher than I. ³
3 For ^f thou hast been a shelter for me,—and ^g a strong tower from the enemy.
4 ^h I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever:
ⁱ I will trust in the covert of thy wings. Selah.
5 For thou, O God, hast heard my vows:
Thou hast given me ^k the heritage ⁴ of those that fear thy name.
6 ^l Thou wilt prolong the king's life:—and his years as many generations.
7 ^m He shall abide before God for ever:
Oh prepare mercy ⁿ and truth, which may preserve him.
8 So will I sing praise unto thy name for ever,—^o that I may daily perform my vows.

PSALM LXII.

To the chief Musician, to ^p Jeduthun, ⁵ A Psalm of David. ⁶

- 1 TRULY [or, Only] ^q my soul waiteth ⁷ upon God:
^r From him cometh my salvation.
2 ^s He only is my rock and my salvation;
He is my ^t defence; ^u I shall not be greatly moved.
3 How long will ye imagine mischief against a man?
Ye shall be slain ⁸ all of you:
^x As a bowing wall shall ye be, and as a tottering fence.
4 ^y They only consult to cast him down from his excellency: ⁹
^z They delight in lies:
^a They bless with their mouth, but they curse inwardly. Selah.
5 ^b My soul, wait thou only upon God;—for ^c my expectation is from him.
6 ^d He only is my rock and my salvation:—he is my defence; ^e I shall not be moved.
7 ^f In God is my salvation and ^g my glory:
The rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God.
8 Trust in him ^h at all times; ye people,—ⁱ pour out your heart before him:
God is ^k a refuge for us. Selah.
9 ^l Surely men of low degree are vanity,—and men of high degree are a lie: ¹⁰
^m To be laid ¹¹ in the balance,—they are altogether ⁿ lighter than vanity.
10 ^o Trust not in oppression,—and become not vain in robbery:
^p If riches increase, ¹² ^q set not your heart upon them.
11 God hath spoken ^r once;—twice ¹³ have I heard this;
That ^s power belongeth unto God.
12 Also unto thee, O LORD, belongeth ^t mercy:
For ^u thou renderest to every man according to his work.

1 The singular of 'Neginoth.' See note on title of Psa. iv.

2 Psalm lxi. was composed whilst the tabernacle was in use (ver. 4), and after David had received the promise of an everlasting kingdom (6, 7). Yet he appears to be in exile and distress (2). It therefore best suits the time of Absalom's rebellion. The first stanza contains confiding prayer (1—4); the second states the grounds of confidence (5—8). In this, personal deliverance is connected with the fulfilment of the great promise in 2 Sam. vii. 12—16.

3 That is, 'a place of security which I could not reach without thy assistance.'

4 The blessings which God bestows upon those who love and fear him were naturally spoken of by an Israelite in language referring to his inheritance in Canaan.

5 See note on title of Psa. xxxix.

6 There is nothing in Psalm lxii. to indicate when and by whom it was written. Those who attribute it to David refer it to different periods of his life. Its subject is confidence in God alone, in contrast with all other resources, and in face of all enemies and dangers. It contains professions, exhortations, and praise, but not a single prayer. The psalm is naturally divided into three stanzas (vers. 1—4, 5—8, 9—12).

7 Or, 'is silent.' See note on Psa. xxxvii. 7.

8 Rather, 'Will ye all [seek to] slay him, [a man who is] as a bowing wall and a tottering fence.' David's circumstances seemed so desperate that his enemies combined their efforts to destroy him with full expectation of success.

9 Rather, 'elevation;' the figure of the preceding verse being followed out.

10 Deceiving the hope of those who trust in them.

11 Rather, 'in the balance they go up,' as the lighter scale.

12 Wealth, even when lawfully gained, must not be trusted in.

13 Rather, 'One [thing] God hath spoken, these two [things] I have heard, [namely],' etc. The power of God, and his mercy exercised consistently with justice, are the two pillars on which the psalmist rests (vers. 1, 5).

PSALM LXIII. 1—LXIV. 10.

PSALM LXIII.

A Psalm of David, ^x when he was in the wilderness of Judah.¹

- 1 O GOD, ^y thou art my God; ^z early will I seek thee:
^a My soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee
In a dry and thirsty² land, where no water is;
- 2 To see ^b thy power and thy glory,—so as I have seen thee ^c in the sanctuary.
- 3 ^d Because³ thy lovingkindness is better than life,—^e my lips shall praise thee.
- 4 Thus will I bless thee ^f while I live:—^g I will lift up my hands in thy name.
- 5 My soul shall be ^h satisfied as with marrow and fatness;
And my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips:
- 6 When ^h I remember thee upon my bed,
And meditate on thee in the night watches.⁴
- 7 'Because thou hast been my help,
Therefore ^m in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.
- 8 " My soul followeth⁵ hard after thee:—^o thy right hand upholdeth me.
- 9 But those ^p that seek my soul, to destroy it, Shall go into the lower parts of the earth.⁶
- 10 ' They shall fall by the sword:—they shall be a portion for foxes.⁷
- 11 But ' the king shall rejoice in God;
^s Every one that sweareth by him⁸ shall glory:
But ' the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

PSALM LXIV.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.⁹

- 1 HEAR my voice, O God, in my prayer:
^u Preserve my life from fear of the enemy.
- 2 ^x Hide me from ^y the secret counsel of the wicked;
^z From the insurrection of the workers of iniquity.
- 3 ' Who whet their tongue like a sword,
^b And bend their bows¹⁰ to shoot their arrows, even bitter words:
- 4 ' That they may shoot in secret at ^d the perfect:
^c Suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.
- 5 ^f They encourage themselves in an evil matter:
^g They commune of laying snares privily;—^h they say, Who shall see them?
- 6 ' They search out iniquities;—they accomplish a diligent search:¹¹
Both ^k the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.
- 7 ' But God shall shoot¹² at them with an arrow;
^m Suddenly shall they be wounded.
- 8 So they shall make ⁿ their own tongue¹³ to fall upon themselves:
^o All that see them shall flee away.
- 9 ^p And all men shall fear, and shall ' declare the work of God;¹⁴ ^r For they shall wisely consider of his doing.
- 10 ' The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him;
And all ' the upright in heart shall glory.

1 This is the wilderness along the east of the tribe of Judah. David remained here a short time during his flight from Absalom (see 2 Sam. xv. 23, 28; xvi. 2; xvii. 16); and to this period the psalm probably refers (see ver. 11). Longing and praying for return to public worship (vers. 1, 2), and gratefully remembering past mercies (3—8), David anticipates his own deliverance through the destruction of his foes (9—11).

2 Or, 'weary;' as in 2 Sam. xvi. 2; xvii. 29. David's bodily privations are doubtless here alluded to, though the phrase may have a figurative application.

3 Rather, 'For thy loving-kindness,' etc.; asserting it as a fact, rather than assigning it as a reason for what follows.

4 The ancient Hebrews divided the night into three watches, which are severally mentioned, Lam. ii. 19; Judg. vii. 19; Exod. xiv. 24. The number of divisions was afterwards increased to six.

5 Rather, 'cleaveth firmly to thee.'

6 Perhaps alluding to the doom of Korah and his company (Numb. xvi. 31—34).

7 Or, 'jackals.' See the account of the defeat and destruction of Absalom's army in 2 Sam. xviii. 6—8.

8 That is, by God.

9 Psalm lxiv. complains of calumnious persecutors (1—6), and anticipates their exemplary punishment (7—10). It suits the time when David was suffering from the hatred of Saul.

10 More simply, 'And bend [i. e. aim, direct] their arrows,' etc. This figure suggests the poignant pain produced by calumny.

11 Rather, 'They search out iniquities; [they say] we are ready; the search is completed.' They scrutinized every action with the view of putting a bad construction upon it.

12 The arrow of God is here contrasted with the arrow of the wicked (vers. 3, 4). He makes the injuries which they intended to inflict on others revert to themselves.

13 The consequences of their false malignant speeches and their mischievous deliberations.

14 That is, 'shall declare it to be his work;' 'his doing' (see next clause): they shall no longer foolishly ascribe it to mere chance or human agency.

PSALM LXV.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.¹

- 1 PRAISE ^u waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion :
And ^x unto thee shall the vow be performed.
- 2 O thou ^y that hearest prayer,—^z unto thee shall all flesh come.
- 3 ^a Iniquities prevail against me :
As for our transgressions, thou shalt ^b purge them away.
- 4 ^c Blessed is the man whom thou ^d choosest,
And causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts :
^e We shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house,—even of thy holy temple.
- 5 By ^f terrible things ^g in righteousness² wilt thou answer us,
O God of our salvation ;
Who art the confidence of ^h all the ends of the earth,
And of them that are ⁱ afar off upon the sea :
- 6 Which by his strength setteth fast the mountains ;—^k being girded with power :
- 7 ^l Which stilleth the noise of the seas,
^m The noise of their waves, ⁿ and the tumult of the people.
- 8 They also that dwell in the uttermost parts are ^o afraid at thy tokens.
Thou makest ^p the outgoings³ of the morning and evening to rejoice.
- 9 Thou ^q visitest the earth, and ^r waterest it :
Thou greatly enrichest it ^s with the river of God,⁴ which is full of water :
^t Thou preparest them corn,—when thou hast so provided for it.
- 10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly :—thou settlest the furrows thereof :
Thou makest it soft with showers :—thou blessest the springing thereof.
- 11 Thou ^u crownest the year with thy goodness ;—and thy paths drop fatness.
- 12 They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness :
And the little hills rejoice on every side.
- 13 The pastures are clothed with flocks ;
^x The valleys also are covered over with corn ;—they shout for joy, they also sing.

PSALM LXVI.

To the chief Musician, A Song or Psalm.⁵

- 1 ^y MAKE a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands :
2 Sing forth the honour of his name :—make his praise glorious.
- 3 Say unto God, How ^z terrible art thou in thy works !
^a Through the greatness of thy power
Shall thine enemies submit themselves unto thee.
- 4 ^b All the earth shall worship thee,
And ^c shall sing unto thee ; they shall sing to thy name. Selah.
- 5 ^d Come and see the works of God :
He is ^e terrible in his doing toward the children of men.
- 6 ^f He turned the sea into dry land :—^g they went through the flood on foot :
^h There did we rejoice in him.
- 7 He ruleth by his power for ever ;—ⁱ his eyes behold the nations :
^k Let not the rebellious exalt themselves. Selah.
- 8 ^l Oh bless our God, ye people,—and make the voice of his praise to be heard :
- 9 ^m Which holdeth⁶ our soul in life,—and ⁿ suffereth not our feet to be moved.
- 10 For ^o thou, O God, hast proved us :—^p thou hast tried us, as silver is tried.
- 11 ^q Thou broughtest us into the net ;⁷—thou laidst affliction ^r upon our loins.
- 12 ^s Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads ;

¹ Psalm lxv. is a joyous and grateful hymn apparently designed for use in the sanctuary, connecting its spiritual enjoyments (vers. 1—4) with the great works of Divine power (5—8), and especially with Divine bounty in the fertility of the earth (9—13). The Hebrews were taught to acknowledge this in their sacred festivals. See Exod. xxiii. 16 ; Lev. xxiii. 9—14, 39 ; Deut. xvi. 9, 13. And it is not improbable, that, when David added the use of music to the worship of the tabernacle, he composed this psalm to be sung at one of these festivals ; perhaps on the occasions referred to in Lev. xxiii. 9—14.

² By astonishing and awe-inspiring deliverances.

³ That is, the places from which they appear to come ; a poetical representation of the east and the west.

⁵ The writer of Psalm lxvi. calls upon all to praise God (vers. 1—4) for the wonders of former days (5—7), but especially for a recent national deliverance (8—12) ; and declares his determination to pay his vows in the temple (13—15), since his prayers have been heard (16—20). The language is of general application, and affords no clue to the particular events which called forth this song of praise.

⁶ Heb., 'putteth ;' i. e. restoreth to life the nation that seemed to have perished.

⁷ Into complicated difficulties and embarrassments.

⁸ 'Fire' and 'water,' as two great agents of destruction, are commonly used to represent distress and danger.

⁹ Or, 'to abundance.' The same Hebrew word is translated 'runneth over' in Psa. xxiii. 5.

- 13 * I will go into thy house with burnt offerings:—^v I will pay thee my vows, 14 Which my lips have uttered,—and my mouth hath spoken, ^z when I was in trouble.
15 I will offer unto thee burnt sacrifices of fatlings, with the incense of rams;
I will offer bullocks with goats. Selah.
16 ^a Come and hear, all ye that fear God,
And ^b I will declare what he hath done for my soul.¹
17 I cried unto him with my mouth,—and he was extolled with my tongue.
18 ^c If I regard iniquity in my heart,—the LORD will not hear me:
19 But verily God ^d hath heard me;—he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.
20 Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer,—nor his mercy from me.

PSALM LXVII.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth, A Psalm or Song. 2

- 1 GOD be merciful unto us, and bless us;
And ^e cause his face to shine upon us. Selah.
2 ^f That ^g thy way may be known upon earth,
^h Thy saving health³ among all nations.
3 ⁱ Let the people praise thee, O God;—let all the people praise thee.
4 ^k Oh let the nations be glad and sing for joy:
For ^l thou shalt judge the people righteously,
And ^m govern the nations upon earth. Selah.
5 Let the people praise thee, O God;—let all the people praise thee.
6 ⁿ Then shall the earth yield⁴ her increase;
And God, even ^o our own God, shall bless us.
7 ^p God shall bless us;—and ^q all the ends of the earth shall fear him.

PSALM LXVIII.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm or Song of David. 5

- 1 LET ^r God arise, let his enemies be scattered:
Let them also ^s that hate him flee before him.
2 ^t As smoke is driven away, so drive them away:
^u As wax melteth before the fire,—so let the wicked perish ^v at the presence of God.
3 But ^w let the righteous be glad;—let them rejoice before God:
Yea, let them exceedingly rejoice.
4 ^x Sing unto God, sing praises to his name:

¹ That is, 'for me.' The psalmist throughout identifies his own interests with those of the nation, the people of God; and hence uses sometimes the singular and sometimes the plural.

² Psalm lxvii., like Ps. lxx., appears to have been composed in connection with one of the great festivals, probably the feast of tabernacles (see note on ver. 6, and on Lev. xxiii. 34), by one who entered fully into the spiritual designs of those services; looking beyond the temporal privileges and prosperity of the Hebrew nation to the blessings to be conferred upon the whole world by the Messiah.

³ Rather, 'salvation.' A blessing is implored on Israel, to prepare them to communicate blessings to all nations.

⁴ Rather, 'the earth has yielded her increase.'

⁵ Psalm lxviii. begins with the formula used in the wilderness at the removal of the ark (Numb. x. 35), and contains throughout allusions to that sacred symbol of Jehovah's presence, describing a solemn procession, in which the northern and southern tribes united, to the sanctuary at Jerusalem. All this points to some period in the reign of David when the ark was brought up to Mount Zion. Some, observing the martial character of this psalm, suppose it to have been composed when the ark, which had been with the army (see 2 Sam. xi. 11), was brought back after the subjugation of the Ammonites. But considering David's unhappy circumstances and state of mind at that time, this appears a much less probable occasion for the psalm than the first bringing up of the ark to Zion: and this event might well be celebrated in a warlike ode, as that fortress had lately been taken, after having for several centuries defied the power of Israel; whilst David's other wars were yet unfinished. David praises Jehovah as the protector of his people and the destroyer of the wicked (vers. 1—3); celebrates his doings in former times for Israel (4—14), his choice and conquest of Zion for his dwelling-place (15—19), and his recent favours to his people (20—23); describes the procession with the ark to the sanctuary (24—27); predicts the future extension and exaltation of the kingdom of God on earth (28—31); and concludes with a call to universal praise (32—35).

⁷ This name is an abbreviation of Jehovah; for the meaning of which see note on Exod. iii. 14.

⁸ Rather, 'He bringeth out those who are bound into prosperity.' The glorious change effected by God in the condition of his oppressed people is contrasted with that of his enemies next mentioned.

- 7 O God,¹ when thou wentest forth before thy people,
^k When thou didst march through the wilderness; Selah:
8 The earth shook, the heavens also dropped at the presence of God:
Even Sinai itself was moved at the presence of God, the God of Israel.
9 ^m Thou, O God, didst send a plentiful rain,² Whereby thou didst confirm thine inheritance,³ when it was weary.
10 ⁿ Thy congregation hath dwelt therein:⁴
^o Thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the poor.
11 The LORD gave the word:—great was the company of those that published it.⁵
12 ^p Kings of armies did flee apace:
And ^q she that tarried at home divided the spoil.
13 ^r Though ye have lien among the pots,⁶
^s Yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver,
And her feathers with yellow gold.
14 When the Almighty scattered kings in it,—it was white as snow⁷ in Salmon.
15 The hill of God is as the hill of Bashan;⁸—an high hill as the hill of ^x Bashan.
16 ^y Why leap⁹ ye, ye high hills?—this is the hill which God desireth to dwell in;
Yea, the LORD will dwell in it for ever.
17 The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels:¹⁰
The LORD is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place.¹¹
18 ^b Thou hast ascended on high,—^c thou hast led captivity captive:¹²
^d Thou hast received¹³ gifts for men;
Yea, for ^e the rebellious also, ^f that the LORD God might dwell among them.
19 ^g Blessed be the LORD, who ^h daily loadeth us with benefits,
Even the God of our salvation. Selah.
20 He that is our God is the God of salvation;
And ⁱ unto God the Lord belong the issues from death.
21 But ^k God shall wound the head of his enemies,
^l And the hairy scalp of such an one as goeth on still in his trespasses.
22 The LORD said, I will bring ^m again from Bashan,
I will bring *my people*¹⁴ again ⁿ from the depths of the sea:
23 ^o That thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thine enemies,
^p And the tongue of thy dogs in the same.
24 They have seen thy goings, O God;
Even ^q the goings of my God, my King, in the sanctuary.
25 ^r The singers went before, ^s the players on instruments followed after;
^t Among them were the damsels playing with timbrels.

1 Vers. 7, 8 are taken, with little alteration, from the song of Deborah in Judg. v. 4, 5.

2 Heb., 'a rain of liberalities.' This may refer either literally to refreshing showers, with which the people were favoured from time to time in the wilderness, or to the abundant gifts of different kinds bestowed upon them there, especially the manna.

3 That is, 'thy people:' see Deut. xxxii. 9.

4 In the wilderness mentioned in ver. 7. The 'poor' in the latter part of the verse are the same as the 'congregation' in the former. God had graciously provided for these a home in the land of promise.

5 Rather, 'Great was the company of the women announcing the joyful news;' alluding to the ancient custom of females celebrating victories with song and dance: see Exod. xv. 20; 1 Sam. xviii. 6, 7.

6 Rather, 'When ye shall lie down among the folds' (i. e. when, the toils of war being over, ye shall enjoy rural and domestic repose), 'ye shall be as,' etc. The following clause alludes to the play of colours on the wings of doves in sunshine: Ye shall be surrounded by every token of opulence and splendour.

7 That is, as many explain, 'white with the bones of the slain.' 'Salmon' was a hill near to Shechem: see Judg. ix. 48.

8 Rather, 'A hill of God (i. e. a great hill, as a similar phrase is rendered in Psa. xxxvi. 6) is the hill of Bashan; a high hill is the hill of Bashan.' This is the range of Anti-libanus, which formed the northern boundary of Bashan. Its southern peak, called 'Hermon,' is often referred to in Scripture, being the loftiest and most majestic mountain in Canaan; and its grandeur, as such, is here contrasted with the greater glory of Zion as the 'holy mountain.'

9 Rather, 'Why look ye askance?' i. e. with envy, at the honour put on Zion as the earthly residence of God.

10 Rather, 'many thousands.' As chariots formed a large part of the military resources and triumphal pomp of the greatest monarchs of that day (see 2 Sam. viii. 4; x. 18), so David poetically represents the Divine Conqueror and King of Zion as attended by an innumerable multitude of chariots. Comp. 2 Kings vi. 17.

11 Or, 'Sinai is in the holy place;' i. e. the ancient honours of Sinai are transferred to the sanctuary on Zion; the glorious presence of God, once witnessed there, is now vouchsafed here. Comp. Heb. xii. 18–24.

12 That is, 'Thou hast taken a multitude of captives.'

13 Rather, 'Thou hast obtained gifts among men;' probably a concise expression for, 'Thou hast taken spoil which thou mayest distribute as gifts among men.' So that the apostle's quotation in Eph. iv. 8 agrees exactly with the sense, though not with the words of the psalm. And if God's conquest and possession of a place where he might manifest his grace be here celebrated, the passage is obviously applicable to the victory achieved, and the blessings bestowed by our Divine Redeemer.

14 Rather, 'my enemies;' for they are the persons spoken of in vers. 21, 23. God would subdue and triumph over them; so that whether they were on the heights of Bashan, or in the profoundest depths of the sea, they should not be able to escape. Comp. Amos ix. 3.

- 26 " Bless ye God in the congregations,
Even the LORD, from ^z the fountain¹ of Israel.
- 27 There is ^y little Benjamin *with*² their ruler, ^z The princes of Judah and their council,
The princes of Zebulun, and the princes of Naphtali.

^b Strengthen, O God, that which thou hast wrought for us.
- 29 Because of thy temple at Jerusalem—^c shall kings bring presents unto thee.
- 30 Rebuke the company of spearmen,³
^d The multitude of the bulls, with the calves of the people,
Till every one ^e submit himself with pieces of silver :
Scatter thou the people that delight in war.
- 31 ^f Princes shall come out of Egypt ;
^g Ethiopia shall soon ^h stretch out her hands unto God.
- 32 Sing unto God, ⁱ ye kingdoms of the earth ;
Oh sing praises unto the LORD ; Selah :
- 33 To him ^k that rideth upon the heavens of heavens, which were ^l of old ;
Lo, ^m he doth send out his voice, and that a mighty voice.
- 34 " Ascribe ye strength unto God :
ⁿ His excellency is over Israel,—and his strength is in the clouds [or, heavens].
- 35 O God, ^p thou art terrible out of thy holy places :

PSALM LXIX.

To the chief Musician ^s upon Shoshannim, A Psalm of David. 4

- 1 SAVE me, O God ;—for ^t the waters are come in unto my soul.
- 2 " I sink in deep mire, where there is no standing :
I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me.
- 3 ^u I am weary of my crying : ^v my throat is dried :
^z Mine eyes fail while I wait for my God.
- 4 They that ^a hate me without a cause are ^b more than the hairs of mine head :
They that would destroy me, being ^c mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty :
Then I restored that which I took not away.⁵
- 5 O God, thou knowest my foolishness ;—and ^d my sins are not hid from thee.⁶
- 6 ^e Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord God of hosts, be ashamed for my sake :
Let not those that seek thee be confounded for my sake, ^f O God of Israel.
- 7 Because ^g for thy sake I have borne reproach ;—^h shame hath covered my face.
- 8 ⁱ I am become a stranger unto my brethren,
And an alien unto my mother's children.
- 9 ^k For the zeal of thine house⁷ hath eaten me up ;
^l And the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me.
- 10 ^m When I wept, and chastened my soul with fasting, that was to my reproach.
- 11 I made sackcloth also my garment ;—ⁿ and I became a proverb to them.
- 12 ^o They that sit in the gate⁸ speak against me ;
And ^p I was the song of the drunkards.
- 13 But as for me, ^q my prayer is unto thee, O LORD, ^r in an acceptable time :
O God, ^s in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation.⁹

1 That is, 'ye who are of the fountain of Israel ;' comparing the lineage of the chosen people to the source of a stream : see Deut. xxxiii. 28 ; Isa. xlviii. 1.

2 Rather, 'Benjamin the youngest, their ruler.'

3 Rather, 'Rebuke the beast of the reeds ;' meaning either the crocodile or the hippopotamus ; as a symbol of Egypt, the most powerful heathen kingdom then existing : see next verse.

4 In Psalm lxix. a godly man complains of the sufferings (vers. 1—4) which his sincere though not sinless (5) devotedness to God had brought upon him (6—12) ; and prays for his own deliverance (13—18) and the destruction of his foes (19—28) ; this he anticipates and connects with God's more extensive mercies to Israel (29—36). The psalm is parallel to Ps. xxii., xxxv. ; and, in connecting the believer's experience with that of his Redeemer, it resembles Ps. xvi., xl. See notes on titles of these psalms. If composed by David, it was probably written in his later afflictions. But many assign it to a later period, during or after the exile in Babylon.

5 This is an emphatic manner of expressing the causelessness of the enmity complained of. 'So far from having wronged any of those who thus persecute me, I have gone beyond the demands of justice in endeavouring to satisfy them.'

6 The meaning is, 'Thou, who knowest all my sins, knowest that I am guiltless of the crimes imputed to me.' The psalmist maintains that he is suffering rather for his piety than for his sins : see ver. 7.

7 That is, 'a jealous regard for the honour of thy sanctuary.' This verse is quoted in John ii. 17 ; Rom. xv. 3.

8 Some refer this to the idle loungers who frequented the gate : but it may mean, 'The [nobles] who sit in the gate,' etc. (see Deut. xxv. 7 ; Job xxix. 7 ; Jer. xxxix. 3) : so that, connecting this with the second clause of the verse, the meaning would be, 'I am an object of hatred and scorn to the highest and the lowest.'

9 That Divine faithfulness which insures the salvation of those who trust in it.

- 14 ' Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink :
^a Let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of ^x the deep waters.
- 15 Let not the waterflood overflow me,—neither let the deep swallow me up,
 And let not the pit ^y shut her mouth upon me.
- 16 Hear me, O LORD; ^z for thy lovingkindness is good :
^a Turn unto me ^b according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.
- 17 And ^c hide not thy face from thy servant ;
^d For I am in trouble : hear me speedily.
- 18 ^e Draw nigh unto my soul, and redeem it :—deliver me because of mine enemies.
- 19 Thou hast known ^f my reproach, and my shame, and ^g my dishonour :
 Mine adversaries are all before thee.
- 20 ^h Reproach ⁱ hath broken my heart ;—and ^j I am full of heaviness :
 And ^k I looked for some to take pity, but ^l there was none ;
 And for ^m comforters, but I found none.
- 21 They gave me also gall for my meat ;
ⁿ And in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.
- 22 ^o Let their table become a snare before them :
 And that which should have been for their welfare, ² let it become ^p a trap.
- 23 ^q Let their eyes be darkened, that they see not ;
 And ^r make their loins continually to shake.
- 24 ^s Pour out thine indignation upon them,
 And let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.
- 25 ' Let their habitation be desolate ;—and let none dwell in their tents.
- 26 For ^t they persecute ^x him whom thou hast smitten ;
 And ^y they talk to the grief ³ of those whom thou hast wounded.
- 27 ^z Add iniquity ⁴ unto their iniquity ;—^a and let them not come into thy righteousness.
- 28 Let them ^b be blotted out of the book of the living, ^c And not be written with the righteous.
- 29 But I am poor and sorrowful :—let thy salvation, O God, ^d set me up on high.
- 30 ^e I will praise the name of God with a song,
 And will ^f magnify him with thanksgiving.
- 31 ^g This also shall please the LORD better than an ox
 Or bullock that hath horns and hoofs.
- 32 ^h The humble shall see this, and be glad :
 And ⁱ your heart shall live that seek God.
- 33 For ^k the LORD heareth the poor,—and despiseth not ^l his prisoners.
- 34 ^m Let the heaven and earth praise him,
 The seas, ⁿ and every thing that moveth therein.
- 35 ^o For God will save Zion, and will ^p build the cities of Judah :
 That they may dwell there, and have it in possession.
- 36 ^q The seed also of his servants shall inherit it :
 And ^r they that love his name shall dwell therein.

PSALM LXX.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David, ^s to bring to remembrance. ⁵

- 1 MAKE haste, ' O God, to deliver me ;—make haste to help me, O LORD.
- 2 ^a Let them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul :
 Let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt.
- 3 ^x Let them be turned back for a reward of their shame that say, Aha ! aha !
- 4 Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee :
 And let such as love thy salvation say continually, Let God be magnified.
- 5 ^y But I am poor and needy :—^z make haste unto me, O God :
 Thou art my help and my deliverer ;—O LORD, make no tarrying.

¹ Including calumny and insult. To no one has the remainder of this verse ever been more applicable than to the Redeemer; whilst the next verse was circumstantially verified at his crucifixion. See Matt. xxvi. 56; xxvii. 34; John xix. 28—30. The drink here mentioned being that of the most abject, to offer it to any other was an insult.

² Rather, 'And to them when in peace (i. e. when they think themselves safe) let it be a trap.'

³ Or, 'of the grief;' i. e. they talk about it derisively.
⁴ Some explain this, 'Let punishment (the consequence of sin) follow sin;' others, 'Leave them to themselves, so that they may go on to sin more and more.'

⁵ Psalm lxx. is the same, with a few small variations, as the last verses of Psal. xl. ; and is a prayer to God for speedy deliverance from imminent danger.

⁶ Both the occasion and the writer of Psalm lxxi. are unknown. It was evidently the production of the later

- ^d Incline thine ear unto me, and save me.
- 3 ^e Be thou my strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort :
Thou hast given ^f commandment to save me ;
^g For thou art my rock and my fortress.
- 4 ^h Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked,
Out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.
- 5 For thou art ⁱ my hope, O Lord God :—thou art my trust from my youth.
- 6 ^k By thee have I been holden up from the womb :
Thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels :
^l My praise shall be continually of thee.
- 7 ^m I am as a wonder unto many ;—but ⁿ thou art my strong refuge.
- 8 Let ^o my mouth be filled ¹ with thy praise—and with thy honour all the day.
- 9 ^p Cast me not off in the time of old age ;
Forsake me not when my strength faileth.
- 10 For mine enemies speak against me ;²
^q And they that lay wait for my soul ^r take counsel together,
- 11 Saying, ^s God hath forsaken him :
Persecute and take him ; for there is none to deliver him.
- 12 ^t O God, be not far from me :—O my God, ^u make haste for my help.
- 13 ^x Let them ³ be confounded and consumed that are adversaries to my soul ;
Let them be covered with reproach and dishonour that seek my hurt.
- 14 ^y But I will hope continually,—and will yet ^z praise thee more and more.
- 15 ^a My mouth shall show forth thy righteousness and thy salvation all the day ;
For ^b I know not the numbers thereof.⁴
- 16 I will go ⁵ ^c in the strength of the Lord God :
^d I will make mention of ^e thy righteousness, even of thine only.
- 17 O God, ^f thou hast taught me from my youth :
And ^g hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works.
- 18 ^h Now also when I am old and greyheaded,—O God, forsake me not ;
ⁱ Until I have showed thy strength unto this generation,
And thy power to every one that is to come.
- 19 ^k Thy righteousness also, O God, is very high, ^l Who hast done great things :—^m O God, who is like unto thee !
- 20 ⁿ Thou, which hast showed me ⁶ great and sore troubles, ^o shalt quicken me again,
And shalt ^p bring me up again from the depths of the earth.
- 21 ^q Thou shalt increase my greatness,—and comfort me on every side.⁷
- 22 I will also praise thee ^r with the psaltery,—even thy truth, O my God :
Unto thee will I sing with the harp,—O thou ^s Holy One of Israel.
- 23 ^t My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee ;
And ^u my soul, which thou hast redeemed.
- 24 ^x My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long :
For ^y they are confounded, for they are brought unto shame, that seek my hurt.

PSALM LXXII.

A Psalm ^z for [or, of] Solomon.⁸

- 1 ⁹ GIVE ^a the king thy judgments, O God,
And thy righteousness unto ^b the king's son.¹⁰
- 2 ^c He shall judge thy people with righteousness,—and ^d thy poor with judgment.

years of the author's life : see vers. 9, 17, 18. It contains an earnest prayer for deliverance from danger (vers. 1—13), and an expression of steady confidence in the God of his mercies (14—24). Vers. 1—3 are a reproduction of Psa. xxxi. 1—3, with a few variations.

- 1 Rather, 'My mouth shall be filled,' etc. See ver. 6.
- 2 Rather, 'For mine enemies say to me,' etc. What they say is in ver. 11.
- 3 Rather, 'They shall be confounded,' etc.
- 4 That is, they are innumerable.
- 5 This is an elliptical expression for 'I will go [to the house of God] with the mighty deeds of Jehovah ;' i. e. as in the next line, to praise him for them : see refs.
- 6 Rather, 'us.' The psalmist connects his own experience with that of all God's people.
- 7 Rather, 'Thou wilt turn and comfort me.'
- 8 This should be rendered, as in the other titles, 'of Solomon.'

9 Psalm lxxii. anticipates the advent of a righteous King ; whose government it celebrates as being founded in justice (vers. 1—4) ; permanent and salutary in its administration (5—7) ; universal in extent (8—11) ; beneficent to the poor (12—14) ; and consequently ensuring for the King himself universal love, and growing and endless fame (15—17). Vers. 18, 19 are a doxology, and ver. 20 is a postscript belonging to this book or division of the psalms. The illustrations and character of the psalm harmonize better with the reign of Solomon than with any other. And it appears to have been composed by that great monarch, in his best days, as a prophecy of the Messiah, in whom alone it can find its fulfilment.

10 The 'king's son' is evidently the same person as 'the king' in the preceding clause. The subjects of these petitions are identical with those of the predictions which follow.

PSALM LXXIII.

A Psalm ^s of [or, for] Asaph. 9

- 1 TRULY God is good to Israel,—even to such as are of a clean heart.
- 2 But as for me, ^t my feet were almost gone ;—^u my steps had well nigh slipped.
- 3 ^x For I was envious at the foolish,—when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.
- 4 For there are ^y no bands in their death :—but their strength is firm.¹⁰

1 The mountains and hills are mentioned, probably as being the prominent points of the country ; thus expressing the idea that the whole country shall be in peace.

2 The connection of the 'peace' with the 'righteousness' is that which is more plainly stated in Isa. xxxii. 17. The 'peace' will be the effect of the righteousness ; and these two are repeatedly mentioned as the grand characteristics of Messiah's reign.

3 With a gentle, and at the same time refreshing and fertilizing influence.

4 That is, the Euphrates ; which was the eastern boundary of the kingdom of Israel under Solomon. See Deut. xi. 24. Universal dominion is doubtless intended.

5 See note on 1 Kings x. 22.

6 See notes on 1 Kings x. 1, and Ps. xlv. 12. These places are mentioned to show that the wealth of the world shall be made tributary to the Messiah.

7 'We pray for Christ,' says Augustine, 'when we pray for the church of Christ ; because it is his body.' We thus pray, whenever we offer the prayer, 'Thy kingdom come.'

8 This Hebrew word occurs nowhere else. According to some, it means 'handful,' and suggests the contrast between the small beginnings and the ultimately universal prevalence of the Messiah's kingdom. According to others, it means 'plenty ;' so that in this verse the prosperity of that kingdom is represented by the two promised blessings of the old dispensation, abundant fertility and a numerous population.

9 Psalms lxxiii.—lxxxiii. are all ascribed in the titles to Asaph (see note on title to Ps. 1.) ; but it is clear that they were composed at different periods from the days of David down to the captivity in Babylon. There is nothing to fix the date of Psalm lxxiii. ; but it was evidently written (see ver. 17) before the destruction of the temple. The pious author, though believing that God is always and only good to his people (ver. 1), had yet been sorely perplexed by the apparently unequal distribution of prosperity and afflictions in the present life (2—11), but had been kept from scepticism chiefly by the instructions of the sanctuary (12—17), which showed him the final result of all (18—20) ; so that he was humbled for his folly, and confirmed in his confidence in God and devotedness to him alone (21—28). The psalm, like Ps. xxxvii., xlix., is invaluable as a corrective of repining and unbelieving thoughts.

10 As the life rather than the death of the wicked is the subject of these remarks, some render, 'For they have no bands (or restraints) ; perfect and firm is their strength.' Others, for 'in,' render 'until their death.'

- 5 ^a They are not in trouble as other men;—neither are they plagued like other men.
 6 Therefore pride compasseth them about ^a as a chain;¹
 Violence covereth them ^b as a garment.
 7 ^c Their eyes stand out with fatness:—they have more than heart could wish.²
 8 ^d They are corrupt, and ^e speak wickedly concerning oppression:³
 They ^f speak loftily.
 9 They set their mouth ^g against the heavens,⁴
 And their tongue walketh through the earth.
 10 Therefore his ^h people return hither:
^h And waters of a full cup are wrung out⁶ to them.
 11 And they say, ⁱ How doth God know?
 And ^k is there knowledge in the Most High?
 12 Behold, these are the ungodly, who ^l prosper in the world;
 They increase in riches.
 13 ^m Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain,—and ⁿ washed my hands in innocency.
 14 For ^o all the day long have I been plagued,—and chastened every morning.
 15 If I say, I will speak thus;⁷
 Behold, I should ^p offend against the generation of thy children.
 16 ^q When I thought⁸ to know this,—it was too painful for me;
 17 Until ^r I went into the sanctuary of God;—then understood I ^s their end.
 18 Surely ^t thou didst set them in slippery places;
^u Thou castedst them down into destruction.
 19 How are they brought into desolation, ^v as in a moment!
 They are utterly consumed with terrors.
 20 ^w As a dream⁹ when one awaketh;
 So, O Lord, ^x when thou awakest, thou shalt despise their image.
 21 Thus my heart was ^y grieved,—and I was pricked in my reins.
 22 ^z So foolish was I, and ignorant:—I was ^a as a beast before thee.
 23 ^b Nevertheless I am continually with thee:
^c Thou hast holden me by my right hand.¹⁰
 24 ^d Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel,—and afterward ^e receive me to glory.
 25 ^f Whom have I in heaven but thee?
 And there is ^g none upon earth that I desire beside thee.
 26 ^h My flesh and my heart faileth:
 But ⁱ God is the strength of my heart, and ^j my portion for ever.
 27 For, lo, ^k they that are far from thee shall perish:
 Thou hast destroyed all them that ^l go a whoring from thee.
 28 But it is good for me to ^m draw near to God:
 I have put my trust in the Lord God,—that I may ⁿ declare all thy works.

1 That is, an ornamental chain for the neck; probably referring to their haughty carriage.

2 Rather, 'The thoughts of their hearts overflow;' namely, in the wicked and proud speeches mentioned in the next verse.

3 Rather, as in Isa. lix. 13, 'They speak oppression loftily;' i. e. they speak words tending to the injury of others.

4 Rather, 'in heaven:' they give unlimited range to their arrogant and reproachful language.

5 Some take this to mean God's people, who behold this painful spectacle; or are perhaps induced to conform too much to the world, in the hope of sharing its full cup of prosperity. But the unity of the passage seems to be better maintained by referring it to the people of the wicked; i. e. his friends and adherents, who come to join him, and drink out the full cup of his pleasures.

6 Rather, 'are drunk down by them.' The 'waters' are not those of affliction, but of prosperity.

7 That is, 'If I make my misgivings known, I shall suggest injurious doubts to thy sincere worshippers.' The psalmist cannot adopt the sceptical and undevout language of the half-hearted; for in so doing he would act treacherously towards God's faithful servants—those who in a special sense are here called his 'children.'

8 This verse describes the psalmist's unsuccessful attempt to solve the moral problem that perplexed him by meditation and independent reasoning. He gained neither light nor rest till he sought the aid of devotion, and entered the sanctuary, as described in ver. 17.

9 Of the various meanings given to this verse, the best perhaps is, 'As a dream after awaking, so, O Lord, when thou arousest them, thou wilt put to scorn their image;' i. e. the unsubstantial appearance of their prosperity.

10 That is, 'Thou hast preserved me from the fall of which I was in danger:' see ver. 2.

11 See note on title of Ps. xxxii.

12 Psalm lxxiv. was evidently written after the capture of Jerusalem and destruction of the temple by the Chaldeans. If the title be correct, it must be supposed that the writer either bore the same name as the inspired composer of David's time, or was one of his descendants, 'a son of Asaph.' The psalmist, in the name of the people, entreates God's interposition (vers. 1, 2); depicts their desolation (3—9); and pleads former displays of Divine power on their behalf (10—17), and the connection between Jehovah's honour and Israel's deliverance (18—23).

- 16 ^u The day is thine, the night also is thine:
^v Thou hast prepared the light and the sun.
- 17 Thou hast ^w set all the borders of the earth:—^x thou hast made summer and winter.
- 18 ^y Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached, O LORD,

- 20 ^c Have respect unto the covenant:⁹

- 21 ^e Oh let not the oppressed return ashamed:

- 22 ^f Arise, O God, plead thine own cause:

- 23 ^h Forget not the voice of thine enemies:

ⁿ Ex. 23. 21; Deu. 4. 7.

1 That is, 'in the holy assemblies of thy people;' which they thus disturbed. Comp. Lam. ii. 7.

2 'Their signs as signs;' i. e. displacing the symbols of Jehovah's presence as sovereign, they erect their insignia of sovereignty in the sanctuary itself.

3 Rather, 'It is known (i. e. it appears) like raising on high axes in the thicket of the wood; for now they are breaking down,' etc.

4 This word in ver. 4 is translated 'congregations.' It may mean that, by burning the temple, the enemies had put an end to all the holy assemblies; or it may refer to other places in which such assemblies were held.

5 That is, 'the tokens of thy presence' (see ver. 4). One of the more distinguished of these, namely, the gift of prophecy, is immediately mentioned. Comp. Lam. ii. 9.

6 Either, '[Draw it] from thy bosom [and] consume [them]'—the hand being placed sometimes in the bosom when not employed; or, 'From thy bosom consume [them],' in allusion to the shaking out of the bosom things which had been put there. Comp. Prov. xvi. 33 (where the word here used is found); Neh. v. 13, and note.

7 Or, 'sea-monsters.' These and 'leviathan' are symbols of the Egyptian monarch and his hosts, who were drowned in the Red Sea. See Ezek. xxix. 3. By 'the people inhabiting the wilderness' (ver. 14) some understand wild animals (see Prov. xxx. 25, 26) which frequent the shore, and feed on the dead bodies cast up by the sea.

8 This beautiful metaphor suggests the ideas of innocence, affection, and weakness.

9 That is, the covenant made with our forefathers. The 'cruelty' afterwards mentioned is probably the outrage and violence perpetrated by the Chaldean conquerors in the unfrequented parts of the land.

10 See note on title of Ps. lvii. In a time of extreme danger from the pride and power of the wicked, the psalmist joyfully recognises the approaching interposition of the Divine Judge (vers. 1—3), warns the wicked of their doom (4—8), and anticipates the exaltation of the righteous (9, 10). The omission of the north in ver. 6, as being a quarter from which no earthly help could be expected, has led some to refer the psalm to the time of the Assyrian inroad from that direction (see 2 Kings xviii., xix.); but the danger spoken of appears rather to arise from internal foes.

11 Rather, 'Yea, thy name is near; they recount thy wonders. When I shall reach the appointed time, I will judge righteously. The land and its inhabitants are melting; I hold its pillars.' Ver. 1 describes the

PSALM LXXVII.

To the chief Musician, ^d to Jeduthun,⁸ A Psalm of [or, for] Asaph.⁹

- 1 ^e I CRIED unto God¹⁰ with my voice,
Even unto God with my voice; and ^f he gave ear unto me.

approach of Jehovah; vers. 2, 3 are his proclamation. Hence some have not inappropriately applied these words to the Messiah.

1 Many prefer the ancient rendering, 'For not from the east, nor from the west, nor from the desert of mountains (i. e. the south), [do we look for judgment on the wicked], for God is the Judge.' In either case, it is clear that exaltation or judgment is expected from God alone.

2 The 'cup' often means, in Scripture, the portion allotted to a person. It may be one of prosperity and blessedness (see Ps. xvi. 5; xxiii. 5); or of suffering and wrath, as here and in Jer. xxv. 15; Rev. xvi. 19.

3 Psalm lxxvi. is entitled in the Septuagint, 'A Song for the Assyrian;' and its whole tenor agrees well with the supposition that it refers to the miraculous destruction of Sennacherib's army (2 Kings xix. 35). It triumphantly celebrates the deliverance of Jerusalem by a signal Divine interposition, which destroyed the enemy during the slumbers of the night (vers. 1—6); and then urges this as a reason why all men, and especially all princes, should fear God's judgments (7—12).

4 'Salem' was probably the ancient name of Jerusalem (see Gen. xiv. 18), here used poetically.

5 This may be addressed to Zion, mentioned in ver. 2; which derives from Jehovah's presence and triumphant power far greater glory than was possessed by any of those mountains which were renowned as the fastnesses of robber-chiefs. Or it may be applied to Jehovah, who is contrasted with the invading power, here figuratively represented as 'a mountain of wild beasts.' See Nah. ii. 11, 12; iii. 1.

6 The sleep of death.

7 Rather, 'gird [about thee].' The very passions which excite men to rebel against God shall be made completely subservient to his purposes.

8 See note on title of Ps. xxxix.

9 Psalm lxxvii. contains the desponding complaint of one in extreme suffering (vers. 1—10); relieved by the remembrance of God's former mercies to his people (11—20). Its language is altogether personal; and it shows how the believer may obtain consolation for himself individually from the more general interpositions of God on behalf of his church. It contains no distinct intimation of the date of its composition.

10 Many pour forth vain complaints to their fellow-men; but the psalmist carried his sorrows to God's mercy-seat.

- 2 ^g In the day of my trouble I ^h sought the LORD:
ⁱ My sore¹ ran in the night, and ceased not:—^k my soul refused to be comforted.
- 3 ^l I remembered God, and was troubled:
 I complained, and ^m my spirit was overwhelmed. Selah.
- 4 Thou holdest² ⁿ mine eyes waking:—^o I am so troubled that I cannot speak.
- 5 ^p I have considered the days of old,—the years of ancient times.
- 6 I call to remembrance ^q my song³ in the night:
^r I commune with my own heart:—and ^s my spirit made diligent search.
- 7 ^t Will the LORD cast off for ever?—and will he ^u be favourable no more?
- 8 Is his mercy clean gone for ever?—doth ^x his promise fail for evermore?
- 9 Hath God ^y forgotten to be gracious?
 Hath he in anger ^z shut up his tender mercies? Selah.
- 10 And I said, This ^a is ^b my infirmity:
But I will remember^b the years⁴ of the right hand of the Most High.
- 11 ^c I will remember the works of the LORD:
 Surely I will remember thy wonders of old.
- 12 ^d I will meditate also of all thy work,—^e and talk of thy doings.
- 13 ^f Thy way, O God, is in the sanctuary:⁵—^g who is so great a God as our God?
- 14 Thou art^h the God that doest wonders:
 Thou hast declared thy strength among the people.
- 15 ⁱ Thou hast with thine arm redeemed thy people, ^k The sons of Jacob and Joseph. Selah.
- 16 ^l The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee; they were afraid:
 The depths also were troubled.
- 17 The clouds poured out water:—the skies sent out a sound:
^m Thine arrows also went abroad.
- 18 ⁿ The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven:⁶
^o The lightnings lightened the world:—^p the earth trembled and shook.
- 19 ^q Thy way *is*⁷ in the sea,—and thy path in the great waters, ^r And thy footsteps are not known.⁸
- 20 ^s Thou leddest thy people like a flock—by the hand of Moses and Aaron.

1 Rather, 'My hand was stretched forth in the night;' i. e. in an attitude of supplication.

2 Or, 'heldest.' 'I was so troubled,' etc.; and in vers. 5, 6, 'I considered,' 'I called,' etc.

3 That is, the praises which I once sang, and the Divine benefits which excited me to sing.

4 It is better, without supplying any words not in the original, to render either, 'This is my stroke (or affliction), a change of the right hand of the Most High (i. e. in the dealings of God towards me);' or, 'The years of the,' etc. (i. e. the prolongation of God's chastisements).

5 Or, 'in holiness;' i. e. is most holy. God's 'way' here means his mode of dealing with his creatures, which ought to command their veneration and awe. See Exod. xv. 11.

6 Rather, 'in the whirlwind.'

7 Rather, 'Thy way was in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps were not known:' the words being a poetical description of the passage of the Hebrews through the Red Sea.

8 Such as could not have been expected.

9 The writer of Psalm lxxviii., having reminded his readers that Jehovah had commanded Israel to keep in mind his dealings with them as a nation, that they might avoid their fathers' sins and punishments (vers. 1—8), applies this to establish the claim of Judah to supremacy; and shows that, numerous and marvellous as God's interpositions had been (12—29, 43—55), the people's rebellions and provocations had been many and great, whilst Ephraim was predominant, and the tabernacle was at Shiloh (9—11, 30—42, 56—64); until, in mercy to Israel, he established the sovereignty of Judah in the person and family of David, making his capital the religious centre, and his family the chosen shepherds of God's people (65—72). The psalm was probably written at some time when the controversy between Judah and Ephraim was urgent; but it is not easy to fix the precise date. The notice of the sanctuary built at Jerusalem (ver. 69), and the absence of all allusion to gross idolatry and to the other crimes of the kingdom of the ten tribes, seem to limit it to the period between Sheba's rebellion (2 Sam. xix. 41—xx. 2) and Abijah's victory over Jeroboam (2 Chron. xiii.) It teaches us how to value and use the records of God's dispensations through all ages of the world and the church.

10 Or, 'sententious sayings;' the important instruction involved in the facts of history.

11 Religious privileges received by one generation from the preceding are a sacred deposit to be transmitted to the next. This may remind Christians of their obligation to teach their children the incomparably important and interesting facts and doctrines of the gospel of Christ.

- ^e That they should make them known to their children :
6 ^f That the generation to come might know them,
Even the children which should be born ;
Who should arise and declare them to their children :
7 That they might set their hope in God,
And not forget the works of God,—but keep his commandments :
8 And ^g might not be as their fathers,—^h a stubborn and rebellious generation ;
A generation ⁱ that set not their heart aright,
And whose spirit was not stedfast with God.
9 The children of Ephraim, being armed, and carrying bows,
Turned back in the day of battle.¹
10 ^k They kept not the covenant of God,—and refused to walk in his law ;
11 And ^l forgot his works,—and his wonders that he had showed them.
12 ^m Marvellous things did he² in the sight of their fathers,
In the land of Egypt, ⁿ in the field of Zoan.³
13 ^o He divided the sea, and caused them to pass through ;
And ^p he made the waters to stand as an heap.
14 ^q In the daytime also he led them with a cloud,
And all the night with a light of fire.
15 ^r He clave the rocks in the wilderness,
And gave them drink as out of the great depths.
16 He brought ^s streams also out of the rock,
And caused waters to run down like rivers.
17 And they sinned yet more against him
By ^t provoking the Most High in the wilderness.
18 And ^u they tempted God in their heart—by asking meat for their lust.
19 ^x Yea, they spake against God ;
They said, Can God furnish a table in the wilderness ?
20 ^y Behold, he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out,
And the streams overflowed ;
Can he give bread also ?⁴—can he provide flesh for his people ?
21 Therefore the Lord heard this, and ^z was wroth :
So a fire was kindled against Jacob,—and anger also came up against Israel ;
22 Because they ^a believed not in God,—and trusted not in his salvation :
23 Though he had commanded the clouds from above,
^b And opened the doors of heaven,
24 ^c And had rained down manna upon them to eat,
And had given them of the corn of heaven.
25 Man did eat angels' food :⁵—^d he sent them meat to the full.
26 ^e He caused an east wind to blow in the heaven :
And by his power he brought in the south wind.
27 ^f He rained flesh also upon them as dust,
And feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea :
28 And he let it fall in the midst of their camp,—round about their habitations.
29 ^g So they did eat, and were well filled :—for he gave them their own desire.
30 They were not estranged⁶ from their lust.
31 But ^h while their meat was yet in their mouths, the wrath of God came upon them,
And slew the fattest of them,—and smote down the chosen men of Israel.
32 For all this ⁱ they sinned still,—and ^k believed not for his wondrous works.
33 ^l Therefore their days did he consume in vanity,⁷—and their years in trouble.
34 ^m When he slew them, then they sought him :
And they returned and inquired early after God.
35 And they remembered that ⁿ God was their rock,
And the high God ^o their redeemer.

1 During the ascendancy of Ephraim, the Israelites had failed, through unbelief and fear, to subdue Canaan and destroy its inhabitants; and to this neglect might be traced the national calamities which followed.

2 Or, 'he had done.' This passage recounts the marvellous works which should have awakened gratitude.

3 Or, Tanis, now Sau; a very ancient city (Numb. xiii. 22) on the east of the Tanitic branch of the Nile. It was the capital of a district or nome, here called a 'field;' and the seat of some of the native dynasties of Egyptian kings.

4 The supplies which they had already received ought to have precluded all such doubts.

5 Literally, 'bread of the mighty ones did each eat;' perhaps meaning the best bread.

6 Rather, 'They were not [yet] estranged from their lust (they were still gratifying it), their food was yet in their mouths; [when] the wrath of God,' etc.

7 As the punishment of their unbelief. Their lives were worn out in the wilderness: their desire of seeing and enjoying the promised land was not gratified. See the application of this to the Christian in Heb. iii., iv.

- 37 For ^q their heart was not right with him,
Neither were they stedfast in his covenant.
- 38 ^r But he, being full of compassion, forgave their iniquity,—and destroyed them not :
Yea, many a time ^s turned he his anger away,—^t and did not stir up all his wrath.
- 39 For ^u he remembered ^x that they were but flesh ;
^y A wind that passeth away, and cometh not again.
- 40 How oft did they ^z provoke him in the wilderness,—and grieve him in the desert !
- 41 Yea, ^a they turned back and tempted God,—and ^b limited ¹ the Holy One of Israel.
- 42 They remembered not his hand,
Nor the day when he delivered them from the enemy.
- 43 How ^c he had wrought his signs in Egypt,—and his wonders in the field of Zoan :
- 44 ^d And had turned their rivers into blood ;
And their floods, that they could not drink.
- 45 ^e He sent divers sorts of flies among them, which devoured them ;
And ^f frogs, which destroyed them.
- 46 ^g He gave also their increase unto the caterpillar,—and their labour unto the locust.
- 47 ^h He destroyed their vines ² with hail,—and their sycamore trees with frost.
- 48 ⁱ He gave up their cattle also to the hail,—and their flocks to hot thunderbolts.³
- 49 He cast upon them the fierceness of his anger,
Wrath, and indignation, and trouble,—by sending evil angels ⁴ among them.
- 50 He made a way to his anger ; ⁵—^k he spared not their soul from death,
But gave their life over to the pestilence ;
- 51 ^l And smote all the firstborn in Egypt ;
^m The chief of their strength in ⁿ the tabernacles of Ham :
- 52 But ^o made his own people to go forth like sheep,
And guided them in the wilderness like a flock.
- 53 And he ^p led them on safely, so that they feared not :
But the sea ^q overwhelmed their enemies.
- 54 And he brought them to the border of his ^r sanctuary,
Even to this mountain, ^s which his right hand had purchased.
- 55 ^t He cast out the heathen also before them,
And ^u divided them an inheritance by line,
And made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tents.
- 56 ^x Yet they tempted and provoked the most high God,
And kept not his testimonies :
- 57 But ^y turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers :
They were turned aside ^z like a deceitful bow.⁶
- 58 ^a For they provoked him to anger with their ^b high places,⁷
And ^c moved him to jealousy ^d with their graven images.
- 59 When God heard this, he was wroth,—and greatly abhorred Israel :
- 60 ^e So that he forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh,—the tent which he placed among men ;
- 61 ^f And delivered his strength into captivity,—and ^g his glory⁸ into the enemy's hand.
- 62 ^h He gave his people over also unto the sword ;
And was wroth with his inheritance.
- 63 ⁱ The fire consumed their young men ;
And ^k their maidens were not given to marriage.⁹
- 64 ^l Their priests¹⁰ fell by the sword ;—and ^m their widows made no lamentation.
- 65 Then the LORD ⁿ awaked as one out of sleep,
And ^o like a mighty man that shouteth by reason of wine.
- 66 And ^p he smote his enemies in the hinder part : ¹¹
He put them to a perpetual reproach.

2 The destruction of the vines is not mentioned in the history (Exod. ix. 23—32): but that the vine was cultivated in Egypt at this time is proved by Gen. xl. 9; and sculptures and paintings representing grapes and the vintage still remain in its ancient monuments.

3 See Exod. ix. 23, 24.

4 Rather, 'a sending forth of angels of evils;' not evil spirits, but agents of physical evil, of suffering and destruction.

5 That is, he gave it free range and scope.

7 Referring to the idolatry into which the Israelites fell after the death of Joshua and his contemporaries.

9 Heb., 'and their maidens were not praised,' i. e. in nuptial songs. This was owing to the slaughter of the young men in war. Comp. Isa. iii. 25; iv. 1.

10 Alluding probably to the death of Hophni and Phinehas. The following clause may perhaps refer to the widow of Phinehas, whose sorrow for her own bereavement was absorbed in still greater grief for the loss of the ark.

11 Rather, 'He smote back his enemies;' i. e. he drove them back.

- 67 Moreover ^a he refused the tabernacle of Joseph,
And chose not the tribe of Ephraim :
68 ^a But chose the tribe of Judah.—the mount Zion ^a which he loved.
69 And he ^a built his sanctuary like ^a high palaces,¹
Like ^a the earth which he hath established for ever.
70 ^a He chose David also his servant,—^a and took him from the sheepfolds :
71 From following ^a the ewes great with young
He brought him ^b to feed Jacob his people,—and Israel his inheritance.
72 So he fed them according to the ^c integrity of his heart ;
And guided them by the skilfulness of his hands.

PSALM LXXIX.

A Psalm of [or, for] Asaph.²

- 1 O GOD, the heathen are come into ^d thine inheritance ;
^e Thy holy temple have they defiled ;³—^f they have laid Jerusalem on heaps.
2 ^g The dead bodies of thy servants have they given
To be meat unto the fowls of the heaven,
The flesh of thy saints—unto the beasts of the earth.
3 ^h Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem ;
ⁱ And there was none to bury them.
4 ^k We are become a reproach to our neighbours,
A scorn and derision to them that are round about us.
5 ^l How long, LORD ? ^m wilt thou be angry for ever ?
Shall thy ⁿ jealousy burn like fire ?
6 ^o Pour out thy wrath ^p upon the heathen that have ^q not known thee,
And upon the kingdoms that have ^r not called upon thy name.⁴
7 For they have devoured Jacob,—and laid waste his dwelling place.
8 ^s Oh remember not against us former iniquities :⁵
Let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us :—for we are ^t brought very low.
9 ^u Help us, O God of our salvation,—for the glory of thy name :
And deliver us, ^v and purge away our sins,—^w for thy name's sake.
10 ^x Wherefore should the heathen say, Where is their God ?
^y Let him⁶ be known among the heathen in our sight
^z By the revenging of the blood of thy servants which is shed.
11 Let ^a the sighing of the prisoner come before thee ;
According to the greatness of thy power
Preserve thou those that are appointed to die ;
12 And render unto our neighbours ^b sevenfold into their bosom
^c Their reproach, wherewith they have reproached thee, O LORD.
13 So ^d we thy people and sheep of thy pasture will give thee thanks for ever :
^e We will show forth thy praise to all generations.

1 Or, 'high places;' like the hills or mountains.
2 Psalm lxxix., like Psa. lxxiv., apparently belongs to the period of the Chaldean invasion; and contains a description of the desecration of the temple, the destruction of Jerusalem, and the sufferings of the people (vers. 1—4), a prayer for deliverance (5—12), and a promise of thanksgiving (13).

3 To a pious Israelite, the desecration of the sanctuary was the worst of evils; its destruction could add little to this.

4 This petition, which reappears with little variation in Jer. x. 25, seems to be designed humbly to represent that those who neither know nor worship Jehovah are fitter subjects of his exemplary vengeance than his own people.

5 Or, 'the iniquities of them that were before us.'

6 Rather, 'Let the avenging of the blood of thy servants which is shed be known,' etc.

7 See note on title to Psa. xlv.

8 The burden of Psa. lxxx. is found in the chorus.

vers. 3, 7, 19, entreating the restoration of Divine favour, which is Israel's salvation and prosperity. The first stanza (1—3) is an appeal to Israel's Shepherd, the symbol of whose presence headed the three tribes here mentioned in the march through the desert (Numb. x. 21—24). The second pathetically represents God's anger as the cause of the present sufferings of the people (4—7). The third (which is divided into two parts), under an elegant figure, contrasts their former prosperity under Jehovah's care with their present distress (8—13), and entreats his renewed protection (14—19). The language of vers. 1, 2 indicates the tribes descended from Joseph as being the chief sufferers at this time; but there is nothing to mark the date more distinctly.

9 The descendants of Joseph being specified here, his dying father's benediction is appropriately alluded to (see Gen. xlix. 24). The various names and attributes of God may thus be used to give force to the appeals which his people address to Him.

10 See Exod. xxv. 22, and note.

- 3 ^p Turn us again,¹ O God,—² and cause thy face to shine; and ^r we shall be saved.
- 4 O LORD God of hosts,
^s How long wilt thou be angry against the prayer of thy people?
- 5 'Thou feedest them with the bread of tears;
 And givest them tears to drink in great measure.
- 6 "Thou makest us a strife unto our neighbours:
 And our enemies laugh among themselves.
- 7 ^x Turn us again, O God of hosts,—and cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.
- 8 Thou hast brought² ^y a vine out of Egypt:
^z Thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it.
- 9 Thou ^a preparedst room before it,
 And didst cause it ^b to take deep root,—and it filled the land.
- 10 The hills were covered with the shadow of it,
 And the boughs thereof were like the goodly cedars.
- 11 She sent out her boughs³ unto the sea,—and her branches ^c unto the river.
- 12 Why hast thou then ^d broken down her hedges,
 So that all they which pass by the way do pluck her?
- 13 The board out of the wood doth waste it,—and the wild beast of the field doth devour it.
- 14 ^e Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts:
^f Look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine;
- 15 And ^g the vineyard which thy right hand hath planted,
 And the branch⁴ that thou madest strong ^h for thyself.
- 16 It is burned with fire, it is cut down:
ⁱ They perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.
- 17 ^k Let thy hand be upon ^l the man of thy right hand,
 Upon the son of man whom thou madest strong for thyself.
- 18 So will not we go back from thee:—^m quicken us, and we will call upon thy name
- 19 ⁿ Turn us again, O LORD God of hosts,
 Cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.

¹ Rather, 'restore us,' the blessing asked being either a return from exile, or a restoration to prosperity.

² Rather, 'Thou didst bring,' etc., 'thou didst cast out,' etc.

³ A figurative description of the prosperity of the chosen people during the reigns of David and Solomon.

⁴ Heb., 'son.' Some think that vers. 15 and 17 refer to the people of Israel, spoken of collectively in terms which allude to the name Ben-jamin (see ver. 2, and Gen. xxxv. 18). But they may be understood as pointing to the man and the family which God had selected to rule and deliver Israel, and in rejecting whom the people had fallen into many sins and sorrows. In this case there may be an ulterior reference to the Messiah, the Son of David.

⁵ Psalm lxxx. was apparently intended to be sung at one of the great sacred festivals, or perhaps at all of them. It contains an exhortation to praise God, who had instituted the festival (vers. 1—3); a reference to the Divine interpositions and instructions commemorated, and a complaint of Israel's ingratitude (4—12); and a glowing picture of the happy results which might be expected from obedience and fidelity (13—16). It was composed after the introduction of instrumental music: comp. ver. 2 with 2 Chron. xxx. 21.

⁶ Some render, 'in the month;' i. e. the passover month, which was constituted the first of the year: see Exod. xii. 2; xiii. 4. But others, following the rendering of the text, refer it to the feast of trumpets, and translate the next clause, 'in the full moon,' referring that to the feast of tabernacles. See Lev. xxiii. 23—25, 33—43.

⁷ Some regard this as the language of the people complaining of their bondage among foreigners. Comp. Deut. xxviii. 49; Ps. cxiv. 1. But it is perhaps best to attribute the clause to Jehovah, as meaning, 'I heard a voice which I approved not;' i. e. I heard the cry of my oppressed people. See Exod. ii. 23—25.

⁸ Or, 'baskets;' any vessels for holding and carrying materials. This may refer to baskets used by the Hebrews in carrying clay and bricks in Egypt. Such baskets are depicted in the sepulchres at Thebes.

⁹ These words perhaps refer to the cloud in which God interposed, during the passage of the Red Sea, between the Israelites and the Egyptians (see Exod. xiv. 19—24; Ps. lxxvii. 18); or to that which overhung Sinai at the giving of the law (see Exod. xx. 18; Heb. xii. 18, 19).

- 8 ^b Hear, O my people, and I will testify unto thee :
O Israel, if thou wilt hearken unto me ;
9 ^c There shall no ^d strange god be in thee ;
Neither shalt thou worship any strange god.
10 ^e I am the LORD thy God,—which brought thee out of the land of Egypt :
^f Open thy mouth wide,¹ and I will fill it.
11 ^g But my people would not hearken to my voice :
And Israel would ^h none of me.
12 ⁱ So I gave them up unto their own hearts' lust :
And ^k they walked in their own counsels.
13 ^l Oh that my people had hearkened² unto me,
And Israel had walked in my ways !
14 I should soon have subdued their enemies,
And ^m turned my hand against their adversaries.
15 ⁿ The haters of the LORD should have ^o submitted themselves unto him :
But ^p their time³ should have endured for ever.
16 He should ^q have fed them also with the finest of the wheat :
And with honey ^r out of the rock should I have satisfied thee.

PSALM LXXXII.

A Psalm of [or, for] Asaph.⁴

- 1 GOD ^s standeth in the congregation of the mighty ;⁵
He judgeth among ^t the gods.
2 How long will ye ^u judge unjustly,—and ^v accept the persons of the wicked ? Selah.
3 Defend the poor and fatherless :—^w do justice to the afflicted and needy.
4 ^z Deliver the poor and needy :—rid them out of the hand of the wicked.
5 They ^a know not, neither will they understand ;—^b they walk on in darkness :
^c All the foundations of the earth are out of course.⁶
6 ^d I have said, Ye are gods ;⁷—and all of you are children of the Most High.
7 But ^e ye shall die like men,—and fall like one of the princes.⁸
8 ^f Arise, O God, judge the earth :—^g for thou shalt inherit all nations.

PSALM LXXXIII.

A Song or Psalm of [or, for] Asaph.⁹

- 1 KEEP ^h not thou silence, O God :—hold not thy peace, and ⁱ be not still, O God.
2 For, lo, ^k thine enemies make a tumult :
And they that ^l hate thee have lifted up the head.
3 They have taken crafty counsel against thy people,
And consulted ^m against thy hidden ones.¹⁰
4 They have said, Come, and ⁿ let us cut them off from being a nation ;
That the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance.
5 For ^o they have consulted together with one consent :¹¹
They are confederate against thee :

1 In expectation of supply : a figurative expression.
2 Or, 'would hearken,' etc., 'would walk.' The words which follow declare the blessings which Jehovah not only would have granted, but was still prepared to grant.
3 Their time of existence and prosperity.
4 In Psalm lxxxii. unjust rulers are reminded of God's supremacy (ver. 1), rebuked for unrighteousness (2), commanded to act uprightly (3, 4), accused of obstinacy in crime (5), and threatened with punishment (6, 7), for the infliction of which the psalmist prays (8). On what occasion the psalm was composed is not known ; nor is it important, as it is of general application.
5 Literally, 'in the congregation of God.' God is here represented as the universal Sovereign, who has assembled his vicegerents and inferior governors to inquire into their administration. Hence the name appropriated to Him is applied sometimes to them, as they were supposed to represent Him. See Exod. xxi. 6 ; xxii. 8, 9, 28 ; also Deut. i. 17 ; xix. 17 ; 2 Chron. xix. 6 ; Rom. xiii. 4.
6 Heb., 'are moved.' Just judges and rulers are the firmest pillars of the social state ; but, when law and justice are perverted, the state itself is shaken ; and the only resource of the oppressed is to betake themselves to Him who can and will, in due season, avenge both their cause and his own. See Ps. xi. 3, and note.

7 Our Saviour refers to this passage as one in which the term 'gods' is applied to judges, even though they might be unjust, because they were appointed to act for God on earth (John x. 34).
8 Like any heathen prince, who could not claim the same relation to Jehovah, the King of Israel.
9 Psalm lxxxiii. is supposed to have originated in the events recorded in 2 Chron. xx. As it refers to the same period as Ps. xlvii., xlviii., see notes on their titles. This psalm was apparently written before the Hebrews had received the assurance of victory. It describes first the urgent reason for appealing to God (vers. 1—8), and then the punishment which the psalmist desires to see inflicted on the confederated foes (9—18). As Jahaziel, one of the family of Asaph, is mentioned as being inspired on this occasion, some have attributed the psalm to him. See 2 Chron. xx. 14.
10 'Those whom thou keepest under thy merciful protection.' See Ps. xxvii. 5 ; xxxi. 20.
11 Rather, 'heartily,' 'earnestly.'
12 Respecting the Hagarenes and the occasions of their enmity, see 1 Chron. v. 10, 19—22.

- 7 ' Gebal,¹ and Ammon, and Amalek;—the Philistines with the inhabitants of Tyre;
 8 Assur² also is joined with them:—they have holpen the children of Lot.³ Selah.
- 9 Do unto them as unto the ^s Midianites;
 As to ' Sisera, as to Jabin, at the brook of " Kison:
 10 Which perished at En-dor:⁴—^x they became as dung for the earth.⁵
 11 Make their nobles like ^y Oreb, and like Zeeb:
 Yea, all their princes as ^z Zebah, and as Zalmunna:
 12 ^a Who said, Let us take to ourselves the houses of God⁶ in possession.
 13 ^b O my God, make them like a wheel;⁷—^c as the stubble before the wind.
 14 ^d As the fire burneth a wood,—and as the flame ^e setteth the mountains on fire;
 15 So persecute them ^f with thy tempest,—and make them afraid with thy storm.
 16 ^g Fill their faces with shame;—that they may seek thy name,⁸ O LORD.
 17 Let them be confounded and troubled for ever;
 Yea, let them be put to shame, and perish:
 18 ^h That men may know that thou, whose ' name alone is JEHOVAH,
 Art ^k the Most High over all the earth.

PSALM LXXXIV.

To the chief Musician ' upon Gittith,⁹ A Psalm for [or, of] the sons of Korah.¹⁰

- 1 HOW ^m amiable are thy tabernacles, ⁿ O LORD of hosts!
 2 ^o My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD:
^p My heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.
 3 Yea, the sparrow hath found an house,
 And the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young,
*Even*¹¹ thine altars, O LORD of hosts,—my King, and my God.
 4 ^q Blessed are they that dwell in thy house:
^r They will be still praising thee. Selah.
 5 Blessed is the man ^s whose strength is in thee;
 In whose heart are the ways of them.¹²
 6 ^t Who passing through the valley " of Baca make it a well;¹³
^x The rain also filleth the pools.
 7 They go ^y from strength to strength,
Every one of them in Zion ^z appeareth before God.
 8 O LORD God of hosts, hear my prayer:—give ear, O God of Jacob. Selah.
 9 Behold, ^a O God our shield,—and look upon the face of ^b thine anointed.¹⁴
 10 For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand.
 I had rather be a doorkeeper¹⁵ in the house of my God,
 Than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.
 11 For the LORD God is ^c a sun and ^d shield:¹⁶—the LORD will give grace and glory:
^e No good thing will he withhold—from them that ^f walk uprightly.

⁴ The two decisive battles in which Barak destroyed the army of Sisera, and Gideon that of the Midianites, were both fought in this neighbourhood. See note on 1 Sam. xxviii. 4.

⁵ Battle-fields are renowned for fertility.

⁶ Perhaps 'pasture-lands of God;' the most fruitful parts of Palestine.

⁷ Rather, 'like a whirl;' i. e. like the whirling chaff, which the wind disperses.

⁸ If this refers to the enemy, it must mean, 'Let them be forced to acknowledge the superiority of thy power;' for their destruction is prayed for in the next verse. But it may refer to others, being rendered thus: 'that men may seek,' as in ver. 18. God's signal punishments of his enemies are intended to warn other sinners to seek him while he may be found.

⁹ See note on title of Ps. viii.

¹³ Rather, 'Passing through a valley of weeping they make it a fountain; also with blessings the rain covereth it.' The delight which God's people take in his house makes the barren ravines through which they pass seem as lovely as if they were adorned and fertilized by fountains, and renders the hot and wearisome journey as pleasant as if it were alleviated by refreshing showers.

¹⁴ The Divine appointment of David and his family to the throne gave to the loyalty of the pious Hebrew a peculiar religious character, and connected it with his hopes of the Messiah.

¹⁵ That is, 'I would rather fill the lowest office in God's house than live elsewhere in the greatest honour. This language agrees well with the supposition that the writer was a Levite.

¹⁶ The 'sun' represents the source of life and joy; the 'shield,' of security.

PSALM LXXXV.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm ^h for [or, of] the sons of Korah.¹

- 1 LORD, ⁱ thou hast been favourable unto thy land:
Thou hast ^h brought back the captivity of Jacob.
- 2 ⁱ Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people,
Thou hast covered all their sin. Selah.
- 3 Thou hast taken away all thy wrath:
Thou hast turned thyself from the fierceness of thine anger.
- 4 ^m Turn us, O God of our salvation,—and cause thine anger toward us to cease.
- 5 ⁿ Wilt thou be angry with us for ever?
Wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations?
- 6 Wilt thou not ^o revive us again:—that thy people may rejoice in thee?
- 7 Show us thy mercy, O LORD,—and grant us thy salvation.
- 8 ^p I² will hear what God the LORD will speak:
For ^q he will speak peace unto his people, and to his saints:
But let them not ^r turn again to folly.
- 9 Surely ^s his salvation is nigh them that fear him;
^t That glory may dwell³ in our land.
- 10 ^u Mercy and truth are met together;
^x Righteousness and peace have kissed each other.
- 11 ^y Truth shall spring out of the earth;
And righteousness shall look down from heaven.
- 12 ^z Yea, the LORD shall give that which is good;
And ^a our land shall yield her increase.
- 13 ^b Righteousness shall go before him;—and shall set us in the way of his steps.⁴

PSALM LXXXVI.

- 1 BOW down thine ear, O LORD, hear me:—for I am ^c poor and needy.
- 2 Preserve my soul; for I am holy:⁶
O thou my God, ^d save thy servant ^e that trusteth in thee.
- 3 ^f Be merciful unto me, O LORD:—^g for I cry unto thee daily.
- 4 ^h Rejoice the soul of thy servant:—ⁱ for unto thee, O LORD, do I lift up my soul.
- 5 ^k For thou, LORD, art good, and ^l ready to forgive;
And ^m plenteous in mercy ⁿ unto all them that call upon thee.
- 6 Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer;—and attend to the voice of my supplications.
- 7 ^o In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee:—for thou wilt answer me.
- 8 ^p Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O LORD;
^q Neither are there any works like unto thy works.
- 9 ^r All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O LORD;
And ^s shall glorify thy name.
- 10 For thou art great, and ^t doest wondrous things:—^u thou art God alone.
- 11 ^x Teach me thy way, O LORD;—^y I will walk in thy truth:
Unite⁷ my heart to fear thy name.
- 12 I will praise thee, O LORD my God, with all my heart:
And I will glorify thy name for evermore.

And thou hast ^z delivered my soul from the lowest hell [or, grave.]
- 14 O God, ^a the proud are risen against me,

¹ The psalmist, acknowledging and encouraged by former mercies (vers. 1—3), prays for present salvation (4—7), which he joyfully anticipates (8—13). Though the date of this psalm cannot be determined, it best suits the time of the return of the Jews from Babylon. The beautiful sentiments at the close (vers. 10—13) naturally suggest the great work of the Redeemer and its blessed effects; for it is only by them that the Divine attributes of justice and mercy are manifested, as harmoniously working for the salvation of man from guilt and depravity.

² The inspired psalmist seems here to receive and report the answer to the people's prayers.

³ That is, all the happiness and prosperity which Israel expected. This manifestly includes the glory of the Messiah as described in Hag. ii. 7—9. It is spoken of in the following verses as the perfected harmony between heaven and earth.

⁴ Or, 'And shall set its steps for a way;' i. e. point out the way in which we should walk.

⁵ Psalm lxxxvi. contains earnest supplications for deliverance from enemies (vers. 1—4, 14—17), with grateful acknowledgements of the greatness and goodness of God (5—13). Many expressions in this psalm appear to have been suggested by other psalms of David (see refs.); but it contains no further indications of its date or authorship.

⁶ Or, 'pious.' See note on Ps. iv. 3.

⁷ Let there be no distraction of thought, no division of feeling. Comp. ver. 12, and Ps. xii. 2; James i. 8.

⁸ Deliverances from God are rightly received when they prompt us to serve him with an undivided heart.

- 15 ^b But thou, O LORD, art a God full of compassion, and gracious, Long-suffering, and plenteous in mercy and truth.
16 Oh ^c turn unto me, and have mercy upon me;
^d Give thy strength unto thy servant,—and save ^e the son of thine handmaid.
17 Show me a token for good;—^f that they which hate me may see it,¹ and be ashamed:
Because thou, LORD, ^g hast holpen me, and comforted me.

¹ The psalmist desires that all the world may see that God's servant had not trusted him in vain.

² In Psalm lxxxvii., Jehovah appears as protecting and honouring Zion (vers. 1—3), bringing all nations to desire and to share her privileges (4—6), and filling her inhabitants with blessedness (7). Its precise date is unknown; but it cannot have been earlier than the time when the Babylonian empire (see ver. 4) began to rise into notice. It was probably occasioned by the events which called forth Ps. lxxvi., on the title of which see note. It has also probably a prophetic reference to the security and glories of the Christian church, which is destined to receive into its bosom converts from every nation.

³ That is, The city which he [Jehovah] has founded. See Isa. xiv. 32. The abruptness of the commencement adds greatly to the effect and impression of the psalm.

⁴ Jerusalem was built on and surrounded by mountains. See Ps. cxxv. 2.

⁵ 'Rahab' means Egypt. Vers. 4—6 may be better understood by a rather free translation: 'I [Jehovah] will reckon [the people of] Egypt and Babylon among them that know me. Behold [the men of] Philistia, Tyre, and Cush; one is a free-born citizen there (yea! as to Zion this is declared), and the second and third is a free-born citizen in her: yea, the Highest himself will establish her. Jehovah will reckon, when he numbereth [his] people, that each [of these] is a citizen there.' The whole may be taken as Jehovah's words (see ver. 3), except the short parenthesis by which the prophet points out Zion as the city of which all this is said.

Rather, 'And singers as well as players on instruments; [yea] all my springs, are in thee.' In thee is every conceivable enjoyment.

⁷ 'Leannoth' means to sing. 'Upon Mahalath Leannoth' is accordingly a direction to chant to the instrument or tune called Mahalath; see note on title of Ps. liii. It is a probable supposition that Psalms lxxxviii. and lxxxix. form parts of one whole. They were written at a period of great humiliation and suffering, both personal (lxxxviii., lxxxix. 46—52) and national (lxxxix. 38—45); in which the pious turned for consolation to the sure and faithful covenant made with David and his family (lxxxix. 1—4): dwelling first upon the perfections and works of Jehovah (5—14), as proving the blessedness of those to whom he has promised (15—18) the great blessings comprised in this unalterable engagement (19—37). If these psalms are correctly ascribed in the titles to Heman and Ethan, they must be referred to the time of David, and must allude to some calamities, in the later part of his reign, affecting the throne as well as individuals. Comp. 1 Chron. vi. 33, 44; xv. 17. But these titles appear to confound persons of different ages and tribes (see 1 Chron. ii. 6; 1 Kings iv. 31); and the psalms themselves better suit a later period, such as the time of Josiah's defeat and death. Comp. Ps. lxxxix. 45; 2 Chron. xxxv. 23—25. As their great subject is the degradation and affliction of the chosen people and royal race, alleviated however by a cheerful confidence in the covenant and promises of Jehovah, they present many striking and probably intentional analogies to the Son of David, 'who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross,' etc.

⁸ As if the writer should say, 'What freedom I have is only like that of the dead.' See Job iii. 19.

- 9 ^d Mine eye mourneth by reason of affliction:
 LORD, ^e I have called daily upon thee,—^f I have stretched out my hands unto thee.
- 10 ^g Wilt thou show wonders to the dead?
^h Shall the dead arise and praise thee? Selah.
- 11 Shall thy lovingkindness be declared in the grave?
 Or thy faithfulness in destruction?
- 12 ⁱ Shall thy wonders be known in the dark?
^k And thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness? ^l
- 13 But unto thee have I cried, O LORD;
 And ^l in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee.
- 14 LORD, ^m why castest thou off my soul?—why ⁿ hidest thou thy face from me?
- 15 I am afflicted and ready to die from my youth up:
 While ^o I suffer thy terrors I am distracted.
- 16 Thy fierce wrath goeth over me;—thy terrors have cut me off.
- 17 They came round about me daily like water;
 They ^p compassed me about together.
- 18 ^q Lover and friend hast thou put far from me,
 And mine acquaintance into darkness.

PSALM LXXXIX.

Maschil of ^r Ethan the Ezrahite² [or, A Psalm for Ethan the Ezrahite, to give instruction].

- 1 ^s I WILL sing of the mercies³ of the LORD for ever:
 'With my mouth will I make known ^t thy faithfulness to all generations.
- 2 For I have said, ^u Mercy shall be built up for ever:
^v Thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens.
- 3 ^z I have made a covenant with ^a my chosen,—I have ^b sworn unto David my servant,
- 4 ^c Thy seed will I establish for ever,
 And build up thy throne ^d to all generations. Selah.
- 5 And ^e the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O LORD:
 Thy faithfulness also⁴ in the congregation ^f of the saints.
- 6 For ^g who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD?
 Who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the LORD?
- 7 ^h God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints,
 And to be had in reverence of all them that are about him.
- 8 O LORD God of hosts, ⁱ who is a strong LORD ^j like unto thee?
 Or to thy faithfulness round about thee?⁵
- 9 'Thou rulest the raging of the sea:
 When the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them.
- 10 ^m Thou hast broken Bahab⁶ in pieces, as one that is slain;
 Thou hast scattered thine enemies with thy strong arm.
- 11 ⁿ The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine:
 As for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them.
- 12 ^o The north and the south thou hast created them:
^p Tabor and ^q Hermon shall rejoice in thy name.
- 13 Thou hast a mighty arm:—strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand.
- 14 ^r Justice and judgment are the habitation⁷ of thy throne:
^s Mercy and truth shall go before thy face.
- 15 Blessed is the people that know the 'joyful sound':⁸
 They shall walk, O LORD, in the 'light of thy countenance.
- 16 ^t In thy name shall they rejoice all the day:
 And ^u in thy righteousness shall they be exalted.
- 17 For thou art the glory of their strength:⁹
^z And in thy favour our horn shall be exalted.
- 18 For ^a the LORD¹⁰ is our defence;—and the Holy One of Israel is our king.

1 See note on Ps. vi. 5.
 2 See note on title of preceding psalm.
 3 This cheerful passage, compared with the complaints in ver. 38, etc., shows us to what we must have recourse, in order to 'rejoice in tribulation.'
 4 That is, 'Thy faithfulness is praised or acknowledged.' The 'saints' or holy ones mentioned here and in ver. 7 are probably holy angels, 'the sons of the mighty' (ver. 6).
 5 Or, 'And thy faithfulness is round about thee.'
 This Divine attribute is so often mentioned, because it is on the promise given to David (see 2 Sam. vii.) that the psalmist founds all his hopes of God's returning favour.

 6 See note on Ps. lxxxvii. 4. This refers to the overthrow of the Egyptian power in the Red Sea.
 7 Either, 'settled place,' from which it cannot be moved; or, 'foundation,' on which it rests.
 8 Literally, 'the trumpet-sound;' the joyous sound by which the people were summoned to the great religious festivals. See Lev. xxiii. 24.
 9 At once their ornament and their protection.
 10 Or, 'For to Jehovah [belongs] our defence; and to the Holy One of Israel, our king. Our protectors are themselves protected by Jehovah.'

- 19 Then ^b thou spakest in vision ¹ to thy holy one, ²
And saidst, I have laid help upon one that is mighty;
I have exalted one ^c chosen out of the people.
- 20 ^d I have found David my servant;—with my holy oil have I anointed him:
- 21 ^e With whom my hand shall be established:
^f Mine arm also shall strengthen him.
- 22 ^g The enemy shall not exact ³ upon him;—nor the son of wickedness afflict him.
- 23 ^h And I will beat down his foes before his face,—and plague them that hate him.
- 24 But ⁱ my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him:
And ^k in my name shall his horn be exalted.
- 25 ^l I will set his hand also in the sea, ⁴—and his right hand in the rivers.
- 26 He shall cry unto me, Thou art ^m my father,
My God, and ⁿ the rock of my salvation.
- 27 Also I will make him ^o my firstborn,—^p higher than the kings of the earth.
- 28 ^q My mercy will I keep for him for evermore,
And ^r my covenant shall stand fast with him.
- 29 ^s His seed also will I make to endure for ever, ^t And his throne ^u as the days of heaven.
- 30 ^v If his children ^y forsake my law,—and walk not in my judgments;
31 If they break my statutes,—and keep not my commandments;
32 Then ^z will I visit their transgression with the rod,
And their iniquity with stripes.
- 33 ^a Nevertheless my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, Nor suffer my faithfulness to fail.
- 34 ^b My covenant will I not break,—^c nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.
- 35 ^d Once have I sworn ^e by my holiness—that I will not lie unto David.
- 36 ^f His seed shall endure for ever,—and his throne ^g as the sun before me.
- 37 It shall be established for ever ^h as the moon,
And as ⁱ a faithful witness in heaven. ⁵ Selah.
- 38 But thou hast ^k cast off and ^l abhorred,
Thou hast been wroth with thine anointed.
- 39 Thou hast made void the covenant of thy servant:
^m Thou hast profaned his crown by casting it to the ground.
- 40 ⁿ Thou hast broken down all his hedges;
Thou hast ^o brought his strong holds to ruin.
- 41 All that pass by the way spoil him:—he is ^p a reproach to his neighbours.
- 42 Thou hast ^q set up the right hand of his adversaries;
Thou hast made all his enemies to rejoice.
- 43 Thou hast also turned the edge of his sword,
And ^r hast not made him to stand in the battle.
- 44 Thou hast made his glory to cease,—and ^s cast his throne down to the ground.
- 45 The days of his youth hast thou shortened:
Thou hast covered him with shame. Selah.
- 46 ^t How long, LORD? wilt thou hide thyself for ever?
^u Shall thy wrath burn like fire?
- 47 ^v Remember how short my time is:—^y wherefore hast thou made all men in vain? ⁶
- 48 ^z What man is he that liveth, and shall not ^a see death?
Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave? Selah.
- 49 LORD, ^b where are thy former lovingkindnesses,
Which thou ^c swarest unto David ^d in thy truth?
- 50 ^e Remember, LORD, the reproach of thy servants;
^f How I do bear in my bosom the reproach of all the mighty people;
- 51 ^g Wherewith thine enemies have reproached, O LORD;
Wherewith they have reproached ^h the footsteps ⁷ of ⁱ thine anointed.

¹ So the communication made to David through Nathan is called (1 Chron. xvii. 15).

² All the versions, and many Hebrew manuscripts, read 'thy holy ones;' the prophets.

³ Literally, 'harass;' as a creditor his debtor. The promise immediately following is taken from the language of 1 Chron. xvii. 9.

⁴ Alluding probably to the extent of David's possessions, reaching from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates.

⁵ These words perhaps allude to the rainbow. See Gen. ix. 12—17.

⁶ This must be understood hypothetically only: 'Why, by filling our short life with suffering, dost thou give colour to the imputation of having made us for no good?'

⁷ Following him everywhere with their reproaches.

⁸ This doxology probably marks the conclusion of the third book of the Psalms.

PSALM XC. 1—XCI. 2.

PSALM XC.

A Prayer ¹ of Moses [or, A Prayer, being a Psalm of Moses] the man of God.¹

- 1 LORD, ^m thou hast been our dwelling place² in all generations.
- 2 ⁿ Before the mountains were brought forth,
Or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world,
Even ^o from everlasting to everlasting, ^p thou art God.
- 3 ^q Thou turnest man to destruction;—and sayest, ^r Return, ye children of men.
- 4 ^s For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past,
And as a watch³ in the night.
- 5 ^t Thou carriest them away as with a flood;—^u they are as a sleep.⁴
In the morning ^x they are like grass which groweth up;
- 6 ^y In the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up;
In the evening it is cut down, and withereth.
- 7 ^z For we are consumed by thine anger,—and by thy wrath are we troubled.⁵
- 8 ^a Thou hast set our iniquities before thee,
Our ^b secret sins in the light of thy countenance.⁶
- 9 For all our days are passed away in thy wrath:
We spend our years as a tale⁷ that is told.
- 10 The days of our years are threescore years and ten;
And if by reason of strength they be fourscore years,
^c Yet is their strength labour and sorrow;—for ^d it is soon cut off,⁸ and we fly away.
- 11 Who knoweth the power of thine anger?
Even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath.⁹
- 12 ^e So teach us to number our days,—^f that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.¹⁰
- 13 ^g Return, O LORD, ^h how long?¹¹—and let it ⁱ repent¹² thee concerning thy servants.
- 14 Oh ^k satisfy us early with thy mercy;
^l That we may rejoice and be glad all our days.
- 15 ^m Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us,
And the years wherein we have seen evil.
- 16 Let ⁿ thy work¹³ appear unto thy servants,—and thy glory unto their children.
- 17 ^o And let the beauty¹⁴ of the LORD our God be upon us:
And ^p establish thou the work¹⁵ of our hands upon us;
Yea, the work of our hands establish thou it.

PSALM XCI. 16

- 1 HE ^q that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High Shall abide ^r under the shadow of the Almighty.
- 2 ^s I will say of the LORD, He is my refuge and my fortress:
My God; ^t in him will I trust.

1 In Psalm xc. the eternity of God (vers. 1, 2) is contrasted with the shortness of man's life (3—6); which is attributed, with all its attendant sufferings, to Divine displeasure (7—11). The psalmist and people would lay this to heart (12), so as to seek the mercy of God for themselves, and larger blessings for their children (13—17). Though the subject of the authorship of this psalm is not without difficulties, the tone and spirit of the whole, as well as the explicit connection of the shortening of life with the iniquities of the people, seem to support the title. If viewed as a meditation of Moses near the end of the forty years' wanderings in the desert, it will be found to have in many parts a peculiar and interesting significance.

2 The eternal, unchangeable God is here represented as a dwelling-place, to which his people can retire from all the changes of this transitory state, and be at home with Him.

3 See note on Ps. lxi. 6.

4 As short as the hours spent in sound slumber appear to be on awaking.

5 Rather, 'affrighted.'

6 God passes judgment on sin, not according to our knowledge and feelings respecting it, but as it appears to Him, and therefore as it really is.

7 Rather, 'as a thought;' as quickly as a thought passes through the mind.

8 Rather, 'he carries us quickly off.' The word is used in Numb. xi. 31, of the quails brought by the wind.

9 Or, 'And, according to thy fear, thy wrath;' i. e.

Who knows and considers thy wrath, so as to fear thee aright?

10 Rather, 'and [then] we will bring a heart of wisdom;' i. e. acquire wisdom of heart. Teach us, in observing our mortality, to regard its cause, our sin, that we may turn heartily from it.

11 That is, 'How long wilt thou be wroth with us?'

12 See note on Gen. vi. 6.

13 That is, thy merciful doings. Moses prays that even upon the elder generation some tokens of Divine goodness may be bestowed, as an assurance of the glory reserved for their children.

14 See note on Ps. xxvii. 4.

15 That is, 'all we undertake or do.' The prayer of the applicants is, that whatever they undertake may be brought to a favourable issue; perhaps with a special regard to their journey to Canaan, and any attempts they might make to conquer their foes.

16 In Psalm xci., the author, having announced in general terms the security of those whose refuge is God (ver. 1), and professed his own confidence in Jehovah (2), encourages others to similar reliance by many cheering assurances (3—13), which are ratified by the express words of God (14—16). The occasion on which this beautiful psalm was composed is unknown; nor is it important to ascertain it. It is even doubtful whether it was written during a pestilence, or whether the peculiar uncertainty of life felt during the prevalence of plague is merely used to illustrate the entire and simple confidence in God which his attributes and promises alike warrant.

- 3 Surely ^u he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler,¹ ^x And from the noisome pestilence.
 4 ^y He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust:
 His truth shall be thy shield and buckler.
 5 ^z Thou shalt not be afraid for ^a the terror by night;
Nor for the arrow that flieth by day;
 6 Nor for ^b the pestilence that walketh in darkness;
Nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday.
 7 A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand;
But it shall not come nigh thee.
 8 Only ^c with thine eyes shalt thou behold—and see ^d the reward of the wicked.
 9 Because thou hast made the LORD which is ^e my refuge,
Even the Most High, ^f thy habitation;
 10 ^g There shall no evil befall thee,—^h neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling.
 11 ⁱ For he shall give his angels charge over thee,—to keep thee ^k in all thy ways.²
 12 They shall bear thee up in their hands,—^l lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.
 13 ^m Thou shalt tread upon the lion ⁿ and adder:³
The young lion and ^o the dragon shalt thou trample under feet.
 14 Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him:
^p I will set him on high, because he hath ^q known my name.
 15 ^r He shall call upon me, and I will answer him:
^s I will be with him in trouble;—^t I will deliver him, and ^u honour him.
 16 ^x With long life will I satisfy him,—and ^y show him my salvation.

PSALM XCII.

A Psalm or Song for the sabbath day.⁴

- 1 IT is a ^z good thing to give thanks unto the LORD,
And to sing praises unto thy name, O Most High:
 2 To ^a show forth thy lovingkindness in the morning,
 And thy faithfulness every night,
 3 ^b Upon an instrument of ten strings, and upon the psaltery;
 Upon the harp with a solemn sound.
 4 For thou, LORD, ^c hast made me glad through thy work:
 I will triumph in the works of thy hands.
 5 ^d O LORD, how great are thy works!—and ^e thy thoughts are very deep.
 6 ^f A brutish man knoweth not;—neither doth ^g a fool understand this.
 7 When ^h the wicked spring as the grass,
 And when all the workers of iniquity do flourish;
ⁱ It is that they shall be destroyed for ever:
 8 ^k But thou, LORD, art most high for evermore.
 9 For, lo, ^l thine enemies, O LORD,—for, lo, thine enemies shall perish;
 All the workers of iniquity shall ^m be scattered.
 10 But ⁿ my horn shalt thou exalt like the horn of an ^o unicorn:
 I shall be ^p anointed with fresh oil.⁵
 11 ^q Mine eye also shall see my desire on mine enemies,
 And mine ears shall hear my desire of the wicked that rise up against me.
 12 ^r The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree:
 He shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.⁶

¹ A figure for insidious and complicated dangers. The variety of terms employed suggests dangers of every description, both seen and unseen; perils arising both from human enmity and craft, and also from the noxious agencies of nature.

² That is, the ways along which God's providence leads the believer. To apply such a promise to acts of rashness, vanity, or self-gratification, would be, as our Saviour has taught us in his reply to Satan, to 'tempt the Lord our God.' See Matt. iv. 6, 7.

³ Striking figures for the two kinds of danger from which protection is needed; namely, open violence and secret treachery.

⁴ Psalm xcii. declares that incessant praise is due to Jehovah for his wonderful works (vers. 1—5), which the wicked do not appreciate, and must therefore perish as his enemies (6—9); whilst the psalmist and all the righteous shall have honour, joy, and permanent prosperity in God's service (10—15). The tone of cheerful gratitude which pervades the psalm, and its allusions to the works and the worship of God, confirm the suggestion of the title, that it was intended for sabbath use. It must have been written after the introduction of instrumental music into the Hebrew service; but when or by whom is unknown.

⁵ See notes on Numb. xxiii. 22; 1 Sam. ii. 1; Ps. xxiii. 5. These figures represent supremacy over enemies, and consequent peace and joy.

⁶ The palm and cedar are among the noblest specimens of vegetable nature in the East. Both trees are long-lived, and flourish during all seasons: the palm being remarkable for its productiveness, the cedar for its size and stateliness. Taken together they well represent the moral excellency, usefulness, and enduring happiness of the pious, in contrast with the short-lived prosperity of the wicked (ver. 7).

- 13 ^aThose¹ that be planted in the house of the LORD
Shall flourish ^cin the courts of our God.
14 ^aThey shall still bring forth fruit ^ain old age;—they shall be fat and flourishing;
15 ^aTo show that the LORD is upright:²
^aHe is my rock, and ^athere is no unrighteousness in him.

PSALM XCIII.³

- 1 THE ^bLORD reigneth, ^che is clothed with majesty;
The LORD is clothed with strength, ^dwherewith he hath girded himself:
^eThe world also is established, that it cannot be moved.
2 ^fThy throne is established of old:—^gthou art from everlasting.
3 ^hThe floods⁴ have lifted up, O LORD,—the floods have lifted up their voice;
The floods lift up their waves.
4 ⁱThe LORD on high is mightier than the noise of many waters,
Yea, than the mighty waves of the sea.
5 ^kThy testimonies⁵ are very sure:
^lHoliness becometh thine house, O LORD, for ever.

PSALM XCIV.⁶

- 1 O LORD God, ^mto whom vengeance belongeth;
O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, show thyself.
2 ⁿLift up thyself, thou ^ojudge of the earth:—^prender a reward to the proud.
3 LORD, ^qhow long shall the wicked,—how long shall the wicked triumph?
4 How long shall they ^rutter and speak hard things?
And all the workers of iniquity ^sboast themselves?
5 They break in pieces⁷ thy people, O LORD, —and afflict thine heritage.
6 They slay the widow and the stranger,—and murder the fatherless.
7 ^tYet they say, The LORD shall not see,—neither shall the God of Jacob regard it.
8 ^uUnderstand, ye brutish among the people:
And ^vye fools, when will ye be wise?
9 ^wHe that planted the ear, shall he not hear?⁸
He that formed the eye, shall he not ^xsee?
10 He that ^ychastiseth the heathen,⁹ ^bshall not he correct?
He that ^cteacheth man knowledge, shall not he know?
11 ^dThe LORD knoweth the thoughts of man,—that they are vanity.¹⁰
12 ^eBlessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O LORD,
And teachest him out of thy law;
13 ^fThat thou mayest give him rest ^gfrom the days of adversity, ^hUntil the pit be digged for the wicked.
14 ⁱFor the LORD will not cast off his people,—neither will he forsake his inheritance.
15 But ^jjudgment shall return unto righteousness:¹¹
And all the upright in heart shall follow it.

1 Rather, 'Planted in the house of the Lord, they shall flourish,' etc.: i. e. the righteous, under Divine culture in the church of God, shall grow in grace, like healthy trees planted in a congenial soil. See Ps. i. 3.

2 Whilst deriving from Divine ordinances great personal benefit, the saints shall honour God by their growing, lasting, useful piety; encouraging others to trust his faithfulness. The expressions of this verse refer to Deut. xxxii. 4.

3 Psalm xciii. celebrates the royal majesty, the invincible and everlasting power, and the truth and holiness of Jehovah. It was probably composed for the liturgical service of the Hebrews, perhaps when their nation was threatened by many enemies (vers. 3, 4). Like other passages which represent Jehovah as King of Israel, it may well be applied to the Messiah.

4 This is no doubt a figurative expression; the floods representing powerful enemies, who attack the nation or disturb its peace.

5 The law and promises of God (Psa. xix. 7).

6 In Psalm xciv. a sufferer under severe oppression makes his appeal to Jehovah against the wicked (vers. 1, 2), describing their crimes (3—7), and warning them of their folly (8—11). He rejoices to know that his sufferings are chastenings, and shall end in good (12—15); that, if other helpers fail, God will not (16—19); and that the justice of the Divine government must make Jehovah the foe of the tyrant (20—23). It appears that the immediate occasion of the psalm was the cruelty of a king (20), who oppressed all the people (5, 6); but whether this were a native monarch like Manasseh (2 Kings xxi. 16), or an invader like Sennacherib or Nebuchadnezzar, is not clear. It is, however, so constructed as to be an appropriate expression of pious feeling to the church in various emergencies.

7 Or, 'grind;' 'crush.'

8 Whatever powers any creatures possess must be derived from the Creator, and must therefore belong to him in perfection.

9 Or, 'the nations.' The antithesis is not between Israel and the Gentiles, but between entire nations and individual offenders. This favours the supposition that the psalm refers to the Chaldean invader, by whom God chastised 'nations,' and who is thus warned to beware of punishment.

10 And that therefore men who frame plans of their own have no power to accomplish their purposes without or against his will.

11 The apparent disturbance of the Divine administration shall cease, and justice shall openly resume its functions; the righteous following in its train, when it returns in triumph.

- 16 ^k Who will rise up for me against the evildoers?
Or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?
17 ^l Unless the LORD had been my help,—my soul had almost ^m dwelt in silence.¹
18 When I said, ⁿ My foot slippeth;—thy mercy, O LORD, held me up.
19 In the multitude of my thoughts² within me—thy comforts delight my soul.
20 Shall ^o the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee,
Which ^p frameth mischief by a law?³
21 ^q They gather themselves together against the soul of the righteous,
And ^r condemn the innocent blood.
22 But the LORD is ^s my defence;—and my God is ^t the rock of my refuge.
23 And ^u he shall bring upon them their own iniquity,
And shall ^v cut them off in their own wickedness;
Yea, the LORD our God shall cut them off.

PSALM XCV. 4

- 1 OH come let us sing unto the LORD:
^y Let us make a joyful noise to ^z the rock of our salvation.
2 Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving,
And make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.
3 For ^a the LORD is a great God,—and ^b a great King ^c above all gods.
4 In his hand are the deep places of the earth:—the strength⁵ of the hills is his also.
5 ^d The sea is his, and he made it:—and his hands formed the dry land.
6 Oh come, let us worship and bow down:
Let ^e us kneel before the LORD our maker.
7 For he is our God;
And ^f we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand.⁶
^g To-day if ye will hear his voice,⁷
8 ^h Harden not your heart, ⁱ as in the provocation,
And as in the day of temptation⁸ in the wilderness:
9 When ^j your fathers tempted me,—proved me, and ^k saw my work.
10 ^m Forty years long was I ⁿ grieved with this generation,
And said, It is a people that do err in their heart,
And they have not known my ways:
11 Unto whom ^o I swore in my wrath—that they should not enter into ^p my rest.

PSALM XCVI. 9

- 1 OH ^q sing unto the LORD a new song:¹⁰—sing unto the LORD, all the earth.
2 Sing unto the LORD, bless his name;—^r show forth his salvation from day to day.
3 Declare his glory among the heathen,—his wonders among all people.
4 For ^s the LORD is great, and ^t greatly to be praised:
^u He is to be feared above all gods.
5 For ^v all the gods of the nations are idols;¹¹—^y but the LORD made the heavens.
6 Honour and majesty are before him:—strength and ^z beauty are in his sanctuary.
7 ^a Give unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the people,
Give unto the LORD glory and strength.
8 Give unto the LORD the glory due unto his name:
^b Bring an offering, and come into his courts.
9 Oh worship the LORD ^c in the beauty of holiness:¹²—fear before him, all the earth.

3 This expression is singularly applicable to the conduct of tyrannical governments in issuing persecuting edicts against the church of God.

4 Psalms xciv.—c. appear to form a series, composed for public service on some great festival. Psalm xciv. is introductory; inviting all to worship Jehovah (vers. 1, 2), on the grounds of his creation of us and covenant with us (3—7); and warning against such unbelieving neglect of him as had cost a whole generation the loss of Canaan (8—11). Though Heb. iv. 7 may be understood to mention David only as the chief author of the book of Psalms, yet the connection makes it more likely that the apostle intended to name him as the writer of this psalm; and, if so, probably of the whole series from Ps. xciv. to Ps. c.

5 Perhaps, 'the treasures,' or, 'the heights of the hills.'

6 Whom he leads and provides for.

7 The following verses are made more emphatic by being spoken in the person of God himself.

8 Or rather, 'Harden not your heart, as at Meribah, as in the day of Massah,' etc. See Exod. xvii. 7.

9 After the introduction in Ps. xciv., Jehovah is presented in Psalm xcvi. as the only object of universal worship, and all nations and all nature are summoned to acknowledge his supremacy and rejoice in the display of his bounty and justice. This psalm is a revised edition of part of David's ode in 1 Chron. xvi. It forms a pair with Ps. xcvi., corresponding to another pair, Ps. xcvi., xcix. In all these psalms there is a prophetic anticipation (recognised by the ancient Jews) of the universal and blessed reign of Christ.

10 Celebrating new displays of God's perfections.

11 Properly, 'things of nought;' nothings. See Jer. xiv. 14.

12 See note on Ps. xxix. 2.

- 10 Say among the heathen that ^d the LORD reigneth :
The world also shall be established that it shall not be moved :
^c He shall judge the people righteously.
- 11 ^f Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad ;
^g Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof.
- 12 ^h Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein :
- 13 Then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the LORD :
ⁱ For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth :
^k He shall judge the world with righteousness,—and the people with his truth.

PSALM XCVII.¹

- 1 THE ^l LORD reigneth ; let the earth rejoice ;
Let the multitude of ^m isles² be glad thereof.
- 2 ⁿ Clouds and darkness are round about him :
^o Righteousness and judgment are the habitation³ [or, establishment] of his throne.
- 3 ^p A fire goeth before him,—and burneth up his enemies round about.
- 4 ^q His lightnings enlightened the world :—the earth saw, and trembled.
- 5 ^r The hills melted like wax at the presence of the LORD,
At the presence of ^s the Lord of the whole earth.
- 6 ^t The heavens declare his righteousness,—and all the people see his glory.
- 7 ^u Confounded be all they that serve graven images,
That boast themselves of idols :—^x worship him, all ye gods.⁴
- 8 ^y Zion heard, and was glad ;
And the daughters of Judah rejoiced because of thy judgments, O LORD.
- 9 For thou, LORD, art ^z high above all the earth :—^a thou art exalted far above all gods.
- 10 Ye that love the LORD, ^b hate evil :
^c He preserveth the souls of his saints ;
^d He delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked.
- 11 ^e Light is sown⁵ for the righteous,—and gladness for the upright in heart.
- 12 ^f Rejoice in the LORD, ye righteous ;
And ^g give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness.

PSALM XCVIII.

A Psalm. 6

- 1 OH ^h sing unto the LORD a new song ;—for ⁱ he hath done marvellous things :
^k His right hand, and his holy arm,—hath gotten him the victory.⁷
- 2 ^l The LORD hath made known his salvation :
^m His righteousness hath he openly showed in the sight of the heathen.
- 3 He hath ⁿ remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel :
^o All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.⁸
- 4 ^p Make a joyful noise unto the LORD, all the earth :
Make a loud noise, and rejoice, and sing praise.
- 5 Sing unto the LORD ^q with the harp ;—with the harp, and the voice of a psalm.
- 6 ^r With trumpets and sound of cornet
Make a joyful noise before the LORD, ^s the King.
- 7 ^t Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof ;
The world, and they that dwell therein.
- 8 Let the floods ^u clap their hands :
- 9 Let the hills be joyful together before the LORD ;

¹ Psalm xcvii. exhibits the reign of Jehovah as a reason for universal joy (ver. 1) : for though his power is terrible to his enemies (2—5), confounding idols and their worshippers (6, 7), it gives happiness to the godly (8, 9). The psalm closes with an exhortation to hate all sin, and an assurance of future blessedness to those who love Jehovah (10—12).

² The regions of the Gentile world. See Gen. x. 5.

³ See note on Ps. lxxxix. 14.

⁴ That is, 'heathen gods.' Although the deities of the heathen have no real existence, they are often poetically described in Scripture as if they had, and represented as bowing down before the majesty of Jehovah. See Numb. xxxiii. 4 ; Isa. xlvi. 1.

⁶ See note on Ps. xcv. This psalm is parallel to Ps. xvi., which it closely resembles in the beginning and end. Its subject is the salvation which Jehovah has achieved. This is represented as a cause of praise and joy for his people Israel and for the whole world, and evidently includes the blessings which the gospel confers.

⁷ Or, 'has wrought salvation for him.'

⁸ See Isa. lii. 10, where the same words are used to predict the glorious redemption of mankind by Christ from the penalties and power of sin.

PSALM XCIX.¹

- 1 THE * LORD reigneth;—let the people tremble :
 * He sitteth between the ^z cherubim;—let the earth be moved.
- 2 * The LORD is great in Zion;—and he is ^b high above all the people.
- 3 Let them praise ^c thy great and terrible name;—^d for it is holy.²
- 4 * The King's strength also loveth judgment;³—thou dost establish equity, Thou executest judgment and righteousness in Jacob.
- 5 ^f Exalt ye the LORD our God,—and worship at ^g his footstool;—for ^h he is holy.
- 6 * Moses and Aaron among his priests,⁴
 And Samuel among them that call upon his name;⁵
 They ^k called upon the LORD, and he answered them.
- 7 * He spake unto them in the cloudy pillar:
 They kept his testimonies,—and the ordinance that he gave them.
- 8 Thou answeredst them, O LORD our God:—^m thou wast a God that forgavest them, Though ⁿ thou tookest vengeance of their inventions.
- 9 * Exalt the LORD our God,—and worship at ^p his holy hill;
 For ^q the LORD our God is holy.

PSALM C.

^r A Psalm of praise⁶ [or, thanksgiving].

- 1 MAKE * a joyful noise unto the LORD, all ye lands.
- 2 * Serve the LORD with gladness:—come before his presence with singing.
- 3 * Know ye that the LORD he is God;
 * It is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves;
 * We are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.
- 4 ^z Enter into his gates with thanksgiving,—and into his courts with praise:
 * Be thankful unto him, and ^b bless his name.
- 5 * For the LORD is good; ^d his mercy is everlasting;
 And ^e his truth endureth to all generations.

PSALM CI.

A Psalm of David.⁷

- 1 * I WILL sing of mercy and judgment:—^g unto thee, O LORD. will I sing.
- 2 I will ^h behave myself wisely in a perfect⁸ way.
 Oh when wilt thou come unto me?⁹
 I will ⁱ walk within my house with a perfect heart.
- 3 ^k I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes:
 * I hate the work of them ^m that turn aside;—it shall not cleave to me.
- 4 * A froward heart shall depart from me:—I will not ^o know¹⁰ a wicked person.
- 5 Whoso ^p privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I cut off:
 * Him that hath an high look and a proud heart will not I suffer.
- 6 Mine eyes shall be upon the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with me:
 He that walketh in a perfect way [or, perfect in the way^r], he shall serve me.
- 7 He that worketh deceit shall not dwell within my house:
 He that telleth lies shall not tarry in my sight.
- 8 I will ^s early destroy all the wicked of the land;
 That I may cut off all wicked doers ^t from the city of the LORD.

1 Psalm xcix. is parallel to Psa. xcvii., though it is characterized by a greater nationality of tone. Psalms xcv.—xcviii. represent Jehovah chiefly as the God and Saviour of all mankind: this celebrates his peculiar glory in his covenant relation as the God of Israel. It dwells upon the high religious privileges of the Hebrews in possessing the ark, with the mercy-seat and the sanctuary; and in enjoying Divine guidance, legislation, inspiration, and government. It should be compared with Rom. ix. 4, 5. The whole is, of course, applicable in a more spiritual sense to the church of Christ.

2 The final clauses of vers. 3, 5, 9 may have been responses, sung by a separate chorus.

3 God's moral perfections regulate the exercise of all his attributes.

4 The word 'priest' is applied to Moses probably in the sense in which it is used in 2 Sam. viii. 18, where it is rendered 'chief rulers' or 'princes.'

5 That is, probably with intercessory prayers for the people. See 1 Sam. vii. 9; xii. 23.

6 See note on Psa. xcv. Psalm c., as the close of the series, resembles in part Psa. xcv., and invites all men cheerfully to submit to, trust in, and adore Jehovah as their God. It thus kept before the minds of ancient believers the future unlimited extension of the church.

7 Psalm ci. was probably composed by David, when he ascended the throne of Israel, as a profession of the principles on which he designed to govern the people whom God had entrusted to him.

8 See note on Job i. 1.

9 Comp. Exod. xx. 24, from which it appears that one reason why David desired to have the outward symbols of Jehovah's presence was, that he might be blessed in his efforts to establish a just and holy government.

10 See note on Psa. i. 6. The clause may be rendered, 'I will not know evil.'

PSALM CII. 1—CIII. 2.

PSALM CII.

A Prayer of [or, for] the afflicted, "when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the LORD.¹

- 1 HEAR my prayer, O LORD,—and let my cry ^a come unto thee.
- 2 ^y Hide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble;
^z Incline thine ear unto me:—in the day when I call answer me speedily.
- 3 ^a For my days are consumed like smoke,
And ^b my bones are burned as an hearth.²
- 4 My heart is smitten, and ^c withered like grass:—^d so that I forget to eat my bread.
- 5 By reason of the voice of my groaning—^e my bones cleave to my skin.
- 6 ^f I am like ^g a pelican of the wilderness:—I am like an owl of the desert.³
- 7 I ^h watch,⁴ and am as a sparrow ⁱ alone upon the house top.
- 8 ^k Mine enemies reproach me all the day;
And they that are ^l mad against me are ^m sworn⁵ against me.
- 9 For I have eaten ashes⁶ like bread,—and ⁿ mingled my drink with weeping,
- 10 ^o Because of thine indignation and thy wrath:
For ^p thou hast lifted⁷ me up, and cast me down.
- 11 ^q My days are like a shadow that declineth;⁸ and ^r I am withered like grass.
- 12 But ^s thou, O LORD, shalt endure for ever;
And ^t thy remembrance unto all generations.
- 13 Thou shalt arise, and ^u have mercy upon Zion:
For the time to favour her, yea, the ^x set⁹ time, is come.
- 14 For thy servants take pleasure in ^y her stones,—and favour the dust¹⁰ thereof.
- 15 So the heathen shall ^z fear the name of the LORD,
And all the kings of the earth thy glory.
- 16 ^a When the LORD shall build up Zion,—^b he shall appear in his glory.
- 17 ^c He will regard the prayer of the destitute,—and ^d not despise their prayer.
- 18 This shall be ^e written for the generation to come:¹¹
And ^f the people which shall be created shall praise the LORD.
- 19 For he hath ^g looked down from ^h the height of his sanctuary;
From heaven did the LORD behold the earth;
- 20 ⁱ To hear the groaning of the prisoner;—to loose those that are appointed to death:
- 21 To ^k declare the name of the LORD in Zion,—and his praise in Jerusalem;
- 22 ^l When the people are gathered together,—and the kingdoms, to serve the LORD.
- 23 He weakened my strength in the way;—he ^m shortened my days.
- 24 ⁿ I said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days:
^o Thy years are throughout all generations.
- 25 ^p Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth:
And the heavens are the work of thy hands.
- 26 ^q They shall perish, but ^r thou shalt endure:
Yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment;
As a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed:
- 27 But ^s thou art the same,—and ^t thy years shall have no end.¹²
- 28 ^u The children of thy servants shall continue,
And ^x their seed shall be established before thee.

1 Psalm cii. appears to have been composed towards the close of the captivity in Babylon (see vers. 14—18). Its superscription indicates its general purport. Far from their native land, and exposed to the insults of their enemies, the psalmist and his people pine away under the displeasure of God (vers. 1—11). But the time of redemption is drawing nigh: the Lord is about to rebuild Zion, and the kings of the heathen are to be converted to God (12—22). Yet present afflictions again depress the spirit of the people, till they remember the unchangeable power and faithfulness of the Eternal (23—28). It is quite unknown who the writer was.

2 Or, 'like a firebrand.' All my bodily vigour is gone.

3 A frequenter of solitary places; referring probably to the melancholy of loneliness.

4 That is, 'I am sleepless through anxiety.'

5 Or, 'swear by me': i. e. they refer to me as an example of the evil they imprecate. Comp. Jer. xxix. 22.

6 'Ashes' are put for 'grief,' of which they were the outward token.

7 Or, 'Thou hast taken me up;' i. e. as a whirlwind takes anything up only to dash it to the ground with the greater violence.

8 Or, 'lengthened shadow;' indicating the close of day.

9 See Jer. xxv. 11; xxix. 10; Dan. ix. 2.

10 That is, the ruins. An increase of love to God's house and worship is a happy token of the near approach of seasons of Divine manifestation in the church.

11 Posterity shall be taught to trust and honour God by the records of his mercy and faithfulness.

12 Vers. 25—28 are quoted in Heb. i. 10—12, with express application to our Lord Jesus Christ; and they form one of the plain proofs of his supreme Deity, involving eternity and immutability.

13 In Psalm ciii. the psalmist, full of grateful joy, stirs up his whole soul to praise Jehovah for great personal

- 3 ^z Who forgiveth all thine iniquities;—who ^a healeth all thy diseases;
 4 Who ^b redeemeth thy life from destruction;
^c Who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies;
 5 Who ^d satisfieth thy mouth¹ with good things;
 So that ^e thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.²
 6 ^f The LORD executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed.
 7 ^g He made known his ways unto Moses,—his acts unto the children of Israel.
 8 ^h The LORD is merciful and gracious,—ⁱ slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.
 9 ^k He will not always chide:—neither will he keep his anger for ever.
 10 ^l He hath not dealt with us after our sins;
 Nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.
 11 ^m For as the heaven is high above the earth,³
 So great is his mercy toward them that fear him.
 12 As far as the east is from the west,
 So far hath he ⁿ removed our transgressions from us.
 13 ^o Like as a father pitieth his children,—so the LORD pitieth ^p them that fear him.
 14 For he knoweth our frame;⁴—^q he remembereth that we are ^r dust.
 15 As for man, ^s his days are as grass:⁵—^t as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.
 16 For ^u the wind passeth over it, and it is gone;
 And ^v the place thereof shall know it no more.
 17 But ^w the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him,
 And ^x his righteousness ^a unto children's children;⁶
 18 ^b To such as keep his covenant,
 And to those that ^c remember his commandments to do them.
 19 The LORD hath prepared his ^d throne in the heavens;
 And ^e his kingdom ruleth over all.
 20 ^f Bless the LORD, ye his angels, that excel in strength,
 That ^g do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word.
 21 Bless ye the LORD, all ye ^h his hosts;—ⁱ ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure.
 22 ^k Bless the LORD, all his works—in all places of his dominion:
^l Bless the LORD, O my soul.

benefits (vers. 1—5), regarding them as a particular manifestation of the Divine compassion, care, and forgiving love towards all God's people (6—18), for which not men only, but angels and all his works are called upon to praise him (19—22). This psalm has been supposed to be a thanksgiving of David for recovery from sickness (3—5); but it is so general in its language, and so evangelical in its tone, that it has served to express the grateful devotion of the pious in every age.

1 Heb., 'ornament;' meaning either 'thy bloom,' and answering to 'thy youth;' or 'thy soul,' or 'life,' like 'glory' in Ps. lviii. 8.

2 The eagle retains its vigour to a very old age.

3 God's mercy to them that fear him is infinite (ver. 11); his forgiveness is complete (ver. 12). The expression 'to them that fear him' is emphatically repeated, to remind us that it is only to the penitent believer that God's fatherly mercy becomes beneficial.

4 However severe God's chastisements may be, we may be sure that he both knows and remembers our weakness, and will apportion to it his discipline and his grace.

5 In this beautiful figure, suggested perhaps by Ps. xc. 5, 6, the description of man's frailty is carried to the highest point, so as to be most forcibly contrasted with God's everlasting mercy (vers. 17, 18). For the same purpose it is dwelt upon by Isaiah (ch. xl. 6—8).

6 Agreeably to the promise made in the second commandment. But this verse and the following show that these blessings can be enjoyed only in connection with personal holiness. See Exod. xx. 5, 6; Deut. vii. 9, 10.

7 Psalm civ. is a hymn of praise to Jehovah as the supreme and almighty Creator of all things. In language of the richest poetical beauty it recounts the six days' works (Gen. i.), viewed as perpetually prolonged in the preservation of all: vers. 2—5, referring to the first and second days; 6—18, to the third; 19—23, to the fourth; and 24—30, to the fifth and sixth. It closes appropriately by celebrating God's lasting glory and delight in his works, and his power to destroy what he has made (31, 32); by expressions of gratitude and confidence (33, 34), and a prayer that his creation may no more be defiled by the presence of sin (35). The great object of the psalm is thus brought out, and the God of nature is shown to be also the God of holiness and of grace. Its date and authorship are quite undetermined. Some suppose that this psalm was intended for two choirs; one addressing itself to Jehovah, the other speaking of him.

8 The psalmist poetically represents the sky as a canopy, resting on pillars or beams placed around the horizon, in the waters of a great circumambient sea.

9 Rather, 'Who maketh winds his messengers, flaming fire his ministers.' The Hebrew words for 'angels' and 'spirits' have double meanings; the former denoting also messengers, the latter also winds. The psalmist here speaks of the subtle but powerful agents, wind and fire, as created by God and employed to execute his will. And in perfect accordance with this the verse is applied, in Heb. i. 7, to angels, whose inferiority to our Lord Jesus

- 5 ^y Who laid the foundations of the earth,—^z that it should not be removed for ever.
- 6 ^a Thou coveredst it with the deep as with a garment :
The waters stood above the mountains.
- 7 ^b At thy rebuke they fled ;—at the voice of thy thunder they hasted away.
- 8 ^c They go up by the mountains ; they go down by the valleys
Unto ^d the place which thou hast founded for them.
- 9 ^e Thou hast set a bound that they may not pass over ;
^f That they turn not again to cover the earth.
- 10 He sendeth the springs into the valleys,—which run among the hills.
- 11 They give drink to every beast of the field :—the wild asses quench their thirst.
- 12 By them shall the fowls of the heaven have their habitation,
Which sing among the branches.
- 13 ^g He watereth the hills from his chambers :
^h The earth is satisfied ¹ with ⁱ the fruit of thy works.
- 14 ^k He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle,—and herb for the service of man :
That he may bring forth ^l food out of the earth ;
- 15 And ^m wine that maketh glad the heart of man,—and oil to make his face to shine,²
And bread which strengtheneth man's heart.
- 16 The trees of the LORD are full of sap ;³
The cedars of Lebanon, ⁿ which he hath planted ;
- 17 Where the birds make their nests :
As for the stork, the fir⁴ trees are her house.
- 18 The high hills are a refuge for ^o the wild goats ;
And the rocks for ^p the conies.⁵
- 19 ^q He appointed the moon for seasons :—the sun ^r knoweth his going down.
- 20 ^s Thou makest darkness, and it is night :
Wherein all the beasts of the forest do creep forth.
- 21 'The young lions roar after their prey,—and ^u seek their meat from God.
- 22 The sun ariseth, they gather themselves together,
And lay them down in their dens.
- 23 Man goeth forth unto ^x his work and to his labour until the evening.
- 24 ^y O LORD, how manifold are thy works !
^z In wisdom hast thou made them all :—^a the earth is full of thy riches.
- 25 ^b So is this great and wide sea,
Wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great ^c beasts.
- 26 There go the ships :
There is that ^d leviathan,⁶ whom thou hast made to play therein.
- 27 ^e These wait all upon thee ;—that thou mayest give them their meat in due season.
- 28 That thou⁷ givest them they gather :
Thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good.
- 29 ^f Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled :
^g Thou takest away their breath, they die, and ^h return to their dust.
- 30 ⁱ Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created :
And thou renewest the face of the earth.
- 31 The glory of the LORD shall endure for ever :
The LORD ^k shall rejoice in his works.
- 32 He looketh on the earth, and it ^l trembleth :
^m He toucheth the hills, and they smoke.
- 33 ⁿ I will sing unto the LORD as long as I live :
I will sing praise to my God while I have my being.
- 34 My meditation of him shall be sweet :—^o I will be glad in the LORD.
- 35 Let ^p the sinners be consumed out of the earth,—and let the wicked be no more.
^q Bless thou the LORD, O my soul. Praise ye the LORD.

Christ is shown by the fact that they are ranked as messengers with these subordinate physical agencies.

1 That is, 'supplied with the products of thy power.'

2 Or, 'to make his face to shine more than oil ;' referring to the animation which wine gives to the face.

3 Rather, 'are fully supplied ;' i. e. with moisture. The 'trees of the Lord—which he hath planted,' are indigenous trees, which without human culture excel in loftiness, fruitfulness, or beauty ; and thus bear the strongest impress of his care. So in Psa. lxxx. 10, the Hebrew is 'cedars of God.'

4 Rather, 'cypress.' The stork builds in high places.

5 See note on Lev. xi. 5. All parts of the inanimate creation contribute to the comfort of God's living creatures.

6 See note on Job xli. 1.

7 Rather, 'Thou givest to what, they gather ;' meaning not only that they gather what God gives, but also that God gives all that they gather.

PSALM CV.¹

- 1 OH ^r give thanks unto the LORD;—call upon his name :
^s Make known his deeds among the people.²
- 2 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him:—^t talk ye of all his wondrous works.
- 3 ^u Glory³ ye in his holy name:—let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD :
- 4 ^x Seek the LORD, and his strength:—^y seek his face evermore.
- 5 ^z Remember his marvellous works that he hath done ;
 His wonders, and ^a the judgments of his mouth ;⁴
- 6 O ye seed of Abraham his servant,—ye children of Jacob his chosen.
- 7 ^b He is the LORD our God:—^c his judgments are in all the earth.⁵
- 8 He hath ^d remembered his covenant for ever,
 The word which he commanded to a thousand generations.
- 9 ^e Which covenant he made with Abraham,—and his oath unto Isaac ;
- 10 And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law,
 And to Israel for ^f an everlasting covenant :
- 11 Saying, ^g Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan,—the lot of your inheritance.
- 12 ^h When there were but a few men in number ;⁶—yea, ⁱ very few, and strangers in it.
- 13 When they went from one nation to another,—from one kingdom to another people ;
- 14 ^k He suffered no man to do them wrong:—yea, ^l he reprov'd kings⁷ for their sakes ;
- 15 Saying, ^m Touch not mine anointed,—and do ⁿ my prophets no harm.
- 16 Moreover ^o he called for a famine upon the land :
^p He brake the whole ^q staff of bread.
- 17 ^r He sent a man before them, even Joseph,—who ^s was sold for a servant :
 18 ^t Whose feet they hurt with fetters:—he was laid in iron :
 19 Until the time that his word⁸ came:—^u the word of the LORD tried him.
- 20 ^x The king sent and loosed him ;
Even the ruler of the people, and let him go free.
- 21 ^y He made him lord of his house,—and ruler of all his substance :
 22 To bind his princes at his pleasure ;—^z and teach his senators wisdom.
- 23 ^a Israel also came into Egypt;—and Jacob sojourned ^b in the land of Ham.
- 24 And ^c he increased his people greatly ;
 And made them stronger than their enemies.
- 25 ^d He turned⁹ their heart to ^e hate his people,—to deal subtilly with his servants.
- 26 ^f He sent Moses his servant;—and Aaron ^g whom he had chosen.
- 27 ^h They showed his signs among them,—ⁱ and wonders in the land of Ham.
- 28 ^k He sent darkness, and made it dark;—and ^l they¹⁰ rebelled not against his word.
- 29 ^m He turned their waters into blood,—and slew their fish.
- 30 ⁿ Their land brought forth frogs in abundance,—in the chambers of their kings.
- 31 ^o He spake, and there came divers sorts of flies,—and lice in all their coasts.
- 32 ^p He gave them hail for rain,—and flaming fire in their land.
- 33 ^q He smote their vines also and their fig trees;—and brake the trees of their coasts.
- 34 ^r He spake, and the locusts came,—and caterpillars,¹¹ and that without number,
- 35 And did eat up all the herbs in their land,—and devoured the fruit of their ground.
- 36 ^s He smote also all the firstborn in their land,—^t the chief of all their strength.
- 37 ^u He brought them forth also with silver and gold :

1 Psalms cv., cvi. form a pair, probably composed during or after the exile in Babylon, and derived in part from the old sanctuary service, in which the beginning of Psa. cv. and the end of Psa. cvi. are to be found. See 1 Chron. xvi. 8—22, 34—36. The former psalm (cv.) gratefully records Jehovah's covenant with Abraham, and his protection of the people in Egypt, with their deliverance and settlement in Canaan. The latter (cvi.) humbly confesses the ungrateful returns which Israel had made, in Egypt, at the Red Sea, at various times in the desert, and since they had been settled in Canaan; acknowledges the justice of Divine punishments, and concludes with a prayer for deliverance. As Psa. cvi. is the last psalm of this division, its doxology marks the close of the fourth book.

2 Rather, 'peoples,' the nations of the world.

3 Let it be your boast and joy that you have an interest in the favour of One so glorious and mighty, and ever seek to retain his favour and protection.

4 His judicial sentences, as well as his legislative enactments.

5 In fulfilling his covenant engagements to us, his people, God has manifested his perfections to all nations. This covenant is called (ver. 8) the 'word which he commanded;' because all God's promises imply commands. See note on Gen. vi. 18.

6 An allusion to the declaration in Gen. xxxiv. 30, and the promise in Gen. xxii. 17.

7 See Gen. xii. 17; xx. 3. The 'anointed' ones and 'prophets' (ver. 15) are the patriarchs (see Gen. xx. 7), who were admitted to confidential intercourse with God, and received direct revelations from him.

8 That is, 'Joseph's word' to his fellow-prisoners, which 'came to pass.' The next clause probably means that the word of the Lord which he spoke, by its fulfilment, vindicated Joseph's character, showing that he enjoyed the Divine favour.

9 See note on Exod. iv. 21.

10 Meaning either, as in ver. 27, Moses and Aaron, who faithfully executed God's commissions; or Pharaoh and his people, who, terrified by repeated judgments, yielded at last to God's command, and let the people go. On these plagues, comp. Exod. vii.—xii., and notes.

11 Rather, 'hairy locusts.'

- And there was not one feeble¹ person among their tribes.
 38 ^a Egypt was glad when they departed :—for the fear of them fell upon them.
 39 ^y He spread a cloud for a covering;—and fire to give light in the night.
 40 ^z The people asked, and he brought quails,
 And ^a satisfied them with the bread of heaven.
 41 ^b He opened the rock, and the waters gushed out;
 They ran in the dry places like a river.
 42 For he remembered ^c his holy promise,—and Abraham his servant.
 43 And ^d he brought forth his people with joy,—and his chosen with gladness :
 44 ^e And gave them the lands of the heathen :
 And ^f they inherited the labour² of the people ;
 45 ^g That they might observe his statutes,—and keep his laws.—Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CVI.³

- 1 PRAISE ye the LORD.
^h Oh 'give thanks unto the LORD; ^k for he is good :—for his mercy endureth for ever.
 2 ⁱ Who can utter the mighty acts of the LORD?—who can show forth all his praise ?
 3 Blessed are they that ^m keep judgment,
 And he that ⁿ doeth righteousness at ^o all times.
 4 ^p Remember me, O LORD, with the favour that thou bearest unto thy people ;
 Oh visit me with thy salvation :
 5 That I may see the good of thy chosen,
 That I may rejoice in the gladness of thy nation,
 That I may glory with thine inheritance.
 6 ^q We have sinned with our fathers,
^r We have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly.
 7 ^s Our fathers understood not thy wonders in Egypt ;
^t They remembered not the multitude of thy mercies ;
^u But provoked him at the sea, even at the Red Sea.
 8 Nevertheless he saved them ^v for his name's sake,
^x That he might make his mighty power to be known.
 9 ^y He rebuked the Red Sea also, and it was dried up :
 So ^z he led them through the depths, as through the wilderness.
 10 And he ^a saved them from the hand of him that hated them,
 And ^b redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.
 11 ^c And the waters covered their enemies :—there was not one of them left.
 12 ^d Then believed they his words ;—they sang his praise.⁴
 13 ^e They soon forgot his works ;—they waited not for his counsel :
 14 ^f But lusted⁵ exceedingly in the wilderness,—and tempted God in the desert.
 15 ^g And he gave them their request ;—but ^h sent leanness⁶ into their soul.
 16 ⁱ They envied Moses also in the camp,—and Aaron ^k the saint⁷ of the LORD.
 17 ^l The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan,—and covered the company of Abiram.
 18 ^m And a fire was kindled in their company ;⁸—the flame burned up the wicked.
 19 ⁿ They made a calf in Horeb,—and worshipped the molten image.
 20 Thus ^o they changed their glory—into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.
 21 They ^p forgot God their saviour,—which had done great things in Egypt :
 22 Wondrous works in ^q the land of Ham,—and ^r terrible things by the Red Sea.
 23 ^s Therefore he said that he would destroy them.
 Had not Moses his chosen ^t stood before him in the breach,⁹
 To turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.
 24 Yea, they despised ^u the pleasant land,¹⁰—they ^x believed not his word :
 25 ^y But murmured in their tents,—and ^z hearkened not unto the voice of the LORD.
 26 ^a Therefore he ^b lifted up his hand against them,
 To overthrow them in the wilderness :
 27 ^c To overthrow their seed also among the nations,—and to scatter them in the lands.
 28 ^d They joined themselves also unto Baal-peor,—and ate the sacrifices of the dead.¹¹

11 Some suppose this to mean lifeless gods, and refer to Ps. cxv. 4—7 ; 1 Cor. xii. 2. But the worship of deceased ancestors or heroes has always been one principal form of idolatry.

- 29 Thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions :¹
And ^e the plague brake in upon them.
- 30 ^f Then stood up Phinehas, and executed judgment :²—and so the plague was stayed.
- 31 And that was counted unto him ^g for righteousness Unto all generations for evermore.
- 32 ^h They angered him also at the waters of strife, ⁱ So that it went ill with Moses for their sakes :
- 33 ^k Because they provoked his spirit,—so that he spake unadvisedly with his lips.
- 34 ^l They did not destroy the nations,
^m Concerning whom the LORD commanded them :
- 35 ⁿ But were mingled among the heathen,—and learned their works.
- 36 And ^o they served their idols :—^p which were a snare unto them.
- 37 Yea, ^q they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto ^r devils,³
- 38 And shed innocent blood,—even the blood of their sons and of their daughters,
Whom they sacrificed unto the idols of Canaan :
And ^s the land was polluted with blood.
- 39 Thus were they ^t defiled with their own works,
And ^u went a whoring with ^x their own inventions.
- 40 Therefore ^y was the wrath of the LORD kindled against his people, Insomuch that he abhorred ^z his own inheritance.
- 41 And ^a he gave them into the hand of the heathen ;
And they that hated them ruled over them.
- 42 Their enemies also oppressed them,
And they were brought into subjection under their hand.
- 43 ^b Many times did he deliver them ;—but they provoked him with their counsel,
And were brought low for their iniquity.
- 44 Nevertheless he regarded their affliction,—when ^c he heard their cry :
- 45 ^d And he remembered for them his covenant,
And ^e repented ^f according to the multitude of his mercies.
- 46 ^g He made them also to be pitied of all those that carried them captives.
- 47 ^h Save us, O LORD our God,—and ⁱ gather us from among the heathen,
To give thanks unto thy holy name,—and to triumph in thy praise.
- 48 ^k Blessed be the LORD God of Israel—from everlasting to everlasting.
- And let all the people say, Amen.—Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CVII. 4

- 1 OH ^l give thanks unto the LORD, for ^m he is good :
For his mercy endureth for ever.
- 2 Let the redeemed of the LORD say so,
ⁿ Whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy ;
- 3 And ^o gathered them out of the lands,
From the east, and from the west,—from the north, and from the south [the sea].
- 4 They ^p wandered in ^q the wilderness in a solitary way ;—they found no city to dwell in.
- 5 Hungry and thirsty, their soul fainted in them.
- 6 ^r Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble,
And he delivered them out of their distresses.
- 7 And ^s he led them forth by the ^t right way,
That they might go to a city of habitation.⁵
- 8 ^u Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness,
And for his wonderful works to the children of men !
- 9 For ^x he satisfieth the longing soul,—and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.
- 10 Such as ^y sit in darkness⁶ and in the shadow of death,

3 See note on Deut. xxxii. 17.

4 Psalm cvii. is a regular and beautiful poem, probably composed after the return of the Jews from Babylon, and designed to celebrate the Divine mercy in all the circumstances of that auspicious event. It contains five stanzas, the first four of which successively depict with vividness and pathos the sufferings of the exile in the desert (vers. 2—9), the prisoner in his chains (10—16), the victim of deadly sickness (17—22), and the storm-tossed mariner (23—32). Each of these cries to Jehovah, and is heard ; upon which a call is made (probably by a chorus of singers) to praise him for his mercy. But all this, which was suggested perhaps by the personal experiences of some of the returned exiles, is only preparatory to the longer stanza at the close (33—42) in which God's dealings with the nation in its alternate prosperity and adversity are rapidly sketched, and the important conclusion is arrived at, that in them all may be seen 'the loving-kindness of the Lord' (43). The psalm is of inestimable value, as well to the church as to the individual believer. Comp. Rom. viii. 28.

5 That is, 'a city to dwell in ;' the Hebrew words being the same as in ver. 4.

6 The darkness of a dungeon.

- 11 Because they ^a rebelled against the words of God,
And contemned ^b the counsel of the Most High :
- 12 Therefore ^c he brought down their heart with labour ;
They fell down, and there was ^d none to help.
- 13 ^e Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble.
And he saved them out of their distresses.
- 14 ^f He brought them out of darkness and the shadow of death,
And ^g brake their bands in sunder.
- 15 ^h Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness,
And for his wonderful works to the children of men !
- 16 For he hath ⁱ broken the gates of brass,—and cut the bars of iron in sunder. ¹
- 17 Fools ^k because of their transgression,
And because of their iniquities, are afflicted.
- 18 ^l Their soul abhorreth all manner of meat ;
And they ^m draw near unto the gates of death.
- 19 ⁿ Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble,
And he saveth them out of their distresses.
- 20 ^o He sent his word, and ^p healed them,
And ^q delivered them from their destructions. ²
- 21 ^r Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness,
And for his wonderful works to the children of men !
- 22 And ^s let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving,
And ^t declare his works with rejoicing.
- 23 They that go down to the sea in ships,—that do business in great waters ;
- 24 These see the works of the LORD,—and his wonders in the deep.
- 25 For he commandeth, and ^u raiseth the stormy wind,
Which lifteth up the waves thereof.
- 26 They mount up to the heaven,—they go down again to the depths :
^v Their soul is melted because of trouble.
- 27 They reel to and fro, and ^w stagger like a drunken man,—and are at their wit's end.
- 28 ^x Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble
And he bringeth them out of their distresses.
- 29 ^y He maketh the storm a calm,—so that the waves thereof are still.
- 30 Then are they glad because they be quiet ;
So he bringeth them unto their desired haven.
- 31 ^z Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness,
And for his wonderful works to the children of men !
- 32 Let them exalt him also ^a in the congregation of the people,
And praise him in the assembly of the elders.
- 33 He ^b turneth rivers into a wilderness,—and ^c the watersprings into dry ground ;
- 34 A ^d fruitful land into barrenness, ³
For the wickedness of them that dwell therein.
- 35 ^e He turneth the wilderness into a standing water,
And dry ground into watersprings.
- 36 And ^f there he maketh the hungry to dwell,
That they may prepare a city for habitation ;
- 37 ^g And sow the fields, and plant vineyards,—which may yield fruits of increase.
- 38 ^h He blesseth them also, so that they ⁱ are multiplied greatly ;
And ^j suffereth not their cattle to decrease.
- 39 Again, ^k they are ^l minished and brought low
Through oppression, affliction, and sorrow.
- 40 ^m He poureth contempt upon princes, ⁴
And ⁿ causeth them to wander in the wilderness, where there is no way.
- 41 ^o Yet setteth he the poor on high from affliction,
And ^p maketh him families like a flock.
- 42 ^q The righteous shall see it, and rejoice :—and all ^r iniquity shall stop her mouth.
- 43 ^s Whoso is wise, and will observe these things,
Even ^t they shall understand the lovingkindness of the LORD.

Babylon. Those who are now so prosperous (vers. 35—38), are the very persons who before were in abject misery.

5 Persons the most exempt, in ordinary times, from destitution and want. National suffering must have reached a great height when it invades them.

PSALM CVIII.

A Song or Psalm of David.¹

- 1 O ^y GOD, my heart is fixed;
I will sing and give praise,—even with my glory.
- 2 ^z Awake, psaltery and harp:—I myself will awake early.
- 3 I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people:
And I will sing praises unto thee among the nations.
- 4 For thy mercy is great above the heavens:—and thy truth reacheth unto the clouds.
- 5 ^a Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens:—and thy glory above all the earth.
- 6 ^b That thy beloved may be delivered:—save with thy right hand, and answer me.
- 7 God hath spoken in his holiness; I will rejoice,
I will divide Shechem,—and mete out the valley of Succoth.
- 8 Gilead is mine; Manasseh is mine;
Ephraim also is the strength of mine head;—^c Judah is my lawgiver;
- 9 Moab is my washpot;—over Edom will I cast out my shoe;
Over Philistia will I triumph.
- 10 ^d Who will bring me into the strong city?—who will lead me into Edom?
- 11 Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off?
And wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our hosts?
- 12 Give us help from trouble:—for vain is the help of man.
- 13 ^e Through God we shall do valiantly:
For he it is that shall tread down our enemies.

PSALM CIX.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.²

- 1 HOLD ^f not thy peace, ^g O God of my praise;
- 2 For the mouth of the wicked and the mouth of the deceitful are opened ^h against me:
They have spoken against me with a lying tongue.
- 3 ⁱ They compassed me about also with words of hatred;
And fought against me ^j without a cause.
- 4 For ^k my love they are my adversaries:—^l but I give myself unto prayer.
- 5 And ^m they have rewarded me evil for good,—and hatred for my love.
- 6 Set thou a wicked man over him; ⁿ—and let ^o Satan ^p stand at his right hand.
- 7 When he shall be judged, let him be condemned:
And ^q let his prayer become sin.⁷
- 8 ^r Let his days be few;—and ^s let another take his office.
- 9 ^t Let his children be fatherless,—and his wife a widow.
- 10 ^u Let his children be continually vagabonds, and beg:
Let them seek their bread also out of their desolate places.⁸
- 11 ^v Let the extortioner catch all that he hath;—and let the strangers spoil his labour.⁹
- 12 Let there be none to extend mercy unto him:
Neither let there be any to favour his fatherless children.
- 13 ^w Let his posterity be cut off;
And in the generation following let their ^x name be blotted out.
- 14 ^y Let the iniquity of his fathers be remembered with the LORD;
And let not the sin of his mother ^z be blotted out.
- 15 Let them be ^a before the LORD continually,
That he may ^b cut off the memory of them from the earth.
- 16 Because that he remembered not to show mercy,
But persecuted the poor and needy man,
That he might even slay the ^c broken in heart.
- 17 ^d As he loved cursing, so let it come unto him:

¹ Psalm cviii. is a compilation from two others—Psa. lviii. 7—11, and lx. 5—12 (on which see notes); with a few variations to suit its immediate occasion.

² Psalm cix. contains, 1, the bitter complaint of one who suffered from undeserved calumny, ingratitude, and cruelty (vers. 1—5); 2, awful imprecations upon the person and family of the persecutor (6—20); 3, earnest petitions for Divine help, with a promise of thanksgiving (21—31). It is clear that the false and ungrateful accusations of a person in office and power gave occasion to this psalm, perhaps during the time of David's sufferings from Saul. But that the psalmist uttered these imprecations as representing the afflicted people of God, exposed to the malice of the wicked, may be inferred from the merciful and forgiving spirit which he discovered, on various occasions, towards his personal enemies. See 1 Sam. xxvi. 9—11; 2 Sam. xvi. 10, 11; xix. 22, 23. And this view of them is confirmed by the application of ver. 8 to Judas Iscariot in Acts i. 20.

³ Rather, 'they have opened.'

⁴ That is, 'in return for.'

⁵ That is, as his judge. He has been unjust to others; let him feel what injustice is. In vers. 7, 28, 31, similar judicial metaphors recur. See note on Psa. v. 10.

⁶ Rather, 'an adversary,' or 'accuser.' See Zech. iii. 1.

⁷ Let his prayer to his judges for favour be construed as an aggravation of his crime.

⁸ That is, creeping forth, in search of food, from amidst the ruins of their habitations.

⁹ See note on Psa. cv. 44.

- As he delighted not in blessing, so let it be far from him.
- 18 As he ^d clothed himself with cursing like as with his garment,
So let it ^e come into his bowels like water,—and like oil into his bones.
- 19 Let it be unto him as the garment which covereth him,
And for a girdle wherewith he is girded continually.
- 20 ^f Let this be the reward of mine adversaries from the Lord,
And of them that speak evil against my soul.
- 21 But do thou for me, O God the Lord, for thy name's sake:
Because ^g thy mercy is good, deliver thou me.
- 22 For ^h I am poor and needy,—and my heart is wounded within me.
- 23 I am gone ⁱ like the shadow when it declineth: ¹
^k I am tossed up and down ² as the locust.
- 24 My ^l knees are weak through fasting;—and ^m my flesh faileth of fatness.
- 25 ⁿ I became also ^o a reproach unto them:
When they looked upon me ^p they shook their heads.
- 26 Help me, O LORD my God:—oh save me according to thy mercy:
- 27 ^q That they may know that this is thy hand;—that thou, LORD, hast done it.
- 28 ^r Let them curse, but bless thou:
When they arise, ³ let them be ashamed;—but let ^s thy servant rejoice.
- 29 ^t Let mine adversaries be clothed with shame,
And let them cover themselves ^u with their own confusion, as with a mantle.
- 30 I will greatly praise the LORD with my mouth;
Yea, ^v I will praise him among the multitude.
- 31 For ^w he shall stand at the right hand of ^z the poor,
^a To save him from those that condemn his soul.

PSALM CX.

A Psalm of David.⁴

- 1 THE ^b LORD said unto my Lord,
Sit thou at my right hand,⁵ until I make thine enemies thy footstool.⁶
- 2 The LORD shall send ^c the rod⁷ of thy strength ^d out of Zion:
^e Rule thou in the midst of thine enemies.
- 3 ^f Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power,—^g in the beauties of holiness;
From the womb of the morning,—thou hast the dew of thy youth.⁸
- 4 ^h The LORD hath sworn, and ⁱ will not repent, ^h Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek.⁹
- 5 The Lord ^j at thy right hand
Shall strike through kings ^m in the day of his wrath.
- 6 ⁿ He shall judge among the heathen,
^o He shall fill the places with the dead bodies;
^p He shall wound the heads¹⁰ over many countries.
- 7 ^q He shall drink of the brook in the way;¹¹—^r therefore shall he ^s lift up the head.

⁴ Psalm cx. is a poem of transcendent beauty, distinguished for its bold and stirring imagery, its condensed energy, and its regular form. It consists of two parts, each beginning with a Divine proclamation addressed to the King of Zion. In the former, he is appointed universal Sovereign (ver. 1), and is assured that the power of Jehovah shall complete his conquests and multiply his subjects (2, 3). In the latter, with the sanction of an irrevocable oath, he is invested in perpetuity with the Royal Priesthood (4); and is described (in an address to Jehovah) as pursuing his victories with unwearied success (5—7). The psalm is distinctly ascribed to David by our Lord in Matt. xxii. 43; and no less distinctly claimed by Him and his apostles, without any opposition from the Jews, as referring to the Messiah. See refs. Nor can it be applied to any one but Christ; for David would have acknowledged no other superior Lord (ver. 1), nor did any one besides our Lord unite in himself the regal and sacerdotal offices. See Heb. vii.

⁵ This was the seat of highest dignity (see Matt. xx. 21), generally reserved for the heir to the throne. See refs.

⁶ See Josh. x. 24, and note. Ancient thrones were so raised as to need a footstool.

⁸ Perhaps the best rendering of this verse is as follows: 'Thy people [shall be] freewill offerings in the day of thy might, in ornaments of holiness: from the womb of the dawn to thee [shall be] the dew of thy youth.' It is probably intended to represent the cheerful service, the attractive piety, and the perpetual reproduction, in untold numbers, of the offspring and subjects of the Messiah.

⁹ For an inspired exposition of this verse as applied to our Lord, see Heb. vii. Comp. Gen. xiv. 18; Zech. vi. 19. Viewed in connection with ver. 3, it shows that the royal Conqueror, as priest, was to prepare and enable his people to make the offerings there spoken of.

¹⁰ That is, the chiefs of the nations. These descriptions of course refer to the Redeemer's spiritual conquests.

¹¹ As a conqueror refreshed by a hasty draught at a brook continues the fight and pursuit till his foes are completely subdued; so the Messiah's strength shall never fail until the last enemy is destroyed.

PSALM CXI.¹

- 1 PRAISE ye the LORD.
‘I will praise the LORD with my whole heart,
In the assembly² of the upright, and in the congregation.
- 2 ‘The works of the LORD are great,
^x Sought out of all them ^y that have pleasure therein.³
